Third Term Talk Growing as F.D.R. Maintains Silence

Many Believe He Will State Decision after Return of Welles

By RICHARD L. TURNER

Washington, Feb. 26 (AP)—Despite the agonized pleas of baffled Democrats that President Roosevelt state his attitude toward a third term, there is a strong feeling here that he will not do so until two things have happened.

The first of these is the return of Ambassador Sumner Welles from his European "mission of inquiry," and the other is the adjournment of Congress.

Devoting some second thoughts to the fact that Mr. Roosevelt did nothing to keep his name out of the coming Illinois presidential primary, certain Roosevelt supporters express the opinion that in this instance no other course was open to him.

That Illinois Incident

To have approved the entry of his name in Illinois would have been to set the third-term controversy going full blast, producing a spectacular domestic rumpus at a time when Mr. Roosevelt probably wants things at home to have the outward appearance, at least, of sweet and unbroken tranquillity.

And, to have withdrawn from the primary with anything like a definite disavowal of third term hopes would automatically have robbed any presidential peace moves of much of their force, say Roosevelt supporters.

Welles was in Rome today making the first of a series of calls which will find him conferring with all the important statesmen of Europe, in an apparent effort to clarify the terms on which a future peace might be based. The deadline for any action by the president withdrawing his name in Illinois was midnight Saturday.

Now, this opinion is, had the president acted on Saturday to declare himself out of the race, Welles would have begun his mission somewhat in the position of an ambassador without a government.

Prestige Involved

Prestige is involved, too, where Congress is concerned. A statement against a third term before adjournment would make of the New Deal just another second term administration trying to get along with a Congress that knows no future favors are to be expected.

There is not much going on in Congress, but the trade agreement act has still to be approved by the Senate and the controversy over the budget comes up with almost every appropriation bill. And, there is no telling when a situation might arise in which Mr. Roosevelt might want to exert a full and undiminished prestige.

Thus, with the international and

Britain Calls for Cut In Standard of Living

Government Announces "Drastic" Move To Defeat Germany

BY EDWIN STOUT

London, Feb. 26 (AP)—Great Britain's millions were told bluntly today that the government's plans for crushing Germany call for a "drastic" lowering of the British standard of living to turn more world profits to war.

With the government disclosing German air smashes at her all-important sealanes near home brought 128 attacks up to February 22 on "unarmed British merchant ships and fishing vessels," and with two more freighters reported sunk today, Robert S. Hudson, British secretary for overseas trade, called upon manufacturers for "heroic" exports.

"Bound To Be Drastic"

These exports, he forecast at Glasgow, would be through restriction of home consumption which is "bound to be drastic."

Highlighted also in the British determination to win the war with money were government plans to keep secret the extent of its huge stage in United States stocks. His Majesty's government is one of the biggest owners of securities traded in Wall Street.

Robert V. Grimston, treasurer of the household, said in Commons that it "is not in the public interesa" to disclose the value of securities acquired by the recent action of the government in ordering British holders of sixty selected American stocks to sell their holdings to the Bank of England. Unofficially, the total is estimated at about $100,000,000.

Mae Murray Says Son Is Prevented From Seeing Her

Objects to Permitting Albany Woman Having His Custody

Los Angeles, Feb. 26. (AP)—A militant Mae Murray testified today she was forcibly prevented from seeing her son, 13-year-old Koran David Mdivani, whose custody she wants.

The former movie star is suing her ex-husband, Prince David Mdivani for $1,000 a month with which to establish a home for the boy.

A New York court has given Bessie Cunning of Albany, N. Y., custody of Koran until Miss Murray can provide a satisfactory home for him.

Objects to Kisses on Mouth

The actress said she objected to Miss Cunning's supervision over the boy because Koran told her Bessie often kissed him on the lips.

"I never kissed Koran on the mouth," Miss Murray said, "both for hygienic reasons and because I wanted him to know his first emotional kiss from the woman he would marry.

"But he said, 'Bessie holds me and kisses me on the lips and tells me I must love her better than you because you don't kiss me on the mouth.'"

Miss Murray testified that last September she went to the Cunning home with a state trooper but that Miss Cunning scratched her face, knocked off her hat, and ejected her.

"She had me down, pounding me and saying, 'I'll kill you,'" Miss Murray testified.

Charges Plot to Sell Boy

She added that Koran told her the Cunnings had informed him she wanted to "sell" him to his father, the prince.

After the court gave the boy over to Miss Cunning, Miss Murray said, she returned to California and, in a three-hour conversation with Mdivani, unsuccessfully implored his help. Then she telephoned Koran and the boy told her, "don't you come up here, or I'll kick you."

Now ,Miss Murray said, she is living in a one-room apartment and is wholly dependent on her friends. The prince, she said, "is living in one of the highest class apartments you can obtain in California," and has a secretary, butler, chauffeur, polo ponies and grooms to care for the horses.

Mdivani testified he had contributed $5,000 to the boy's support since he and Miss Murray had been divorced.

House Votes To Make $60,000,000 Available To Keep Up Crop Control

Washington, Feb. 26 (AP) — In response to a radiogram from President Roosevelt, the House voted today to make $60,000,000 of next year's agriculture fund available immediately to keep crop control checks flowing to farmers.

Members of the House Appropriations Committee reported that the president had approved the transaction in order to replenish the regular $500,000,000 benefit payment fund which has been depleted by increased farmer compliance with crop control plans. A few minutes later they wrote the $60,000,000 into a $30,069,139 deficiency bill designed to meet emergency needs of various government agencies until July 1.

Late in the day, the House passed the measure, which now goes to the Senate.

Agreement with Senators

Committee members announced that an agreement had been reached with senators that an equal amount would be deducted from the 1941 farm appropriation bill pending before the Senate Appropriations Committee.

Secretary of Agriculture Wallace, asserting that the agriculture department had underestimated the number of farmers who currently would participate in the AAA programs, told the House committee that the transfer would not increase the total of $1,000,000,000 that would be appropriated for the two years.

He predicted, however, that it would result in a small decrease in individual payments to farmers in 1941.

While the House was considering the deficiency bill, Wallace told the Senate Appropriations Committee, which is studying the 1941 appropriation measure, that failure to include money for "parity" payments or the equivalent might interfere with control programs. Farm state legislators have talked of voting about $200,000,000 for such payments.

(Parity payments are designed to

Welles's Mission Abroad Appears To Be Progressing

FACTS ON DISCUSSION ARE KEPT A SECRET

But Welles Is Believed To Have Sought Views on Peace Move

By CHARLES H. GUPTILL

Rome, Feb. 26. (AP)—Undersecretary of State Sumner Welles's "mission of inquiry" in Europe appeared today to have met considerable initial success in conferences with Premier Mussolini and Foreign Minister Count Galeazzo Ciano.

Skepticism with which authoritative Italians originally greeted announcement of the American envoy's visit melted noticeably after his hour and a quarter talk with Ciano this morning and still more after he stayed with Mussolini an hour this afternoon.

Accompanied by Phillips

Accompanied on both visits by United States Ambassador William Phillips, Welles made the most of his first day in Rome and prepared to depart tomorrow at midnight for Berlin, the next objective on his swing through major European capitals surveying the war situation for President Roosevelt.

Another newly arrived American envoy, Myron C. Taylor, the president's personal representative to Pope Pius XII, prepared for his first audience with the Pontiff tomorrow at 10:30 a. m. (4:30 a. m. EST).

Welles demonstrated his own satisfaction with his call on Ciano by breaking his vow of silence to observe that the meeting had been "very gratifying and helpful."

Ciano reported on it immediately to his father-in-law and the Fascist press with one accord took a sudden interest in Welles's activities after virtually ignoring his visit.

Facts Kept Secret

The subject of the talks was guarded carefully but foreign observers believed they must have ex-

Insurance Co. Is Refused a Permit To Examine Body

Loses Fight To Prove Beckley Doctor Died Natural Death

Richmond, Va., Feb. 26 (AP)—The Fourth U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals today reversed a district court judgment that woul permit the Mutual Life Insurance Company of New York to perform an autopsy on the body of a Beckley, W. Va., physician.

The execution of the order granting the autopsy was stayed pending the appeal.

The physician, Dr. John H. McCulloh, died after a fall down the stairs of the Black Knight Country Club near Beckley, March 18, 1939. He carried a $50,000 policy with the company.

The Circuit Court held that "two weeks elapsed after the accident and before the insurer demanded an autopsy" and said:

No evidence whatever was produced to show that the insured was afflicted with disease at the time of his accident. The only fair inference is that the insurer has no basis for its assertion that a disease was a contributing cause of death, but only a hope that in the course of the investigation something might be revealed that will relieve it from the double liability."

The insurance company, in addition to the autopsy, had sought a declaratory judgment from the district court holding the insurer not liable to double indemnity if the death of the physician was found not to have been the result of "bodily injuries affected solely through external, violent and accidental means."

Koivisto Islands Are Abandoned by Finnish Defenders

Action Leaves Entrance to Viipuri Bay Unguarded

IMPORTANT DEFENSES IN HANDS OF ENEMY

Russians only a Few Miles from Immediate Objective

Moscow, Feb. 27 (Tuesday)—(AP)—The Soviet high command announced today that more than 5,000,000 cartridges and 10,000 shells had been captured from retreating Finns in the Koivisto fo .ress area.

By THOMAS F. HAWKINS

Helsinki, Feb. 27.—(Tuesday)—(AP)—Koivisto Islands, from which Finnish guns once guarded the eastern end of the Gulf of Finland and the western end of Finland's Mannerheim Line, now are in Soviet Russian hands, clearing away one more barrier to the Red army drive on Viipuri.

(Editor's note: This dispatch was delayed five hours in transmission by worsening communications.)

The fall of Finland's "Gibraltar" brings more definitely than before a concentration of the front in a sector before Viipuri.

It is likely the Koivisto guns were silenced some days ago for they have not been mentioned in recent Finnish communiques. Last night's announcement of the withdrawal of Finnish forces from the islands did not say how it was carried out, but those who could probably headed across the ice for the mainland since the Russians previously had occupied Koivisto village.

Finns Admit Serious Loss

The Finns made no effort to minimize the seriousness of the withdrawal, since the fort helped guard the approaches to Viipuri harbor.

The main thing now was that further intensification of the battle for Viipuri could be expected on the western half of the isthmus, where the Finns have shortened and straightened their front while the Russian lines have broadened.

To take the city by a frontal attack, the Red army must crash through this Finnish "second line," stretching from Kaislahti to Lake Muola.

Military informants say the Finns still hold the central section of their first line defenses as well as the eastern half of the isthmus to Taipale on Lake Ladoga.

Pointing to the "exacting toll" taken from the Russian forces in Sunday's attacks, one Finnish officer said that is the basis of Finland's fight against far more numerous forces. To defend and to fall back gradually whenever necessary to save men explained the withdrawal from the first line, he said.

He added this procedure could go on for months. Even if the Soviets take deserted Viipuri they face a new series of defenses if they choose to carry on the drive toward Helsinki.

Arctic Blockade of German-Russian Sea Traffic Brings First Results to British and French

Bergen, Norway, Feb. 26 (AP) — Allied warships, which only last week began an Arctic blockade to halt German-Russian sea traffic along Norway's irregular coast, were reported tonight to have sunk two German vessels in action near the Finnish shore.

Reports from Vardoe, fifty miles northwest of Finland's Petsamo Fjord, now occupied by Soviet forces, did not say whether the sunken German vessels were warships or freighters.

Nor was it clear whether the sinkings had taken place within Norwegian territorial waters — which would create within ten days a second incident threatening Norway's neutral status. Norway replied only yesterday to a British memorandum in the case of the German ship Altmark — boarded Feb. 16 at Gjossingfjord by British sailors who took off 299 British captives.

German Steamer Sinks

The 4,354-ton German steamer Orizaba, which ran aground today at Skjervoy, near Hammerfest, 175 miles west of Vardoe, was reported tonight to have sunk. There was no indication that war action had figured in her sinking.

A ship passing the vicinity said there was no sign of the Orizaba except floating debris. The crew was reported saved.

Reported from Norway

The attacks today were reported from the northernmost tip of Norway, where a British naval detachment of unknown size was known to have been patrolling last week. Press reports said French warships had joined the patrol.

The warships took up their station there after the British and French had expressed dissatisfaction with Norway's "ineffective" neutrality in permitting German

Judge Manton To Start Jail Term Within Few Days

Convicted Jurist Refused a Review of Sensational Case

By WILLIAM S. WHITE

New York, Feb. 26 (AP)—Martin Thomas Manton, who a year ago occupied the highest and most venerated judicial post in the nation short of the Supreme Court itself, probably will enter prison within a week to serve a two-year term for selling his integrity for cash.

The former senior judge of the U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals here was convicted last June 3—specifically of conspiracy to obstruct justice before his own bench—and today in Washington the Supreme Court sealed his extraordinary fall, refusing a review of his case.

It was a fall without a parallel in the last three centuries of the history of British or American jurisprudence, no English-speaking judge of such rank having eben similarly stigmatized since Francis Bacon, lord chancellor of England, was deprived of office more than 300 years ago.

Decisions Influenced

In the trial the government offered evidence that Manton's decisions had been infuenced by direct and indirect bribes running into thousands upon thousands of dollars.

A spare, austere man approaching 60, the veteran judge fought hard all the way. Once convicted, he stood, faintly grimacing, before Federal Judge W. Calvin Chesnut to

Morgenthau Says Allies Can Pay Cash for Planes

Secretary Believes They Can Produce Contemplated Billion

Washington, Feb. 26 (AP)—Treasury Secretary Morgenthau expressed belief today that the Allies have ample resources to pay cash for their contemplated $1,000,000,000 airplane and other military purchasing in this country.

A few hours before the secretary gave his views to a press conference he had conferred with Washington representatives of the Allied purchasing mission.

In response to questions, Morgenthau reiterated previous assertions that the prices being charged by American airplane manufacturers "were reasonable" and that no tax problems were impeding airplane production or sales.

Asked about a recent resolution of the advisory council to the Federal Reserve Board opposing further treasury purchases of foreign silver, the secretary declined to express an opinion.

When asked about a recent statement of Federal Reserve Chairman Marriner S. Eccles that the treasury had approximately $4,000,000,000 of virtually idle funds that could be spent for relief, Morgenthau suggested that Eccles and others holding such views should read President Roosevelt's recent budget message.

He explained that the president had identified the supposedly idle funds of the treasury—including $2,000,000,000 in the stabilization fund, $2,000,000,000 in cash and other liquid assets—as money to be used for reduction of the federal debt.

Mother Seton Likely To Be First American Born To Become a Saint

Emmitsburg, Md., Feb. 26 (AP) — The Sisters of Charity of St. Vincent De Paul planned to go about their duties as usual at St. Joseph's college here tomorrow while awaiting word from a special session of cardinals at Rome on a proposal for the beautification of Mother Seton, who founded the local school in 1809.

If a favorable recommendation is made to Pope Pius and approved by His Holiness, there is every reason to believe that after due process Mother Seton will be the first native-born American to become a saint.

After St. Joseph's was opened, Mother Seton founded the Sisters of Charity in the United States, and this school is now the central house of the eastern province of the order in the United States.

Elizabeth Ann Seton was born in New York City, Aug. 21, 1774, the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Richard Bayley. Her mother, daughter of an Anglican Church minister, died when Elizabeth was three years old.

She married William Magee Seton, son of a wealthy New York merchant, Jan. 25, 1794. Seton died at Pisa, Italy, in December, 1803. They had one daughter, Anna.

As the result of her association with the M. Filicchi family in Italy and correspondence with Bishop Cheverus of Boston and Archbishop Carroll of Baltimore, Mrs. Seton was converted to the Catholic faith.

She was received into the church by the Rev. Matthew O'Brien at St. Peter's Church, New York, on Ash Wednesday, March 14, 1805.

In 1808, Mother Seton opened a school for girls at the invitation of the Rev. Dubourg, president of St. Mary's Seminary, Baltimore.

Samuel Cooper, a convert and former student at St. Mary's, was desirous of contributing funds for the education of poor children. In 1809 he interested Mother Seton in the proposal.

Thus St. Joseph's College was founded under her direction.

Another newly arrived American envoy, Myron C. Taylor, the president's personal representative to Pope Pius XII, prepared for his first audience with the Pontiff tomorrow at 10:30 a. m. (4:30 a. m. EST).

Welles demonstrated his own satisfaction with his call on Ciano by breaking his vow of silence to observe that the meeting had been "very gratifying and helpful."

Ciano reported on it immediately to his father-in-law and the Fascist press with one accord took a sudden interest in Welles's activities after virtually ignoring his visit.

Facts Kept Secret

The subject of the talks was guarded carefully but foreign observers believed they must have ex-

Insurance Co. Is Refused a Permit To Examine Body

Loses Fight To Prove Beckley Doctor Died Natural Death

Richmond, Va., Feb. 26 (AP)—The Fourth U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals today reversed a district court judgment that woul permit the Mutual Life Insurance Company of New York to perform an autopsy on the body of a Beckley, W. Va., physician.

The execution of the order granting the autopsy was stayed pending the appeal.

The physician, Dr. John H. McCulloh, died after a fall down the stairs of the Black Knight Country Club near Beckley, March 18, 1939. He carried a $50,000 policy with the company.

The Circuit Court held that "two weeks elapsed after the accident and before the insurer demanded an autopsy" and said:

No evidence whatever was produced to show that the insured was afflicted with disease at the time of his accident. The only fair inference is that the insurer has no basis for its assertion that a disease was a contributing cause of death, but only a hope that in the course of the investigation something might be revealed that will relieve it from the double liability."

The insurance company, in addition to the autopsy, had sought a declaratory judgment from the district court holding the insurer not liable to double indemnity if the death of the physician was found not to have been the result of "bodily injuries affected solely through external, violent and accidental means."

Koivisto Islands Are Abandoned by Finnish Defenders

Action Leaves Entrance to Viipuri Bay Unguarded

Russians only a Few Miles from Immediate Objective

Moscow, Feb. 27 (Tuesday)—(AP)—The Soviet high command announced today that more than 5,000,000 cartridges and 10,000 shells had been captured from retreating Finns in the Koivisto fortress area.

By THOMAS F. HAWKINS

Helsinki, Feb. 27.—(Tuesday)—(AP)—Koivisto Islands, from which Finnish guns once guarded the eastern end of the Gulf of Finland and the western end of Finland's Mannerheim Line, now are in Soviet Russian hands, clearing away one more barrier to the Red army drive on Viipuri.

(Editor's note: This dispatch was delayed five hours in transmission by worsening communications.)

The fall of Finland's "Gibraltar" brings more definitely than before a concentration of the front in a sector before Viipuri.

It is likely the Koivisto guns were silenced some days ago for they have not been mentioned in recent Finnish communiques. Last night's announcement of the withdrawal of Finnish forces from the islands did not say how it was carried out, but those who could probably headed across the ice for the mainland since the Russians previously had occupied Koivisto village.

Finns Admit Serious Loss

The Finns made no effort to minimize the seriousness of the withdrawal, since the fort helped guard the approaches to Viipuri harbor.

The main thing now was that further intensification of the battle for Viipuri could be expected on the western half of the isthmus, where the Finns have shortened and straightened their front while the Russian lines have broadened.

To take the city by a frontal attack, the Red army must crash through this Finnish "second line," stretching from Kaislahti to Lake Muola.

Military informants say the Finns still hold the central section of their first line defenses as well as the eastern half of the isthmus to Taipale on Lake Ladoga.

Pointing to the "exacting toll" taken from the Russian forces in Sunday's attacks, one Finnish officer said that is the basis of Finland's fight against far more numerous forces. To defend and to fall back gradually whenever necessary to save men explained the withdrawal from the first line, he said.

He added this procedure could go on for months. Even if the Soviets take deserted Viipuri they face a new series of defenses if they choose to carry on the drive toward Helsinki.

Norwegian Territorial Waters May Have again Been Scene of Battle

ASCAP HEAD HELD

Gene Buck

President of the American Society of Composers and Publishers, Gene Buck is shown as he appeared in Phoenix, Ariz., to answer to fugitive-from-justice charge. Arctic Blockade of German-Russian Sea Traffic Brings First Results to British and French

Bergen, Norway, Feb. 26 (AP) — Allied warships, which only last week began an Arctic blockade to halt German-Russian sea traffic along Norway's irregular coast, were reported tonight to have sunk two German vessels in action near the Finnish shore.

Reports from Vardoe, fifty miles northwest of Finland's Petsamo Fjord, now occupied by Soviet forces, did not say whether the sunken German vessels were warships or freighters.

Nor was it clear whether the sinkings had taken place within Norwegian territorial waters — which would create within ten days a second incident threatening Norway's neutral status. Norway replied only yesterday to a British memorandum in the case of the German ship Altmark — boarded Feb. 16 at Gjossingfjord by British sailors who took off 299 British captives.

German Steamer Sinks

The 4,354-ton German steamer Orizaba, which ran aground today at Skjervoy, near Hammerfest, 175 miles west of Vardoe, was reported tonight to have sunk. There was no indication that war action had figured in her sinking.

A ship passing the vicinity said there was no sign of the Orizaba except floating debris. The crew was reported saved.

Reported from Norway

The attacks today were reported from the northernmost tip of Norway, where a British naval detachment of unknown size was known to have been patrolling last week. Press reports said French warships had joined the patrol.

The warships took up their station there after the British and French had expressed dissatisfaction with Norway's "ineffective" neutrality in permitting German

Judge Manton To Start Jail Term Within Few Days

By WILLIAM S. WHITE

New York, Feb. 26 (AP)—Martin Thomas Manton, who a year ago occupied the highest and most venerated judicial post in the nation short of the Supreme Court itself, probably will enter prison within a week to serve a two-year term for selling his integrity for cash.

The former senior judge of the U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals here was convicted last June 3—specifically of conspiracy to obstruct justice before his own bench—and today in Washington the Supreme Court sealed his extraordinary fall, refusing a review of his case.

It was a fall without a parallel in the last three centuries of the history of British or American jurisprudence, no English-speaking judge of such rank having eben similarly stigmatized since Francis Bacon, lord chancellor of England, was deprived of office more than 300 years ago.

Decisions Influenced

In the trial the government offered evidence that Manton's decisions had been infuenced by direct and indirect bribes running into thousands upon thousands of dollars.

A spare, austere man approaching 60, the veteran judge fought hard all the way. Once convicted, he stood, faintly grimacing, before Federal Judge W. Calvin Chesnut to

Morgenthau Says Allies Can Pay Cash for Planes

Secretary Believes They Can Produce Contemplated Billion

Washington, Feb. 26 (AP)—Treasury Secretary Morgenthau expressed belief today that the Allies have ample resources to pay cash for their contemplated $1,000,000,000 airplane and other military purchasing in this country.

A few hours before the secretary gave his views to a press conference he had conferred with Washington representatives of the Allied purchasing mission.

In response to questions, Morgenthau reiterated previous assertions that the prices being charged by American airplane manufacturers "were reasonable" and that no tax problems were impeding airplane production or sales.

Asked about a recent resolution of the advisory council to the Federal Reserve Board opposing further treasury purchases of foreign silver, the secretary declined to express an opinion.

When asked about a recent statement of Federal Reserve Chairman Marriner S. Eccles that the treasury had approximately $4,000,000,000 of virtually idle funds that could be spent for relief, Morgenthau suggested that Eccles and others holding such views should read President Roosevelt's recent budget message.

He explained that the president had identified the supposedly idle funds of the treasury—including $2,000,000,000 in the stabilization fund, $2,000,000,000 in cash and other liquid assets—as money to be used for reduction of the federal debt.

House Votes To Make $60,000,000 Available To Keep Up Crop Control

Washington, Feb. 26 (AP) — In response to a radiogram from President Roosevelt, the House voted today to make $60,000,000 of next year's agriculture fund available immediately to keep crop control checks flowing to farmers.

Members of the House Appropriations Committee reported that the president had approved the transaction in order to replenish the regular $500,000,000 benefit payment fund which has been depleted by increased farmer compliance with crop control plans. A few minutes later they wrote the $60,000,000 into a $30,069,139 deficiency bill designed to meet emergency needs of various government agencies until July 1.

Late in the day, the House passed the measure, which now goes to the Senate.

Agreement with Senators

Committee members announced that an agreement had been reached with senators that an equal amount would be deducted from the 1941 farm appropriation bill pending before the Senate Appropriations Committee.

Secretary of Agriculture Wallace, asserting that the agriculture department had underestimated the number of farmers who currently would participate in the AAA programs, told the House committee that the transfer would not increase the total of $1,000,000,000 that would be appropriated for the two years.

He predicted, however, that it would result in a small decrease in individual payments to farmers in 1941.

While the House was considering the deficiency bill, Wallace told the Senate Appropriations Committee, which is studying the 1941 appropriation measure, that failure to include money for "parity" payments or the equivalent might interfere with control programs. Farm state legislators have talked of voting about $200,000,000 for such payments.

(Parity payments are designed to

Mother Seton Likely To Be First American Born To Become a Saint

Emmitsburg, Md., Feb. 26 (AP) — The Sisters of Charity of St. Vincent De Paul planned to go about their duties as usual at St. Joseph's college here tomorrow while awaiting word from a special session of cardinals at Rome on a proposal for the beautification of Mother Seton, who founded the local school in 1809.

If a favorable recommendation is made to Pope Pius and approved by His Holiness, there is every reason to believe that after due process Mother Seton will be the first native-born American to become a saint.

After St. Joseph's was opened, Mother Seton founded the Sisters of Charity in the United States, and this school is now the central house of the eastern province of the order in the United States.

Elizabeth Ann Seton was born in New York City, Aug. 21, 1774, the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Richard Bayley. Her mother, daughter of an Anglican Church minister, died when Elizabeth was three years old.

She married William Magee Seton, son of a wealthy New York merchant, Jan. 25, 1794. Seton died at Pisa, Italy, in December, 1803. They had one daughter, Anna.

As the result of her association with the M. Filicchi family in Italy and correspondence with Bishop Cheverus of Boston and Archbishop Carroll of Baltimore, Mrs. Seton was converted to the Catholic faith.

She was received into the church by the Rev. Matthew O'Brien at St. Peter's Church, New York, on Ash Wednesday, March 14, 1805.

In 1808, Mother Seton opened a school for girls at the invitation of the Rev. Dubourg, president of St. Mary's Seminary, Baltimore.

Samuel Cooper, a convert and former student at St. Mary's, was desirous of contributing funds for the education of poor children. In 1809 he interested Mother Seton in the proposal.

Thus St. Joseph's College was founded under her direction.

Republicans Fail To Restrict Use Of Census Fund

House Votes $5,000,000 Despite Claims of Illegality

Washington, Feb. 26. (AP)—House Republicans shouted charges today that the 1940 census was to be an "indelicate" and "illegal" inquisition but they failed to block or restrict use of a $5,000,000 fund for the nose-counting project.

The Republicans, operating as a unit, declared that questions proposed in the census of housing would invade private rights and already had stirred up resentment.

They objected particularly to questions concerning citizens' income and repeatedly mentioned proposed inquiries as to whether families shared their baths and toilets with others.

Rep. Short (R-Mo) declared that the people in his Ozark Hill district would tell the census enumerators: "It's none of their damned business."

The Democrats, in addition to replying with votes, said the Republicans were merely making an attack on the Roosevelt administration and that the questions suggested were not much different from some that had been asked by Republican regimes. The Republican amendment to strike out the fund lost, 142 to 124.

Republicans and Democrats laughed at each other's jokes but debate grew heated over the criminal penalties which would be applied to persons who refused to answer questions.

The Republicans succeeded in writing temporarily into the bill a provision forbidding the pressing of any question to the point of invoking the penalties. The amendment later was beaten, 196 to 139, on a roll call vote.

Penalties are $100 or sixty days imprisonment or both for failure to answer questions and $500 or one year's imprisonment or both for false answers.

Britain Calls

complete collaboration in purchase of foodstuffs.

Hitler's Promise Broken

The total of "unarmed" ships attacked since the start of the war was announced in Commons by R. A. Butler, undersecretary for foreign affairs, who said this proved Hitler had broken his promise to President Roosevelt to refrain from bombing civilians. All British merchant and fishing vessels in the North Sea now are getting guns.

Another military development was the banning of all non-resident civilians from northern Scotland, site of important British war industries.

A secret, anti-government radio station called the "New British Broadcasting Company" gave British military intelligence ferrets a new job. The station attacked British war-aims in its first broadcast last night. Nobody could tell whether the transmitter was in England or outside.

Reported sunk today were the Scottish Loch Maddy, 4,996 tons, torpedoed in the North Atlantic Thursday with four dead, and the 3,840-ton Swedish Santos, sunk in the North Sea with thirty missing. A British warship was believed to have sunk the submarine which torpedoed the Loch Maddy.

Welles's Mission

ceeded the limits of mere "fact-finding" on Welles's part. They reasoned that Ciano would not have gone in such haste to inform Mussolini merely of the extent of the American's curiosity.

Dressed in civilian clothes, Il Duce received Welles and Phillips at the Plazzo Venezia and talked with them in French. Their talk with Ciano was in English which Il Duce's son-in-law speaks fluently.

The sudden warmth of the Italian press reaction inspired belief in some quarters that Welles might have made some specific suggestion which struck a responsive chord in Italian policy.

Some political quarters considered it possible Welles had inquired what the Italian attitude would be toward an American offer to help in straightening out Europe's economic problems as a basis for lasting peace.

Italy and Germany ignored a similar offer by President Roosevelt last April in his letter asking Mussolini and Hitler to give twenty-five-year non-aggression pledges.

Il Duce has reiterated that the so-called "have not" nations must be taken into consideration if a stable peace is to be established, and informed circles believed a renewed offer of help would receive a cordial reply.

Associates of Welles described his talk with Mussolini as "pleasant and cordial." Vatican authorities said the shortness of his stay in Rome probably would preclude an audience with the Pope, at least until he returns from his trip to Berlin, Paris and London.

SALVAGING WRECKED ARMY BOMBER

Four army aviators escaped death when this big bomber crashed into the Anacostia River after taking off from Bolling Field, Washington, D. C. Two of the fliers, trapped in the cabin, were rescued by Sea Scouts, who put out in a small boat from a nearby yacht club. Men from the Anacostia Naval Station are shown salvaging the plane.

INTERPRETING THE WAR NEWS

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

Reports that Russian casualties on the Karelian Isthmus have reached the stunning total of 100,000 appear of greater significance than the Finns' abandonment of their western flank "anchor" forts.

Evacuation of the Koivisto defenses on the Gulf of Finland end of the Mannerheim Line has been foreshadowed ever since the Red army's advances in the center of the isthmus bent and extended that line. Conservation of limited Finnish man-power on a shorter defense line was essential. Abandonment of the Koivisto positions would have been forced soon for that reason, even had they been capable of defense otherwise.

Attack May Halt Soon

On the other hand, the reported extent of the Red army's losses raises a grave doubt that the Russians can press the attack immediately on the front to which the Finns have retired. If the Russian losses aggregate anything like 100,000, there is every reason of military experince to suggest that the attack must halt soon.

Russian front line units must be badly diorganized, and in no shape to take full advantage of their victories. Red communication lines to Leningrad are jammed with a two-way traffic and increasingly subject to enemy harrassment. Those routes by rail or road are inadequate at best to maintain a force of the size the Russians massed on the narrow Isthmus front.

The flow of the human wreckage of war in sick and wounded back into Russia passes under the eyes of replacements being brought up. The effect on Red army Morale is a factor not to be ignored.

Harder Going Ahead

Nor can Russian leaders ignore the plain evidence on their maps of the isthmus that even harder going lies ahead of them, if the Finns have taken advantage of all topographical possibilities in establishing their secondary defenses.

The report of Russian losses, with all its implications, sheds light, too, on the action of the conference of foreign ministers of Denmark, Sweden and Norway, in urging again that the war be ended by a negotiated settlement preserving Finland's "full independence." Presumably, their proposal rests on the hope, at least, that Moscow may now be ready for mediation for practical reasons.

Russian advances on the Karelian isthmus, even if far from decisive as yet have moved the defense of Leningrad well out beyond the original frontier. That was the avowed Russian objective in attacking Finland. It is the only Russian purpose in Finland that Moscow's Nazi partners in Berlin have formally sanctioned.

Suspect German Activity

The Scandinavian foreign ministers may know of German pressure on Moscow to call a halt in Finland and seek to negotiate a new frontier on the isthmus before the Russo-Finnish conflict draws Scandinavia into its deadly whirlpool. Berlin does not want that to happen.

It is reasonably clear, in any event, that the three foreign ministers whose countries are gravely imperilled by that war do not see any prospect of early collapse of Finnish defense. If they had, they could not well have risked Moscow's wrath by championing "full independence" for Finland in virtually offering their mediation to end hostilities.

Judge Manton

argue his own case in vainly appealing for a reversal.

"x x x A judge," he said in a harsh and only faintly disturbed voice, "has been struck down by what is tantamount to a death sentence . . . It matters little what becomes of my poor body during the years I have left in life, but it matters what is done here in the name of the law, and how disgrace is visited upon a loyal judiciary in the name of justice."

This same argument—that justice as an institution was being damaged—he followed in the last, fruitless appeal to the Supreme Court, pleading there:

Manton's Defense

"From a broad viewpoint it serves no public policy for a high judicial officer to be convicted of a judicial crime. It tends to destroy the confidence of the people in the courts." As to the specific accusation, conspiracy to obstruct justice, Manton argued that no judge could thus conspire in his own court.

While federal authorities here remained officially silent at the prosecution's last victory, it was pointed out privately that this was the procedure that now will be followed:

Within twenty-four hours the Supreme Court will notify the Circuit Court that a hearing of the case was refused. The Circuit Court within another day will transmit the fact to the District Court. There, the rules give a defendant at least two days' notice, and usually a few additional days are allowed him to wind up his affairs. An order to surrender will follow.

Others Convicted

Convicted with Manton, who also was fined $10,000, were George M. Spector, an insurance broker, who was sentenced to a year and a day and fined $5,000; John L. Lotsch, a minor Brooklyn politician and banker, one year and $1,000 fine; Forrest W. Davis, an accountant; suspended sentence; William J. Fallon, nine months and $5,000 fine.

But the scandal did not stop with them. On Nov. 14, Louis S. Levy, prominent corporation lawyer in New York, as a result of the Manton expose was disbarred and declared by Federal Judge John C Knox to have been "venal and corrupt" in "mind, heart and action."

U. S. Attorney John T. Cahill, who had prosecuted the judge, brought the disbarment proceedings as well, accusing Levy and a former associate, Paul M. Hahn, of having concealed a $250,000 loan made largely for Manton's benefit. Hahn was exonerated, and the proceedings against him dismissed.

Manton himself had a career of rarely-equalled brilliance. He was only thirty-six when — in 1916 — President Wilson appointed him to the federal bench.

most Earth's twin in size. Venus would show nothing but a dazzling white and puzzling blanket of fairly warm clouds, known only to contain a lot of carbon dioxide. Guesses have been made that they are mostly swirling dust.

Next up is Saturn, a giant nearly as big as Jupiter, its substance so light in weight that it would float in an ocean of water if there were a sea large enough. Around it is a luminous ring shaped about like a phonograph disc with Saturn set in place of the central labels. Nowhere else in the universe is anything else known like this ring. It is actually three concentric rings, their substance so thin that the planet can be seen through them.

Countless Tiny Moons

The ring probably is countless tiny moons not more than a few miles in diameter. Saturn has in addition then regular moons.

Last, and topmost, is Mars, the only planet whose surface telescopes can certainly see. On this surface are the mysterious "canals" whose existence was substantiated beyond doubt last July when Mars was close to the earth and far brighter than this week. Mars has two moons, both so small that a man could walk around them in a few hours.

If the sun were the size of a large wagon wheel, Mercury would be a small pea, Jupiter a small melon, Venus a hazelnut, Saturn a small melon with its ring the size of an ordinary phonograph disc, and Mars a medium-sized pea.

Nazi Planes Seen High Over Paris

Paris, Feb. 27 (Tuesday) (AP)—Parisians who retired last night after watching the play of searchlights and the burst of anti-aircraft fire chase two German reconnaissance planes away from the capital, were routed out of bed and into air raid shelters a few hours later by their first alarm since Nov. 23.

Paris, Feb. 26 (AP) — Bursting anti-aircraft shells in skies crisscrossed by searchlights brought out thousands of Parisians tonight to watch German reconnaissance planes being driven from the environs of the French capital.

People hung out of apartment house windows or stood on boulevard pavements to watch the show.

No air raid alarm was sounded in the city and no bombs were dropped.

Through all the firing traffic policemen stayed at their posts and kept buses and taxis moving.

The anti-aircraft units kept up their firing from 8:45 p. m. until 9 p. m. (2:45 to 3 p. m. EST.)

The cannonading was heard first east of Paris. The planes were flying very high.

No official statement on the firing was forthcoming.

Last week it was disclosed that German reconnaissance flights had been carried to the outskirts of Paris but the capital itself has not had an air raid alarm since Nov. 23.

Roosevelt Due at Balboa Today To Hold Conferences

By DOUGLAS B. CORNELL

Aboard U. S. S. Lang, at Sea, Feb. 26 (AP via Wireless)—President Roosevelt will arrive early tomorrow morning at Balboa for a series of conference on Panama canal defenses with American naval, military and civilian officials and talks with President Augusto Boyd of Panama and Panamanian political leaders.

Concluding his personal survey aboard the cruiser Tuscalossa of distant and nearby canal defenses, Mr. Roosevelt will inspect army and navy installations at the Pacific end, transit the canal and probably head toward the United States by dusk.

The chief executive has been studying additional distant canal defenses and fishing occasionally since leaving Cocos island. This afternoon the ships in the presidential party were anchored off the Panamanian coast.

Mr. Roosevelt inspected the Atlantic side defenses Feb. 15, discussing increased personnel and equipment and plans for a third set of canal locks costing 277,000,000.

Sunday Shoe String Sale Costs Man $21.45

Davis sold a pair for twenty cents yesterday to Morris Goetz, who had broken his skating at a rink across the street.

Today he paid a fine of $21.45 for violating Baltimore's ancient Sunday Blue laws.

raise farm purchasing power to the 1909-1914 level.)

Cut Budget Requirement

In approving the deficiency bill, the House trimmed $4,020,704 off the president's budget estimates.

Meanwhile, the Senate passed a $107,079,000 annual appropriation bill for the state, commerce and justice departments. This was $2,585,000 less than President Roosevelt's budget estimates, and $146,660 less than was voted by the House. The measure now goes back to the House for action on amendments.

In a "gesture of protest" against Russia, Senator Lodge (R-Mass) sought to get the Senate to delete from this measure $17,500 for the maintenance of the United States Ambassador to Russia. Senator Vandenberg (R-Mich) supported Lodge, but the proposal was voted down without a record vote.

Says Doris Dazey Wanted To Die

Los Angeles, Feb. 26 (AP) —A Santa Monica society woman testified today that Mrs. Doris Dazey, whose husband is accused of killing her, said—only a few days before her death—"if I could go to sleep at night and never wake up again I'd be very happy."

Mrs. Adelaide Merritt was a witness for Dr. George K. Dazey, who is specifically accused of rendering his wife unconscious and placing her body in a garage soon filled with automobile exhaust fumes.

The defense contends that Mrs. Dazey committed suicide.

Mrs. Dora Van Horn, maid and cook in the Dazey home, testified that Mrs. Dazey unexpectedly gave her the day off on Oct. 3, 1935, the day she died.

Dr. Dazey's attorneys called upon a prosecution witness in an effort to prove the charges were "trumped-up."

Mary Bates, negro servant, as the prosecution's first witness had testified Dazey was drunk and abusive some months prior to Doris Dazey's death Oct. 3, 1935.

Defense Attorney Jerry Giesler confronted Miss Bates with a letter of recommendation, originally introduced by the prosecution, from a former employer dated in 1936.

Giesler, seeking to show that Miss Bates was not employed by the Dazeys at the time she gave, said the date on the letter had been altered from 1937.

Koivisto Islands

of Finland again. Riihimaaki, Kouvola, Lahti, Hankö, Turku and a number of smaller towns were bombed yesterday. There were four alarms in Helsinki, two of them after dark.

The story of Koivisto was told officially in the terse opening sentence of the high command communique.

"On the Isthmus (of Karelia) our troops have given up the Koivisto Islands," it said. That was all.

(Russian occupation of these islands presumably eases the way for attack upon Viipuri over the frozen bay. The city now is under heavy air and land fire. On Saturday night the Russians announced occupation of the Koivisto Islands of Tiurimsaari and Piisaari, whose loss the Finns acknowledged only today.)

The Russians in their drive on Viipuri already have pushed up a coastal railway, by the Finns' own admission, as far as Kaislahti, only 7½ miles due south from their objective.

Viipuri, normally Finland's third largest city, busy with 70,000 inhabitants, today is deserted. Two weeks ago several thousand persons still lived there, and troops were quartered with them, but now only a few ghostly sentries remain.

Civilians Leave City

Complete withdrawal of civilians from the city began as the Finns fell back into their second line positions in the Mannerheim Line and Soviet artillery moved to within easy shelling range.

The Russians have made the most of this. Although airplane bombs and occasional long-range shells have caused damage in Viipuri almost from the start of the war, the concentrated attacks of the Red grand offensive from Feb. 12 to Feb. 20 damaged practically every building in the city.

Here a building stands without a roof. There one teeters with its sides ripped off. Little more than the cross remains of what was once a church. Household effects and wares from shattered shops litter the streets.

It is toward this city that the Russians are driving.

Russian Attacks Continue

"On Feb. 25," said today's Finnish communique after mentioning loss of the Koivisto Islands, "the enemy continued his attacks on the western part of the Isthmus. The attacks were checked by fire from our artillery and infantry, and the enemy suffered heavy loss in men. At Salmenkaita enemy attacks were repulsed after fighting which lasted the whole day."

The day "passed quietly" on the eastern part of the isthmus, where the Russians last week launched fierce offensives, the Finns said.

Little was reported from other war fronts. The Finns said they captured a "strong point" near Kuhmo, near the eastern end of Finland's narrow "waist," and "destroyed" a company of Russians there. They also said their airmen, engaging in "a number of successful air fights," shot down five Russian planes.

Senator Nye's Wife To Seek Divorce

Washington, Feb. 26 (AP) — Mrs. Gerald P. Nye, wife of the North Dakota senator, intends to seek a divorce.

She said today that the petition would be filed this week, but would not discuss details of her plans. Nye was out of the city.

Senator and Mrs. Nye have been living apart since last fall. Mrs. Nye is the former Anna Margaret Munch of St. Joseph, Mo. She married Nye, at that time an Iowa newspaperman, in 1916. They have three children.

Nye, a Republican, has been a member of the Senate since 1925.

Meadville, Pa., Feb. 26 (AP) — Senator Gerald P. Nye (R-ND) said tonight it was "no surprise" to learn his wife had announced she would file a divorce action later this week in Washington.

"We have been separated for some time," he explained, adding crisply he had "absolutely no comment" to make further.

Norris Compares FBI with OGPU And Gestapo, Asks Investigation

Washington, Feb. 26 (AP)—Senator Norris (Ind-Neb) placed in the congressional record today an editorial which described J. Edgar Hoover's Federal Bureau of Investigation as an "American Ogpu."

The Nebraskan brought up the subject a short time before the Senate passed an appropriation bill carrying slightly more than $9,500,000 for the bureau.

"Frankly, I am worried about the activities of this bureau," he told the chamber. "I must confess, to begin with, that I have no concrete evidence which I could offer in court to sustain the position which I take. Yet it seems to me this is a subject which ought to be looked into."

Objects to Expenses

Norris expressed doubt that the bureau could, under the law, utilize all the money appropriated for it. Senator McKeller (D-Tenn) observed that $2,488,000 of the total represented emergency items "pure and simple."

The veteran independent went on to say that the editorial which he put into the record was from "The New Republic," which he added was ordinarily careful to investigate facts before publishing them.

In many newspapers, Norris continued, he had read statements to the effect that methods resorted to by representatives of the bureau were, "to say the least, rather abhorrent to one who believes in constitutional liberty."

Arrests in Detroit

For instance, he said, it had been alleged that a large number of persons had been arrested at night in Detroit, charged with assisting persons to enlist in the Loyalist army in Spain.

"That, as I understand it, is a technical crime, a statutory crime; but it doesn't imply any maliciousness, anything that's mean."

Yet, Norris continued, those arrested were handcuffed "and in that condition taken to the common jail."

"If these charges are only partially true, it is a matter of taking the law into their own hands and punishing people who are not convicted of a crime, who are not charged with anything which has attached to it any element of criminality."

Drastic Methods Used

The "New Republic" editorial said methods like those of the Russian Ogpu and German Gestapo had been used by the Federal Bureau of Investigation against veterans of the Abraham Lincoln brigade between February 6 and 10 in New York, and that at the same time the FBI launched raids against this organization in Detroit and Milwaukee.

Indictments were returned recently in Detroit against sixteen persons accused of assisting the enlistment of Americans in the Spanish Loyalist army. Robert H. Jackson, the new attorney general, recommended subsequently that the indictments be dismissed.

Dorazio Given Nod over Bobo

Pittsburgh, Feb. 26 (AP)—Gus Dorazio, scrappy Philadelphia Italian, overcame a 23-pound weight advantage tonight to win a unanimous decision over Harry Bobo, slugging Pittsburgh negro, in ten rounds. Dorazio weighed 186, his opponent 209.

Bobo had won all his twelve professional fights before bobbing into Dorazio, who last summer suffered a technical knockout at the hands of light heavyweight champion Billy Conn.

The Philadelphian outslugged the taller and heavier negro, made him grow wild and then came on to administer a fairly good beating to his man.

Dorazio took command of the contest after a wild sixth round, in which he absorbed the best punches Bobo had to give. His thumping lefts and rights to the body began wearing down his opponent.

Dorazio, with a reputation for marking easily (it was a cut eye that lost the fight to Conn) came out virtually unmarked while Bobo was bleeding at the mouth and nose. There were no knockdowns.

Russian Ambassador Assured of Funds

Washington, Feb. 26. (AP)—The Senate refused late today to withhold funds for maintenance of the United States ambassador to Russia.

Senator Lodge (R-Mass) asked that the ambassador's $17,500 annual allotment be stricken from the $107,079,000 appropriation bill for the state, justice and commerce departments.

Lodge, who said his proposal would be "a gesture of protest" against Russia, was supported by Senator Vandenberg (R-Mich).

The amendment was rejected without a record vote.

Two Brothers Killed In Battle on Farm

St. Charles, Va., Feb. 26 (AP) — Sheriff Jeff Newman of Lee county reported late today that two brothers were killed in a mid-day shooting at Smith's Chapel near Pennington Gap. Their father and another brother were wounded.

Sheriff Newman and Deputy Claude Benfield said that they had gone to the farm home of Elbert Myers to investigate the affair, but members of the family refused to discuss it.

Commonwealth's Attorney Robert B. Ely said there would be a grand jury investigation.

The bodies of Clabe and Paul Myers were carried to an undertaker's in Appalachia.

The father, Elbert Myers, was reported in a serious condition at a Pennington Gap hospital. The other brother, Ernest, was shot in one hand.

Benfield said that apparently an argument in a tobacco patch preceded the shooting.

Republicans Fail To Restrict Use Of Census Fund

House Votes $5,000,000 Despite Claims of Illegality

Washington, Feb. 26. (AP)—House Republicans shouted charges today that the 1940 census was to be an "indelicate" and "illegal" inquisition but they failed to block or restrict use of a $5,000,000 fund for the nose-counting project.

The Republicans, operating as a unit, declared that questions proposed in the census of housing would invade private rights and already had stirred up resentment.

They objected particularly to questions concerning citizens' income and repeatedly mentioned proposed inquiries as to whether families shared their baths and toilets with others.

Rep. Short (R-Mo) declared that the people in his Ozark Hill district would tell the census enumerators: "It's none of their damned business."

The Democrats, in addition to replying with votes, said the Republicans were merely making an attack on the Roosevelt administration and that the questions suggested were not much different from some that had been asked by Republican regimes. The Republican amendment to strike out the fund lost, 142 to 124.

Republicans and Democrats laughed at each other's jokes but debate grew heated over the criminal penalties which would be applied to persons who refused to answer questions.

The Republicans succeeded in writing temporarily into the bill a provision forbidding the pressing of any question to the point of invoking the penalties. The amendment later was beaten, 196 to 139, on a roll call vote.

Penalties are $100 or sixty days imprisonment or both for failure to answer questions and $500 or one year's imprisonment or both for false answers.

Britain Calls

complete collaboration in purchase of foodstuffs.

Hitler's Promise Broken

The total of "unarmed" ships attacked since the start of the war was announced in Commons by R. A. Butler, undersecretary for foreign affairs, who said this proved Hitler had broken his promise to President Roosevelt to refrain from bombing civilians. All British merchant and fishing vessels in the North Sea now are getting guns.

Another military development was the banning of all non-resident civilians from northern Scotland, site of important British war industries.

A secret, anti-government radio station called the "New British Broadcasting Company" gave British military intelligence ferrets a new job. The station attacked British war-aims in its first broadcast last night. Nobody could tell whether the transmitter was in England or outside.

Reported sunk today were the Scottish Loch Maddy, 4,996 tons, torpedoed in the North Atlantic Thursday with four dead, and the 3,840-ton Swedish Santos, sunk in the North Sea with thirty missing. A British warship was believed to have sunk the submarine which torpedoed the Loch Maddy.

Welles's Mission

ceeded the limits of mere "fact-finding" on Welles's part. They reasoned that Ciano would not have gone in such haste to inform Mussolini merely of the extent of the American's curiosity.

Dressed in civilian clothes, Il Duce received Welles and Phillips at the Piazzo Venezia and talked with them in French. Their talk with Ciano was in English which Il Duce's son-in-law speaks fluently.

The sudden warmth of the Italian press reaction inspired belief in some quarters that Welles might have made some specific suggestion which struck a responsive chord in Italian policy.

Some political quarters considered it possible Welles had inquired what the Italian attitude would be toward an American offer to help in straightening out Europe's economic problems as a basis for lasting peace.

Italy and Germany ignored a similar offer by President Roosevelt last April in his letter asking Mussolini and Hitler to give twenty-five-year non-aggression pledges.

Il Duce has reiterated that the so-called "have not" nations must be taken into consideration if a stable peace is to be established, and informed circles believed a renewed offer of help would receive a cordial reply.

Associates of Welles described his talk with Mussolini as "pleasant and cordial." Vatican authorities said the shortness of his stay in Rome probably would preclude an audience with the Pope, at least until he returns from his trip to Berlin, Paris and London.

INTERPRETING THE WAR NEWS

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

Reports that Russian casualties on the Karelian Isthmus have reached the stunning total of 100,000 appear of greater significance than the Finns' abandonment of their western flank "anchor" forts.

Evacuation of the Koivisto defenses on the Gulf of Finland end of the Mannerheim Line has been foreshadowed ever since the Red army's advances in the center of the isthmus bent and extended that line. Conservation of limited Finnish man-power on a shorter defense line was essential. Abandonment of the Koivisto positions would have been forced soon for that reason, even had they been capable of defense otherwise.

Attack May Halt Soon

On the other hand, the reported extent of the Red army's losses raises a grave doubt that the Russians can press the attack immediately on the front to which the Finns have retired. If the Russian losses aggregate anything like 100,000, there is every reason of military experince to suggest that the attack must halt soon.

Russian front line units must be badly disorganized, and in no shape to take full advantage of their victories. Red communication lines to Leningrad are jammed with a two-way traffic and increasingly subject to enemy harrassment. Those routes by rail or road are inadequate at best to maintain a force of the size the Russians massed on the narrow Isthmus front.

The flow of the human wreckage of war in sick and wounded back into Russia passes under the eyes of replacements being brought up. The effect on Red army Morale is a factor not to be ignored.

Harder Going Ahead

Nor can Russian leaders ignore the plain evidence on their maps of the isthmus that even harder going lies ahead of them, if the Finns have taken advantage of all topographical possibilities in establishing their secondary defenses.

The report of Russian losses, with all its implications, sheds light, too, on the action of the conference of foreign ministers of Denmark, Sweden and Norway, in urging again that the war be ended by a negotiated settlement preserving Finland's "full independence." Presumably, their proposal rests on the hope, at least, that Moscow may now be ready for mediation for practical reasons.

Russian advances on the Karelian isthmus, even if far from decisive as yet have moved the defense of Leningrad well out beyond the original frontier. That was the avowed Russian objective in attacking Finland. It is the only Russian purpose in Finland that Moscow's Nazi partners in Berlin have formally sanctioned.

Suspect German Activity

The Scandinavian foreign ministers may know of German pressure on Moscow to call a halt in Finland and seek to negotiate a new frontier on the isthmus before the Russo-Finnish conflict draws Scandinavia into its deadly whirlpool. Berlin does not want that to happen.

It is reasonably clear, in any event, that the three foreign ministers whose countries are gravely imperilled by that war do not see any prospect of early collapse of Finnish defense. If they had, they could not well have risked Moscow's wrath by championing "full independence" for Finland in virtually offering their mediation to end hostilities.

Judge Manton

argue his own case in vainly appealing for a reversal.

"x x x A judge," he said in a harsh and only faintly disturbed voice, "has been struck down by what is tantamount to a death sentence . . . It matters little what becomes of my poor body during the years I have left in life, but it matters what is done here in the name of the law, and how disgrace is visited upon a loyal judiciary in the name of justice."

This same argument—that justice as an institution was being damaged—he followed in the last, fruitless appeal to the Supreme Court, pleading there:

Manton's Defense

"From a broad viewpoint it serves no public policy for a high judicial officer to be convicted of a judicial crime. It tends to destroy the confidence of the people in the courts." As to the specific accusation, conspiracy to obstruct justice, Manton argued that no judge could thus conspire in his own court.

While federal authorities here remained officially silent at the prosecution's last victory, it was pointed out privately that this was the procedure that now will be followed:

Within twenty-four hours the Supreme Court will notify the Circuit Court that a hearing of the case was refused. The Circuit Court within another day will transmit the fact to the District Court. There, the rules give a defendant at least two days' notice, and usually a few additional days are allowed him to wind up his affairs. An order to surrender will follow.

Others Convicted

Convicted with Manton, who also was fined $10,000, were George M. Spector, an insurance broker, who was sentenced to a year and a day and fined $5,000; John L. Lotsch, a minor Brooklyn politician and banker, one year and $1,000 fine; Forrest W. Davis, an accountant; suspended sentence; William J. Fallon, nine months and $5,000 fine.

But the scandal did not stop with them. On Nov. 14, Louis S. Levy, prominent corporation lawyer in New York, as a result of the Manton expose was disbarred and declared by Federal Judge John C Knox to have been "venal and corrupt" in "mind, heart and action."

U. S. Attorney John T. Cahill, who had prosecuted the judge, brought the disbarment proceedings as well, accusing Levy and a former associate, Paul M. Hahn, of having concealed a $250,000 loan made largely for Manton's benefit. Hahn was exonerated, and the proceedings against him dismissed.

Manton himself had a career of rarely-equalled brilliance. He was only thirty-six when — in 1916 — President Wilson appointed him to the federal bench.

Different Worlds

most Earth's twin in size. Venus would show nothing but a dazzling white and puzzling blanket of fairly warm clouds, known only to contain a lot of carbon dioxide. Guesses have been made that they are mostly swirling dust.

Next up is Saturn, a giant nearly as big as Jupiter, its substance so light in weight that it would float in an ocean of water if there were a sea large enough. Around it is a luminous ring shaped about like a phonograph disc with Saturn set in place of the central labels. Nowhere else in the universe is anything else known like this ring. It is actually three concentric rings, their substance so thin that the planet can be seen through them.

Countless Tiny Moons

The ring probably is countless tiny moons not more than a few miles in diameter. Saturn has in addition then regular moons.

Last, and topmost, is Mars, the only planet whose surface telescopes can certainly see. On this surface are the mysterious "canals" whose existence was substantiated beyond doubt last July when Mars was close to the earth and far brighter than this week. Mars has two moons, both so small that a man could walk around them in a few hours.

If the sun were the size of a large wagon wheel, Mercury would be a small pea, Jupiter a small melon, Venus a hazelnut, Saturn a small melon with its ring the size of an ordinary phonograph disc, and Mars a medium-sized pea.

Nazi Planes Seen High Over Paris

Paris, Feb. 27 (Tuesday) (AP)—Parisians who retired last night after watching the play of searchlights and the burst of anti-aircraft fire chase two German reconnaissance planes away from the capital, were routed out of bed and into air raid shelters a few hours later by their first alarm since Nov. 23.

Paris, Feb. 26 (AP) — Bursting anti-aircraft shells in skies criss-crossed by searchlights brought out thousands of Parisians tonight to watch German reconnaissance planes being driven from the environs of the French capital.

People hung out of apartment house windows or stood on boulevard pavements to watch the show.

No air raid alarm was sounded in the city and no bombs were dropped.

Through all the firing traffic policemen stayed at their posts and kept buses and taxis moving.

The anti-aircraft units kept up their firing from 8:45 p. m. until 9 p. m. (2:45 to 3 p. m. EST.)

The cannonading was heard first east of Paris. The planes were flying very high.

No official statement on the firing was forthcoming.

Last week it was disclosed that German reconnaissance flights had been carried to the outskirts of Paris but the capital itself has not had an air raid alarm since Nov. 23.

Roosevelt Due at Balboa Today To Hold Conferences

By DOUGLAS B. CORNELL

Aboard U. S. S. Lang, at Sea, Feb. 26 (AP via Wireless)—President Roosevelt will arrive early tomorrow morning at Balboa for a series of conference on Panama canal defenses with American naval, military and civilian officials and talks with President Augusto Boyd of Panama and Panamanian political leaders.

Concluding his personal survey aboard the cruiser Tuscalossa of distant and nearby canal defenses, Mr. Roosevelt will inspect army and navy installations at the Pacific end, transit the canal and probably head toward the United States by dusk.

The chief executive has been studying additional distant canal defenses and fishing occasionally since leaving Cocos island. This afternoon the ships in the presidential party were anchored off the Panamanian coast.

Mr. Roosevelt inspected the Atlantic side defenses Feb. 15, discussing increased personnel and equipment and plans for a third set of canal locks costing 277,000,000.

Cut Budget Requirement

In approving the deficiency bill, the House trimmed $4,020,704 off the president's budget estimates.

Meanwhile, the Senate passed a $107,079,000 annual appropriation bill for the state, commerce and justice departments. This was $2,585,000 less than President Roosevelt's budget estimates, and $146,660 less than was voted by the House. The measure now goes back to the House for action on amendments.

In a "gesture of protest" against Russia, Senator Lodge (R-Mass) sought to get the Senate to delete from this measure $17,500 for the maintenance of the United States Ambassador to Russia. Senator Vandenberg (R-Mich) supported Lodge, but the proposal was voted down without a record vote.

Says Doris Dazey Wanted To Die

Los Angeles, Feb. 26 (AP)—A Santa Monica society woman testified today that Mrs. Doris Dazey whose husband is accused of killing her, said—only a few days before her death—"if I could go to sleep at night and never wake up again I'd be very happy."

Mrs. Adelaide Merritt was a witness for Dr. George K. Dazey, who is specifically accused of rendering his wife unconscious and placing her body in a garage soon filled with automobile exhaust fumes.

The defense contends that Mrs. Dazey committed suicide.

Mrs. Dora Van Horn, maid and cook in the Dazey home, testified that Mrs. Dazey unexpectedly gave her the day off on Oct. 3, 1935, the day she died.

Dr. Dazey's attorneys called upon a prosecution witness in an effort to prove the charges were "trumped-up."

Mary Bates, negro servant, as the prosecution's first witness had testified Dazey was drunk and abusive some months prior to Doris Dazey's death Oct. 3, 1935.

Defense Attorney Jerry Giesler confronted Miss Bates with a letter of recommendation, originally introduced by the prosecution, from a former employer dated in 1936.

Giesler, seeking to show that Miss Bates was not employed by the Dazeys at the time she gave, said the date on the letter had been altered from 1937.

Koivisto Islands

of Finland again. Riihimaaki, Kouvola, Lahti, Hankö, Turku and a number of smaller towns were bombed yesterday. There were four alarms in Helsinki, two of them after dark.

The story of Koivisto was told officially in the terse opening sentence of the high command communique.

"On the Isthmus (of Karelia) our troops have given up the Koivisto Islands," it said. That was all.

(Russian occupation of these islands presumably eases the way for attack upon Viipuri over the frozen bay. The city now is under heavy air and land fire. On Saturday night the Russians announced occupation of the Koivisto Islands of Tiurimsaari and Pliisaari, whose loss the Finns acknowledged only today.)

The Russians in their drive on Viipuri already have pushed up a coastal railway, by the Finns' own admission, as far as Kaislahti, only 7½ miles due south from their objective.

Viipuri, normally Finland's third largest city, busy with 70,000 inhabitants, today is deserted. Two weeks ago several thousand persons still lived there, and troops were quartered with them, but now only a few ghostly sentries remain.

Civilians Leave City

Complete withdrawal of civilians from the city began as the Finns fell back into their second line positions in the Mannerheim Line and Soviet artillery moved to within easy shelling range.

The Russians have made the most of this. Although airplane bombs and occasional long-range shells have caused damage in Viipuri almost from the start of the war, the concentrated attacks of the Red grand offensive from Feb. 12 to Feb. 20 damaged practically every building in the city.

Here a building stands without a roof. There one teeters with its sides ripped off. Little more than the cross remains of what was once a church. Household effects and wares from shattered shops litter the streets.

It is toward this city that the Russians are driving.

Russian Attacks Continue

"On Feb. 25," said today's Finnish communique after mentioning loss of the Koivisto Islands, "the enemy continued his attacks on the western part of the Isthmus. The attacks were checked by fire from our artillery and infantry, and the enemy suffered heavy loss in men. At Salmenkaita enemy attacks were repulsed after fighting which lasted the whole day."

The day "passed quietly" on the eastern part of the isthmus, where the Russians last week launched fierce offensives, the Finns said.

Little was reported from other war fronts. The Finns said they captured a "strong point" near Kuhmo, near the eastern end of Finland's narrow "waist," and "destroyed" a company of Russians there. They also said their airmen, engaging in "a number of successful air fights," shot down five Russian planes.

Senator Nye's Wife To Seek Divorce

Washington, Feb. 26 (AP) — Mrs. Gerald P. Nye, wife of the North Dakota senator, intends to seek a divorce.

She said today that the petition would be filed this week, but would not discuss details of her plans. Nye was out of the city.

Senator and Mrs. Nye have been living apart since last fall. Mrs. Nye is the former Anna Margaret Munch of St. Joseph, Mo. She married Nye, at that time an Iowa newspaperman, in 1916. They have three children.

Nye, a Republican, has been a member of the Senate since 1925.

Meadville, Pa., Feb. 26 (AP) — Senator Gerald P. Nye (R-ND) said tonight it was "no surprise" to learn his wife had announced she would file a divorce action later this week in Washington.

"We have been separated for some time," he explained, adding crisply he had "absolutely no comment" to make further.

Norris Compares FBI with OGPU And Gestapo, Asks Investigation

Washington, Feb. 26 (AP)—Senator Norris (Ind-Neb) placed in the congressional record today an editorial which described J. Edgar Hoover's Federal Bureau of Investigation as an "American Ogpu."

The Nebraskan brought up the subject a short time before the Senate passed an appropriation bill carrying slightly more than $9,500,000 for the bureau.

"Frankly, I am worried about the activities of this bureau," he told the chamber. "I must confess, to begin with, that I have no concrete evidence which I could offer in court to sustain the position which I take. Yet it seems to me this is a subject which ought to be looked into."

Objects to Expenses

Norris expressed doubt that the bureau could, under the law, utilize all the money appropriated for it. Senator McKeller (D-Tenn) observed that $2,488,000 of the total represented emergency items "pure and simple."

The veteran independent went on to say that the editorial which he put into the record was from "The New Republic," which he added was ordinarily careful to investigate facts before publishing them.

In many newspapers, Norris continued, he had read statements to the effect that methods resorted to by representatives of the bureau were, "to say the least, rather abhorrent to one who believes in constitutional liberty."

Arrests in Detroit

For instance, he said, it had been alleged that a large number of persons had been arrested at night in Detroit, charged with assisting persons to enlist in the Loyalist army in Spain.

"That, as I understand it, is a technical crime, a statutory crime; but it doesn't imply any maliciousness, anything that's mean."

Yet, Norris continued, those arrested were handcuffed "and in that condition taken to the common jail."

"If these charges are only partially true, it is a matter of taking the law into their own hands and punishing people who are not convicted of a crime, who are not charged with anything which has attached to it any element of criminality."

Drastic Methods Used

The "New Republic" editorial said methods like those of the Russian Ogpu and German Gestapo had been used by the Federal Bureau of Investigation against veterans of the Abraham Lincoln brigade between February 6 and 10 in New York, and that at the same time the FBI launched raids against this organization in Detroit and Milwaukee.

Indictments were returned recently in Detroit against sixteen persons accused of assisting the enlistment of Americans in the Spanish Loyalist army. Robert H. Jackson, the new attorney general, recommended subsequently that the indictments be dismissed.

Russian Ambassador Assured of Funds

Washington, Feb. 26. (AP)—The Senate refused late today to withhold funds for maintenance of the United States ambassador to Russia.

Senator Lodge (R-Mass) asked that the ambassador's $17,500 annual allotment be stricken from the $107,079,000 appropriation bill for the state, justice and commerce departments.

Parents Should Let Children Do Own Home Work

Teachers Should Not Assign Written Work to Be Done at Home

A Junior high school teacher writes:

"We teachers have had trouble with parents who actually do the work for the child and expect the child to get credit for it. One boy's parents asked to have him changed to another school because some of his teachers refused to give credit for the work done by the mother. This child brought perfect papers to school but was an absolute failure in class work and tests."

All too many children get good grades on written homework done by their parents. An occasional parent, however, earns poor grades for his child.

In extreme instances, in which the child is overwhelmed by the amount and difficulty of homework assignment, the parent might be justified as a humane measure, in doing a bit of the child's work for him. However, for the child to get a grade at school for work he had not done himself is morally hazardous.

Shouldn't Assign It

Teachers should not, as a rule, assign written work to be done at home and then graded at school This procedure tempts too many parents and classmates to do school work for the pupil at home. When a paper is prepared at home, the student might well be asked at school to summarize it, or give its salient points from memory. If it is a problem in mathematics, he should be expected to be ready at school to solve it without the aid of his written work.

Some wise teachers of English urge the student to outline a theme at home, getting any help he can, and then write it in the classroom. Some teachers of foreign language have applied the same principle.

Won't Prepare Work

Of course, many a youth will not prepare his work outside of class unless he must hand in definite written assignments. I know some good teachers who require a small amount of such written work to be handed in, but often this assignment is too long. The student is penalized in grades if he does not hand it in and on time, although he is not graded on this work.

The trend is to require less written work outside of class. In those assignments given the emphasis is on work which appeals to the student's resourcefulness and which exercises appreciations and skills, knowledge which can be revealed through brief tests of projects of creation in the classroom.

Another trend is toward few or no home assignments below the fifth or sixth grade, and more reasonable amounts thereafter. It is not homework itself that needs condemnation; it is the excessive amount of it given by a few teachers. Unless the school day is lengthened so that students in junior and senior high schools will have ample time for study at school, homework can hardly be dispensed with by the secondary school which has an ambition to maintain high standards of scholarship.

3 Policemen Hear Order for Own Arrests

Denver, Colo., Feb. 26 (AP)—Three Denver detectives heard the police radio order them to arrest themselves as prowlers.

A housewife 'phoned there was a strange man in the neighborhood. The detectives were gathered beside their car comparing notes on the futile hunt when the radio dispatcher said that the housewife reported there were three suspicious looking men in front of her house.

"Why that's us," said one of the detectives So they drove off quickly before two cars of policemen arrived.

Your Federal Income Tax

Deductions for Tax on Motor Gas Are Explained

If an automobile is used for both business and pleasure, those maintenance and operating expenses which constitute allowable deductions for federal income-tax purposes should be allocated to the two uses on the basis of the time the car is used for each. For example, if the total expense of operation and maintenance, plus depreciation, for the taxable year amounted to $800, and the car was used three-fourths of the time for business and the balance of the time for pleasure, the allowable deduction, for Federal income-tax purposes, would be $600.

In general, taxes are deductible only by the person upon whom they are imposed and by whom they are paid. If a law imposing a tax on gasoline by its terms imposes the tax on the consumers and not on the dealer, the consumer may deduct as a tax, for federal income-tax purposes, the amount of the gasoline tax paid by him; but the taxpayer must have kept records of the payment of such taxes in order that the deduction may be substantiated as is required by the law and the regulations. The federal gasoline tax is not deductible by the consumer. The taxpayer may ascertain whether a state gasoline tax is deductible by the consumer or by the dealer by addressing an inquiry to the collector of internal revenue for his district.

In any case where the gasoline purchased is used for business purposes, the tax may be regarded as a part of the cost of the gasoline and deducted as a business expense; but in such case the gasoline tax cannot be deducted separately as a tax under the item of taxes.

Wrongful Anyway

THE EXCESSIVE BURDEN of the increased state income tax has again come into public notice by reason of the answer filed by William C. Walsh, attorney general of the state, in his capacity as attorney for the state comptroller in two suits attacking its validity.

This is a rather painful subject, which will come to the mind of every earner in Maryland with greater stress as the time narrows in which the income tax blanks must be prepared for filing with remittances. Undoubtedly when the severity of the impost thus becomes more generally realized and appreciated, the clamor against it will be louder.

The tax has been attacked in two cases. In both it is alleged that the tax deprives citizens of property without due process of law in violation of the Fourteenth amendment to the federal constitution. Both also contend that the tax is illegal because it was defeated by the voters of the state when it was proposed as an amendment to the state constitution.

The attorney general holds that the "mere fact that the said proposed amendment to the state constitution was not approved by the people of Maryland can have no bearing upon the question of the validity of the acts of the General Assembly in 1839." Nor can that vote, he holds, "restrict the powers of the state of Maryland to pass laws in conformity with the constitution of the state." He denies that it is "unreasonable" or an "arbitrary discrimination" and that it is well within the uniformity of classification decreed by the state constitution. The attorney general also denies in toto the contention that the tax law infringes upon the federal constitution.

These contentions pro and con are now headed for a court test, which will likely not be determined before the collection of the tax is begun in view of which possibility it is regrettable that the issues have not been resolved ere this.

Possibly the attorney general is correct in his interpretation as to the right of the legislature to impose such a tax and of the state to enforce it. But as to the moral justice as well as the practicability of inflicting it in further encroachment of a federal field of taxation and particularly in defiance of the duly registered wishes of the citizens, it can safely be said that a great majority of the people feel that it is a wrongful as well as an unduly burdensome exaction that will prove a most unfortunate hindrance to the well-being, economy and progress of the state. The responsibility for this burdensome tax lies clearly upon a Democratic administration and its legislature, and this is a fact which should be kept in mind by citizens regardless of the outcome of the pending court cases.

Better Fire Inspection

ANOTHER COSTLY FIRE in the business district of Cumberland suggests the advisability of more frequent and more thorough fire hazard inspections in the section.

Fortunately the blaze that ruined the interior of the Liberty theater caused no personal injuries. The evacuation was as orderly and devoid of panic as could have ordinarily been possible. This was due in part to the work of Oscar A. Eyerman, police chief, and Frank Shober, Jr., policeman, who fortunately happened to be on hand; and in part to the presence of mind of many comprising the spectators.

The costly fires the district has suffered within recent weeks have been of undetermined origin, a fact which suggests that unsuspected fire hazards are extant in the district and that they likely could be detected with more rigid fire hazard inspections there.

Such inspections should be made at frequent intervals and they should be thorough. Even though actual hazards may not be discovered, the need of aditional safeguards and preventive methods or devices may be disclosed.

Tommy Corcoran's Way

DYNAMIC TOMMY CORCORAN, fair-haired boy of the New Deal inner circle, is reported to be in high dudgeon over Jerome Frank's refusal to permit the SEC to act as trustee in the receivership of the billion dollar Associated Gas and Electric Corporation.

Tommy, it is reported in usually well-informed circles, had cooksd up a plan to have the SEC take over the huge holding company and reorganize it as a "model" for all others.

Why? Perhaps the answer is to be found in the following excerpt from Raymond Moley's book, After Seven Years, in which Moley recounts a conversation he had with Tommy in November, 1936.

"I turned to the subject of utilities," it states. "Tom assured me that the utilities were 'licked.' I asked whether that meant that the T . V. A. was going to try to take over the Commonwealth and Southern.

" 'You're damned right it will—and all the rest of them, too.' Tom said.

"You realize what that means?"

" 'Well, we're going to squeeze them for a couple of years, at any rate,' Tom said.

"I remarked that you don't do that kind of thing 'for a couple of years.' If you did it, it stayed done.

" 'Yes, I suppose so,' was the answer. "It won't come fast, but twenty years from now the government will own and operate all the electric utilities in the country.' "

Is it any wonder that corporations fear to take the risks involved in expansion or even in the replacement of obsolete equipment?

More Basic

REPORTS from Washington state that the Labor Board investigating comittee will recommend a change in board membership and a general shakeup among its lesser officials as a result of the "extra-legal" activity on the part of the agency.

There is little question that a fairer-minded Labor board would do a better job of administering the Wagner act, but a shakeup in personnel would not reach the root of the evil. The trouble with the Labor board lies far deeper than personnel and its attitude. It lies within the system itself. A board purge might furnish some temporary relief, but it would not be permanent.

On all sides there are heard suggestions for amendments designed to improve the work of the board. Even those who have been regarded as most friendly toward it are out with proposed alterations. The divided ranks of Labor itself each has a set of proposals. Organizations by the hundreds all over the country are crying for changes. It is no argument against revision to point to certain boasted good results obtained under the act because there is no purpose on the part of revisionists to prevent such results or to avoid bringing them about in the future. In fact, their object is to have more of them.

With all this hue and cry, it is plain that there are fundamental errors, omissions in the act that should be corrected and supplied.

So Swings the Circle

FROM NOW ON women are going to be women. "The new fashions are divinely alluring, feminine and elegantly modest," says the editor of a popular woman's magazine in a broadcast from Paris, as she discusses the Paris openings of 1940.

"I feel that modesty has a new sex appeal," Mrs. Carmel Snow says. "I found emphasized, too, that it is not the fashion any longer to be dramatic in your dressing. Impertinent chic that was so chic is now as dead as the dodo. I notice a new coquetry in French women. They are dressing for one man, not for many. It's the new and interesting sophistication."

It is impossible to go into detail about the alluring blouses, the silhouettes, Molyneaux for day and Schiaparelli for evening, the hips that melt away by day and the curves under candlelight, the "exciting colors" and all the other tricks of style, the halo hats and the rest of the frippery.

But if the style magnates will again make women to be "divinely alluring, feminine and elegantly modest," mere man shall be deeply indebted and deeply grateful, and as worshipful as ever.

Power of Persuasion

ONE of the most essential elements in success is the ability to talk and write in a persuasive way. A man may be a wonder in the work he does and the service he renders. But if he is not able to convince people of the merits of his work and the goods he sells, he may not attain much success.

Nor is it necessary that a person be an eloquent talker or a gifted writer to gain this power. The facts comprise the thing that has the most persuasive force. If a merchant has an article which usually sells for a dollar, but which for some special reason he is willing to sell for seventy-five cents, this fact has all the persuasive power imaginable.

All he has to do is to state it in a newspaper advertisement, and add a few words telling why and how he has decided to make this offer. Such facts count more in any business message than eloquence.

A Midwest editor writes Mr. Farley that he favors the idea of issuing commemorative stamps but sees no reason why they should measure only a few inches short of the billboard posters. "Lick a few of them yourself," he advises, "and you will see what I mean."

A reckless driver, opines the man at the next desk, is the fellow who insists on doing sixty miles an hour or bust. And sometimes does both.

The Japanese have announced that they have conquered China. Which is, so far, the year's high in wishful thinking.

Practical jokes, according to an item, show expansive humor. And if the joke backfires — expensive, too.

Are You an Anythingarian?

By MARSHALL MASLIN

That's an odd word! I found it in an old dictionary, but I can't find it in the new ones.

It's out. It isn't being used any more. But it used to mean anyone who is 'anything' in belief — "one who professes no particular creed."

Marshall Maslin

No wonder it died on the vine of life. It was like one of those ghost towns you come upon in the West —now abandoned because a mine is worked out and people can live there no more. A ghost word.

Naturally, anythingarianism died. The anythingarian didn't have any visible means of support, he had no underpinning of faith, no reenforcement of the spirit. He was tired before he started, tried to believe in anything and ended by believing in nothing.

But you can't believe in just any old thing in THIS life. You can't be too many things. You must be one thing or the other.

"Anythingarianism" reminds me of a wonderful pocket knife I used to have. I was big, it bulged out my back pocket and wore a hole in my pants. That enormous knife, bigger than a double note harmonica, was fifteen tools in one. It had six blades and was a pair of pliers, a scissors, a screwdriver, a file, an awl, a can opener, a drill, a wrench, and a corkscrew. When I bought it I was proud. I thought it could do ANYTHING and EVERYTHING.

But when I tried to use it, I found it could do practically NOTHING. At least, it did nothing well. Instead of being an anythingarian treasurer, it was a nothingarian nuisance.

And that's what we are when we try to be anythingarian human beings. . . . We must point our lives toward a few things, if we want to get anything worth while out of living. We must weed our minds as we weed a garden. . . . If you don't believe in another world, you must believe in this one. If you can't believe in the immortality of your soul, you must believe in the beautiful usefulness of the body you have borrowed for these few years. . . . You CANNOT be an anythingarian!

Modern Stateism Sinks Chivalry

By EDWIN C. HILL

Edwin C. Hill

I remember that many years ago, a clever Chicago newspaper reporter made a wonderful yarn about a scientific process that re-assembled the dust of William Shakespeare. The bard got a job on a Chicago newspaper and was assigned to cover a prizefight. His Elizabethan tale of the clouting and thewhacking made quaint reading but then for some reason they had the scientists put William in reverse and send him back to his historic abiding place.

The lusty modernity of Chicago invites such dramatic contrasts. Here's a run-of-the-mill citizen, one William F. Gailing, who goes out into State street clad in shining knightly armor, to assail the dragons of municipal corruption. No longer can one say the Republicans never think up anything new. Mr. Gailing is a candidate for Republican committeeman. He had a beautiful scarlet and gold sash and a shining broadsword. He greatly impressed the street corner crowd which he harangued.

Down into Present

The harsh dissonance of Wagner's "Parsifal" has projected knighthood far down into our dragonless day—a day, however in which, we still fight chimeras. Knighthood, of course, goes better in a world of eternal verities, which is exactly what this one isn't, but we never had quite abandoned the idyll of virtue eternally triumphant. Such was Alfred Tennyson's placid Victorian world, behind the hawthorne hedges, as he wrote the Arthurian cycle and the nations moved in stately progress to the "parliament of mankind."

Cervantes debunked knighthood in "Don Quixote,"—but did he really? There is epic tragedy in the scarecrow Don, on his sway-backed old Rosinante, tilting at windmills, followed by his dumb but faithful Sancho Panza. Sancho really had more sense than his master, making some shrewd decisions in his brief turn at governing his "island," clear, for once, of his master's romantic foolishness. But the tragedy remains. Don Quixote was a tatterdemalion warrior for a lost cause that won't stay lost.

Other Knights

Just as we started writing this, we caught on the radio Jeff Davis, the "King of the Hoboes," and his theme was "The Knights of the Road." That started thoughts of the "Knights of Labor," which grew into the American Federation of Labor, and of old Carl Brown, their Don Quixote. Old Carl had kidded himself into knightly demeanor. He was a dragon slayer, if there ever was one, but kindly and patient, knowing that in due time the shining legions of labor would joust with their enemies and rout them handsomely. Carl grew old in a make-believe seat in the California Legislature, with the law-makers rendering his mock deference, as the lords gave Don Quixote, and allowing him to sleep in the Capitol basement. He died there, serenely, secure in his faith that a new Galahad of labor was at hand.

On Opposite Sides

Edmund Burke said, in effect, that chivalry was nonsense, and that the world progressed to the degree that it got rid of such foolishness. There is no place for chivalry in Machiavelli's coldly cynical exposition of power politics, nor in Napoleon's ruthless re-ordering of world destiny.

It is interesting to note that the modern sovereign state is new in history and pressed forward just as Machiavelli brilliantly enunciated his cold-blooded rubric of force and cunning. The high priests of European statesmanship exercised Machiavelli's teachings with bell, book and candle, and the grand panjandrums of the various states eagerly took every tip he gave them. The modern state is the result, and it is clearly observable that as the state rose, chivalry sank, as if they were on opposite ends of a tetter-totter.

The Menace of Today

And, Herbert Hoover is dead right when he says the world menace of today is hungry, insatiable, all-devouring stateism. Chaucer's "very parfaith gentle knight" would get lost in the subway today and be forgotten. But if, perchance, he is reincarnate in the person of William F. Gailing, of Chicago, we may pause a moment and remember that the man of chivalry had at least one loyalty that was more important to him than his life or his job. And he didn't mind sticking his neck out, even if he did encase it in chain-mail. Maybe more of us will have to practice this forgotten art before things get much better.—Copyright, 1940, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

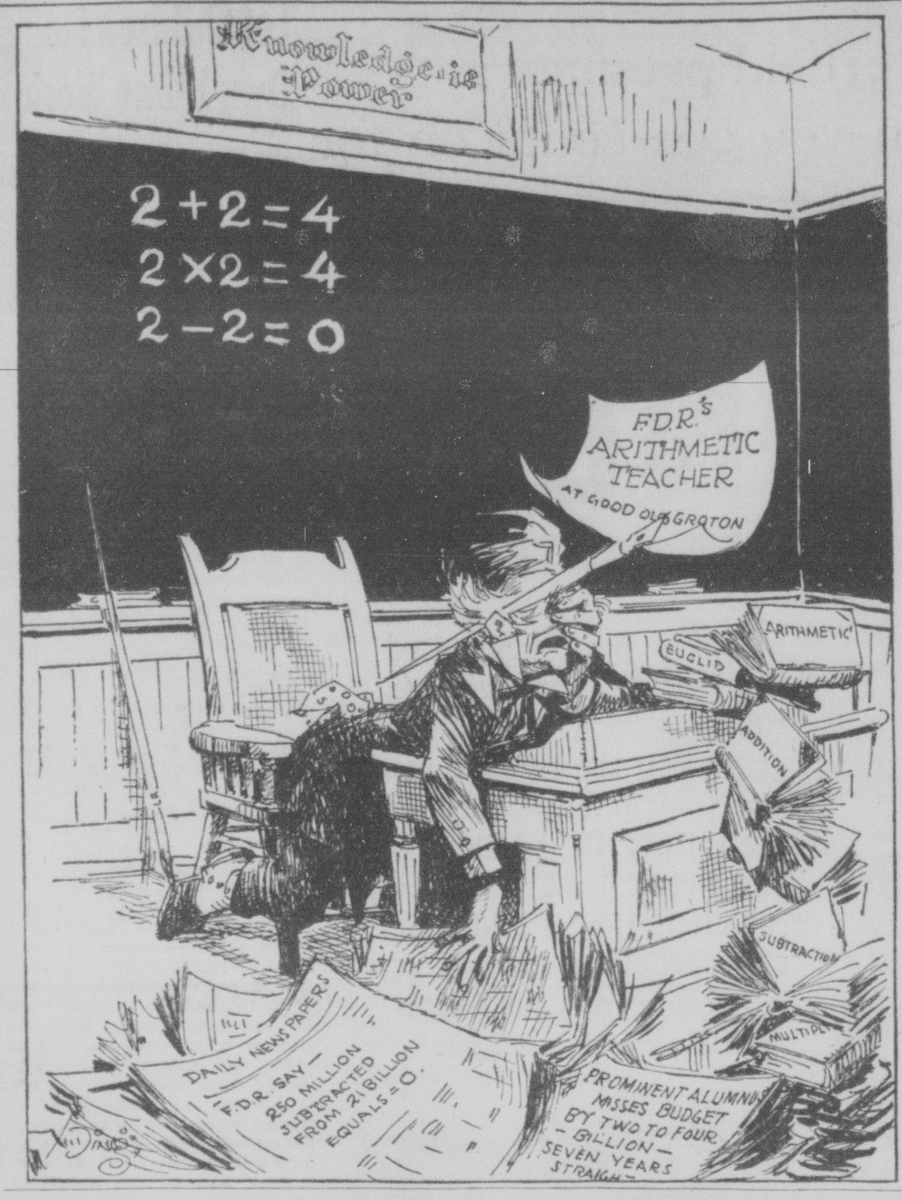
FOUND AT LAST--F. D. R.'S FORGOTTEN MAN



Fortune Tellers and Clairvoyants Are In for a Rough Time in Washington

By CHARLES P. STEWART
Central Press Columnist

William Schulte

The House of Representatives' District of Columbia committee is just starting an investigation of the activities of clairvoyants, fortune tellers, palmists and miscellaneously occult folk in Washington. Most city governments treat crew pretty much as vagrants—chase 'em out of town, in fact. The national capital, however, never has interfered with them. Consequently they've done a land-office business for years on the District's bank of the Potomac. They range all the way from Gipsy crystal gazers to semi-scientists.

An investigation of 'em isn't governmentally important, but it's funny.

Such a congressional quiz was conducted several years ago, but it petered out without any definite steps having been taken to regulate the profession. Now another inquisition has been voted, under the chairmanship of Representative William A. Schulte, of Indiana, to take up the work, for whatever it may amount to.

Harry Houdini

Before the last investigatorial body the late Harry Houdini was the outstanding witness. Houdini was a "wizard," a sleight-of-hand performer. But he laid no claim to supernatural power. He simply said he was a trickester. The others he denounced as mere fakers.

He told his story to that effect and left Washington. Then the regular necromancers cut loose. Houdini was needed back again, to rebut their testimony. The committee wired. He came. Seating himself in the winess chair, he flipped from his pocket, onto the table in front of him, a little wadded up ball of yellow paper, with the remark, "I'll give $1,000 to any medium in this room who'll tell me what's on that paper."

"Why," answered Representative Frank R. Reid of the investigatorial group, "that's the telegram we sent to you, asking you to reappear before us." "Houdini started violently. "I said," he exclaimed, "that I'd pay it to any 'MEDIUM.' " "Well," instantly cried Red, "I'm a medium. I always knew I had that occult power. Where's my $1,000.

Reid never got his $1,000, but the incident spoiled that ivestigation.

Astrology

There was a celebrated astrologist in Washington — "Madame Marcia." She was in close touch with Mrs. William McKinley and professed to have foreseen the McKinley assassination. Superstitious folk believed it. I knew her. She lived up on U street. She said she didn't much believe in spiritualism—the "spirits," she admitted, had a tendency to fool you. But the stars, she alleged, are infallible.

Professor Marcus Lamar, another professional, verged on being a genuine psychologist. He'd put on a spiritualistic performance if a customer insisted on it, but he much preferred to study an applicant's mentality and personality and then give his patrons the advice that he honestly believed best adapted to the latter's especial requirements. I once saw and heard him conducting one of these investigations. Upon its conclusion his visitor said, "Yes, but what'll I do?"

This fretted the professor. "How the heck," he exclaimed angrily, "do I know what you'll do? All I can tell you is what you OUGHT to do." There isn't much faking about that kind of business.

It's often stated that a good many congressmen are patrons of the capital's necromancers. I asked Professor Lamar if this was true. "One thousand times no," he rejoined. "They're too sophisticated to believe in ghosts and too conceited to consult a really competent adviser."

Investigator Schulte

Representative William T. Schulte, of Indiana, is in charge of the impending inquiry.

Shulte will do a good job of it. He was a magician himself before he got into politics—a legitimate sleight-of-hand performer, like Houdini; a showman; not a bogus soothsayer. He's still a paid-up member of the International Alliance of Theatrical Employes.

"We're going to get rid of this bunk, legerdemain and alleged mind-reading in Washington," he promises. "It's been rampant too long already."

The last bunch of investigators' weakneess was that they weren't well enough acquainted with the game they were trying to investigate. They couldn't see through the tricks that were played on them. The trickesters, however, can't put anything over on Bill Schulte.

What People Want Most

From the New York Herald Tribune

If the "necessaries of life" are the things man is determined to have—most of them are unnecessary. What commodities do people really want so much that they are provided verywhere? Simple nourishing food? In the most primitive places, on the loneliest roads, beer, pop and tobacco are for sale but a plain meal would be unheard-of luxury, and what little food can be bought is greasy and deceptively seasoned. Clean air to breathe? From tepee and igloo to the overstuffed hotel, warm air has been desired in winter and coild air in summer, but that to be fresh is so generally a matter of indifference that ventilation only yesterday became a task of architects, and the melodorous problems of monoxide, of street washing, garbage disposal and soot reduction agitate the public less than do briefly delayed traffic or letters. Quiet? The retort is—listen! national (or even local) statistics speak. Modern civilization had every other elegance of life before it troubled to devise baths as good as the Pompeians. No—food, air, peace, cleanliness are obviously not the prime desirerata.

What, then is indispensable to recent well-being? Ice. You can get it where you cannot get safe water. Electricity. The world is sown with towns which possess a power plant and not one bath—where every child has seen the latest films and no one has ever washed clothes in warm water—where there are mechanical fans and amplifiers but no sewers. Tobacco and liquor. They can be bought when a quest for bread, eggs, milk or vegetables would bring laughter. Motion pictures. They are given regularly in centers where no books are seen and newspapers are prized only for wrapping. Automobiles. The families often have more than one in places lacking ten miles of road to run them on. And first and last, radioes. Here end the necessaries of this our life, from Greenland's icy mountains, to India's carol strand.

One may prove it by thronging memories of mildewed manors, prosperous, bookless farms, the dull city with shining streets and amusement "palaces," the high highway sausage. But if food, water, air, baths, quiet, reading, comfortable clothes and sleep are not primarily sought by man, neither is mere shelter even! The census which Mexico is now taking has just revealed that a town on the east coast has 10,046 inhabitants, 412 houses and 363 radios. That settles the question.

More Federal Control Opposed

From the Parkersburg, W. Va., Sentinel

Pennsylvania grade oil operators are strong in their opposition to federal control of the petroleum industry as embodied in the bill of Congressman Cole, of Maryland, which would establish an oil commissioner with power to regulate the industry. Governor James, of Pennsylvania, is the latest person of influence to come out in opposition to this "invasion of state's rights." West Virginia is among the oil producing states which is strongly against federal regulation.

American investors have put millions of dollars into the oil industry and they have made all petroleum products so cheap to the consuming public that motoring in America is far more general than it is in any other country on the globe. The oil industry under private control gives employment to at least a million persons and their wages average as high or higher than that of any industry of comparable size.

There is absolutely no necessity for federal control of the oil industry. Governor James made the truthful statement that so far as Pennsylvania is concerned there is no waste. He said "We have done the greatest work of reclamation in the last five or six years of any of the oil fields in the United States."

On the Record

By Governor Arthur H. James, of Pennsylvania

Today, I believe the biggest news in Pennsylvania is that we have found jobs. So successful have been out efforts that by the end of 1939 private employment had absorbed one in three of those who were on direct assistance and made work-relief at the beginning of the year. In twelve months the burden of unemployment in Pennsylvania has been reduced 34 per cent. We have every right to be proud of that progress.

Railroads Are Getting Better

By HUGH S. JOHNSON

Peoria, Ill., Feb. 26—Are the railroads being dirven out by air, motor and water competition? It would be a pity in both sentiment and practice.

Maybe a railroad train ripping through the night isn't as romantic to everybody as the "way of a ship on the sea"—but it is to me. That may be a holdover from boyhood. To kids of my generation before the automobile and airplanes, a steam locomotive was the fastest and most powerful thing that moved. If there was any boy of that time who didn't dream of being a railroad man, I didn't meet him.

Hugh Johnson

A good deal of that remains. The most popular boys' toy is an 'lectric train. It's principal drawback for the kid frequently is that his father plays with it too much to permit its full enjoyment. Apparently railroads still rate romantically with the younger generation.

An Absolute Necessity

In practice there is nothing in sight to replace the railroad network. It is an absolute necessity to our national defense as well as our economic life. The competition of automobiles, trucks, busses and airplanes and water is an annoyance to the railroads. To the extent that it is oversubsidized by taxpayers' money it is unfair. But it has scarcely disturbed the bulk of railroad traffic and it is not at all certain that the railroads can not recover much of what they have lost.

I have just repeated a trip from Chicago to Peoria, Ill., on the Rock Island. I have often made this trip. It took four hours, one change of trains and a lot of bumping stuffiness. This time it took two hours and forty minutes straight through in comfort and smoothness and convenience equal to those of a well appointed yacht.

Are Money Makers

Of course, I am talking about one of those new light streamlined, rubber-cushioned, air-conditioned, Diesel engined super-trains. Enough has been written in praise of these new comforts, in this and other columns and that isn't the point of this piece.

What I didn't know until Mr. Farrington, chief of Rock Island operations, told me yesterday is that in spite of original cost of all this streamlined stuff, these trains are all goldmines as moneymakers. Direct operating costs are cut in half.

Recapturing Lost Business

That is only the beginning of advantage. With increased speed and far superior comfort at present low fares, they are not only increasing total travel but also recapturing much if not all the traffic lost to busses, trucks and the use of private automobiles. This particular Rock Island "Rocket" makes two round trips a day. On my trip it was comfortably loaded with people, several of whom said that before this train came, it was an almost universal custom to drive their own cars to Chicago and come back next day. Now it is easy to do it all in one day with much less trouble and expense.

It is this kind of development which is rapidly spreading that makes me think the railroads may be coming out of their long illness stronger than ever.

Some Results Recommended

It is a peculiar satisfaction to me, because I helped write the report of the Coolidge National Transportation Committee in 1933. That report recommended exactly the development and prophesied exactly this result. It recommended several other things some of which are in process. Some are not. It urged—elimination of all duplicate and obsolete facilities, of roundabout hauling, and of attempts to compete with other forms of transportation in fields where they are better suited, reorganization of impossible financial structures and, above all, equalization of tax burdens, subsidy benefits and labor regulations as between the railroads and their competitors.

If these recommendations could be put into effect, the railroads would be as sound as any industry in America.—Distributed by United Feature Syndicate, Inc.

Wrongful Anyway

THE EXCESSIVE BURDEN of the increased state income tax has again come into public notice by reason of the answer filed by William C. Walsh, attorney general of the state, in his capacity as attorney for the state comptroller in two suits attacking its validity.

This is a rather painful subject, which will come to the mind of every earner in Maryland with greater stress as the time narrows in which the income tax blanks must be prepared for filing with remittances. Undoubtedly when the severity of the impost thus becomes more generally realized and appreciated, the clamor against it will be louder.

The tax has been attacked in two cases. In both it is alleged that the tax deprives citizens of property without due process of law in violation of the Fourteenth amendment to the federal constitution. Both also contend that the tax is illegal because it was defeated by the voters of the state when it was proposed as an amendment to the state constitution.

The attorney general holds that the "mere fact that the said proposed amendment to the state constitution was not approved by the people of Maryland can have no bearing upon the question of the validity of the acts of the General Assembly in 1839." Nor can that vote, he holds, "restrict the powers of the state of Maryland to pass laws in conformity with the constitution of the state." He denies that it is "unreasonable" or an "arbitrary discrimination" and that it is well within the uniformity of classification decreed by the state constitution. The attorney general also denies in toto the contention that the tax law infringes upon the federal constitution.

These contentions pro and con are now headed for a court test, which will likely not be determined before the collection of the tax is begun in view of which possibility it is regrettable that the issues have not been resolved ere this.

Possibly the attorney general is correct in his interpretation as to the right of the legislature to impose such a tax and of the state to enforce it. But as to the moral justice as well as the practicability of inflicting it in further encroachment of a federal field of taxation and particularly in defiance of the duly registered wishes of the citizens, it can safely be said that a great majority of the people feel that it is a wrongful as well as an unduly burdensome exaction that will prove a most unfortunate hindrance to the well-being, economy and progress of the state. The responsibility for this burdensome tax lies clearly upon a Democratic administration and its legislature, and this is a fact which should be kept in mind by citizens regardless of the outcome of the pending court cases.

Better Fire Inspection

ANOTHER COSTLY FIRE in the business district of Cumberland suggests the advisability of more frequent and more thorough fire hazard inspections in the section.

Fortunately the blaze that ruined the interior of the Liberty theater caused no personal injuries. The evacuation was as orderly and devoid of panic as could have ordinarily been possible. This was due in part to the work of Oscar A. Eyerman, police chief, and Frank Shober, Jr., policeman, who fortunately happened to be on hand; and in part to the presence of mind of many comprising the spectators.

The costly fires the district has suffered within recent weeks have been of undetermined origin, a fact which suggests that unsuspected fire hazards are extant in the district and that they likely could be detected with more rigid fire hazard inspections there.

Such inspections should be made at frequent intervals and they should be thorough. Even though actual hazards may not be discovered, the need of aditional safeguards and preventive methods or devices may be disclosed.

Tommy Corcoran's Way

DYNAMIC TOMMY CORCORAN, fair-haired boy of the New Deal inner circle, is reported to be in high dudgeon over Jerome Frank's refusal to permit the SEC to act as trustee in the receivership of the billion dollar Associated Gas and Electric Corporation.

Tommy, it is reported in usually well-informed circles, had cooksd up a plan to have the SEC take over the huge holding company and reorganize it as a "model" for all others.

Why? Perhaps the answer is to be found in the following excerpt from Raymond Moley's book, After Seven Years, in which Moley recounts a conversation he had with Tommy in November, 1936.

"I turned to the subject of utilities," it states. "Tom assured me that the utilities were 'licked.' I asked whether that meant that the T . V. A. was going to try to take over the Commonwealth and Southern.

" 'You're damned right it will—and all the rest of them, too.' Tom said.

"You realize what that means?"

" 'Well, we're going to squeeze them for a couple of years, at any rate,' Tom said.

"I remarked that you don't do that kind of thing 'for a couple of years.' If you did it, it stayed done.

" 'Yes, I suppose so,' was the answer. "It won't come fast, but twenty years from now the government will own and operate all the electric utilities in the country.' "

Is it any wonder that corporations fear to take the risks involved in expansion or even in the replacement of obsolete equipment?

More Basic

REPORTS from Washington state that the Labor Board investigating comittee will recommend a change in board membership and a general shakeup among its lesser officials as a result of the "extra-legal" activity on the part of the agency.

There is little question that a fairer-minded Labor board would do a better job of administering the Wagner act, but a shakeup in personnel would not reach the root of the evil. The trouble with the Labor board lies far deeper than personnel and its attitude. It lies within the system itself. A board purge might furnish some temporary relief, but it would not be permanent.

On all sides there are heard suggestions for amendments designed to improve the work of the board. Even those who have been regarded as most friendly toward it are out with proposed alterations. The divided ranks of Labor itself each has a set of proposals. Organizations by the hundreds all over the country are crying for changes. It is no argument against revision to point to certain boasted good results obtained under the act because there is no purpose on the part of revisionists to prevent such results or to avoid bringing them about in the future. In fact, their object is to have more of them.

With all this hue and cry, it is plain that there are fundamental errors, omissions in the act that should be corrected and supplied.

So Swings the Circle

FROM NOW ON women are going to be women. "The new fashions are divinely alluring, feminine and elegantly modest," says the editor of a popular woman's magazine in a broadcast from Paris, as she discusses the Paris openings of 1940.

"I feel that modesty has a new sex appeal," Mrs. Carmel Snow says. "I found emphasized, too, that it is not the fashion any longer to be dramatic in your dressing. Impertinent chic that was so chic is now as dead as the dodo. I notice a new coquetry in French women. They are dressing for one man, not for many. It's the new and interesting sophistication."

It is impossible to go into detail about the alluring blouses, the silhouettes, Molyneaux for day and Schiaparelli for evening, the hips that melt away by day and the curves under candlelight, the "exciting colors" and all the other tricks of style, the halo hats and the rest of the frippery.

But if the style magnates will again make women to be "divinely alluring, feminine and elegantly modest," mere man shall be deeply indebted and deeply grateful, and as worshipful as ever.

Power of Persuasion

ONE of the most essential elements in success is the ability to talk and write in a persuasive way. A man may be a wonder in the work he does and the service he renders. But if he is not able to convince people of the merits of his work and the goods he sells, he may not attain much success.

Nor is it necessary that a person be an eloquent talker or a gifted writer to gain this power. The facts comprise the thing that has the most persuasive force. If a merchant has an article which usually sells for a dollar, but which for some special reason he is willing to sell for seventy-five cents, this fact has all the persuasive power imaginable.

All he has to do is to state it in a newspaper advertisement, and add a few words telling why and how he has decided to make this offer. Such facts count more in any business message than eloquence.

A Midwest editor writes Mr. Farley that he favors the idea of issuing commemorative stamps but sees no reason why they should measure only a few inches short of the billboard posters. "Lick a few of them yourself," he advises, "and you will see what I mean."

A reckless driver, opines the man at the next desk, is the fellow who insists on doing sixty miles an hour or bust. And sometimes does both.

The Japanese have announced that they have conquered China. Which is, so far, the year's high in wishful thinking.

Practical jokes, according to an item, show expansive humor. And if the joke backfires — expensive, too.

Other Knights

Just as we started writing this, we caught on the radio Jeff Davis, the "King of the Hoboes," and his theme was "The Knights of the Road." That started thoughts of the "Knights of Labor," which grew into the American Federation of Labor, and of old Carl Brown, their Don Quixote. Old Carl had kidded himself into knightly demeanor. He was a dragon slayer, if there ever was one, but kindly and patient, knowing that in due time the shining legions of labor would joust with their enemies and rout them handsomely. Carl grew old in a make-believe seat in the California Legislature, with the law-makers rendering his mock deference, as the lords gave Don Quixote, and allowing him to sleep in the Capitol basement. He died there, serenely, secure in his faith that a new Galahad of labor was at hand.

On Opposite Sides

Edmund Burke said, in effect, that chivalry was nonsense, and that the world progressed to the degree that it got rid of such foolishness. There is no place for chivalry in Machiavelli's coldly cynical exposition of power politics, nor in Napoleon's ruthless re-ordering of world destiny.

It is interesting to note that the modern sovereign state is new in history and pressed forward just as Machiavelli brilliantly enunciated his cold-blooded rubric of force and cunning. The high priests of European statesmanship exercised Machiavelli's teachings with bell, book and candle, and the grand panjandrums of the various states eagerly took every tip he gave them. The modern state is the result, and it is clearly observable that as the state rose, chivalry sank, as if they were on opposite ends of a tetter-totter.

The Menace of Today

And, Herbert Hoover is dead right when he says the world menace of today is hungry, insatiable, all-devouring stateism. Chaucer's "very parfaith gentle knight" would get lost in the subway today and be forgotten. But if, perchance, he is reincarnate in the person of William F. Gailing, of Chicago, we may pause a moment and remember that the man of chivalry had at least one loyalty that was more important to him than his life or his job. And he didn't mind sticking his neck out, even if he did encase it in chain-mail. Maybe more of us will have to practice this forgotten art before things get much better.—Copyright, 1940, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

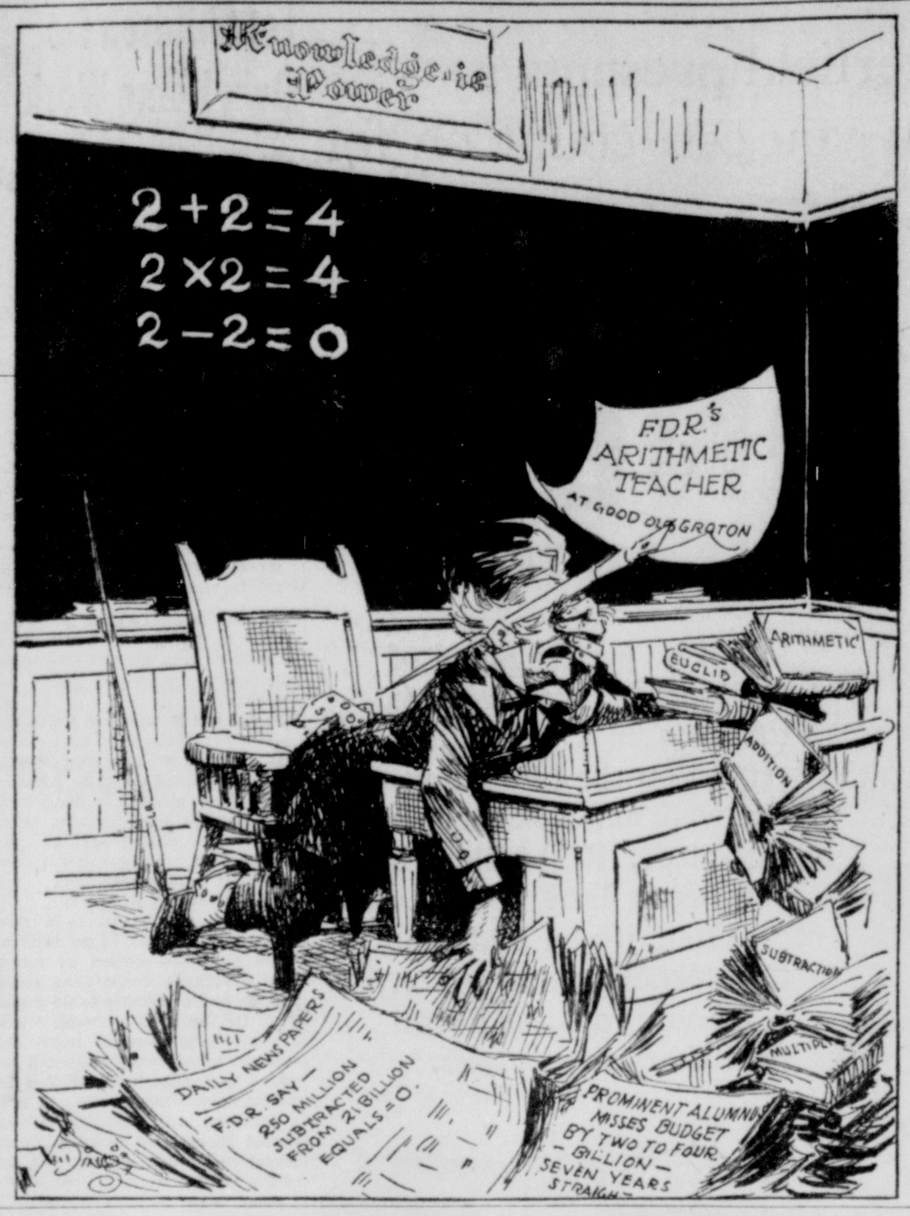
FOUND AT LAST--F. D. R.'S FORGOTTEN MAN



Fortune Tellers and Clairvoyants Are In for a Rough Time in Washington

Central Press Columnist

The House of Representatives' District of Columbia committee is just starting an investigation of the activities of clairvoyants, fortune tellers, palmists and miscellaneously occult folk in Washington. Most city governments treat crew pretty much as vagrants—chase 'em out of town, in fact. The national capital, however, never has interfered with them. Consequently they've done a land-office business for years on the District's bank of the Potomac. They range all the way from Gipsy crystal gazers to semi-scientists.

William Schulte

An investigation of 'em isn't governmentally important, but it's funny.

Such a congressional quiz was conducted several years ago, but it petered out without any definite steps having been taken to regulate the profession. Now another inquisition has been voted, under the chairmanship of Representative William A. Schulte, of Indiana, to take up the work, for whatever it may amount to.

Harry Houdini

Before the last investigatorial body the late Harry Houdini was the outstanding witness. Houdini was a "wizard," a sleight-of-hand performer. But he laid no claim to supernatural power. He simply said he was a trickester. The others he denounced as mere fakers.

He told his story to that effect and left Washington. Then the regular necromancers cut loose. Houdini was needed back again, to rebut their testimony. The committee wired. He came. Seating himself in the winess chair, he flipped from his pocket, onto the table in front of him, a little wadded up ball of yellow paper, with the remark, "I'll give $1,000 to any medium in this room who'll tell me what's on that paper."

"Why," answered Representative Frank R. Reid of the investigatorial group, "that's the telegram we sent to you, asking you to reappear before us." "Houdini started violently. "I said," he exclaimed, "that I'd pay it to any 'MEDIUM.' " "Well," instantly cried Red, "I'm a medium. I always knew I had that occult power. Where's my $1,000.

Reid never got his $1,000, but the incident spoiled that ivestigation.

Astrology

There was a celebrated astrologist in Washington — "Madame Marcia." She was in close touch with Mrs. William McKinley and professed to have foreseen the McKinley assassination. Superstitious folk believed it. I knew her. She lived up on U street. She said she didn't much believe in spiritualism—the "spirits," she admitted, had a tendency to fool you. But the stars, she alleged, are infallible.

Professor Marcus Lamar, another professional, verged on being a genuine psychologist. He'd put on a spiritualistic performance if a customer insisted on it, but he much preferred to study an applicant's mentality and personality and then give his patrons the advice that he honestly believed best adapted to the latter's especial requirements. I once saw and heard him conducting one of these investigations. Upon its conclusion his visitor said, "Yes, but what'll I do?"

This fretted the professor. "How the heck," he exclaimed angrily, "do I know what you'll do? All I can tell you is what you OUGHT to do." There isn't much faking about that kind of business.

It's often stated that a good many congressmen are patrons of the capital's necromancers. I asked Professor Lamar if this was true. "One thousand times no," he rejoined. "They're too sophisticated to believe in ghosts and too conceited to consult a really competent adviser."

Investigator Schulte

Representative William T. Schulte, of Indiana, is in charge of the impending inquiry.

Shulte will do a good job of it. He was a magician himself before he got into politics—a legitimate sleight-of-hand performer, like Houdini; a showman; not a bogus soothsayer. He's still a paid-up member of the International Alliance of Theatrical Employes.

"We're going to get rid of this bunk, legerdemain and alleged mind-reading in Washington," he promises. "It's been rampant too long already."

The last bunch of investigators' weakneess was that they weren't well enough acquainted with the game they were trying to investigate. They couldn't see through the tricks that were played on them. The trickesters, however, can't put anything over on Bill Schulte.

What People Want Most

From the New York Herald Tribune

If the "necessaries of life" are the things man is determined to have—most of them are unnecessary. What commodities do people really want so much that they are provided verywhere? Simple nourishing food? In the most primitive places, on the loneliest roads, beer, pop and tobacco are for sale but a plain meal would be unheard-of luxury, and what little food can be bought is greasy and deceptively seasoned. Clean air to breathe? From tepee and igloo to the overstuffed hotel, warm air has been desired in winter and colld air in summer, but that to be fresh is so generally a matter of indifference that ventilation only yesterday became a task of architects, and the melodorous problems of monoxide, of street washing, garbage disposal and soot reduction agitate the public less than do briefly delayed traffic or letters. Quiet? The retort is—listen! national (or even local) statistics speak. Modern civilization had every other elegance of life before it troubled to devise baths as good as the Pompeians. No—food, air, peace, cleanliness are obviously not the prime desirerata.

What, then is indispensable to recent well-being? Ice. You can get it where you cannot get safe water. Electricity. The world is sown with towns which possess a power plant and not one bath—where every child has seen the latest films and no one has ever washed clothes in warm water—where there are mechanical fans and amplifiers but no sewers. Tobacco and liquor. They can be bought when a quest for bread, eggs, milk or vegetables would bring laughter. Motion pictures. They are given regularly in centers where no books are seen and newspapers are prized only for wrapping. Automobiles. The families often have more than one in places lacking ten miles of road to run them on. And first and last, radioes. Here end the necessaries of this our life, from Greenland's icy mountains, to India's carol strand.

One may prove it by thronging memories of mildewed manors, prosperous, bookless farms, the dull city with shining streets and amusement "palaces," the high highway sausage. But if food, water, air, baths, quiet, reading, comfortable clothes and sleep are not primarily sought by man, neither is mere shelter even! The census which Mexico is now taking has just revealed that a town on the east coast has 10,046 inhabitants, 412 houses and 363 radios. That settles the question.

More Federal Control Opposed

From the Parkersburg, W. Va., Sentinel

Pennsylvania grade oil operators are strong in their opposition to federal control of the petroleum industry as embodied in the bill of Congressman Cole, of Maryland, which would establish an oil commissioner with power to regulate the industry. Governor James, of Pennsylvania, is the latest person of influence to come out in opposition to this "invasion of state's rights." West Virginia is among the oil producing states which is strongly against federal regulation.

American investors have put millions of dollars into the oil industry and they have made all petroleum products so cheap to the consuming public that motoring in America is far more general than it is in any other country on the globe. The oil industry under private control gives employment to at least a million persons and their wages average as high or higher than that of any industry of comparable size.

There is absolutely no necessity for federal control of the oil industry. Governor James made the truthful statement that so far as Pennsylvania is concerned there is no waste. He said "We have done the greatest work of reclamation in the last five or six years of any of the oil fields in the United States."

On the Record

By Governor Arthur H. James, of Pennsylvania

Today, I believe the biggest news in Pennsylvania is that we have found jobs. So successful have been out efforts that by the end of 1939 private employment had absorbed one in three of those who were on direct assistance and made work-relief at the beginning of the year In twelve months the burden of unemployment in Pennsylvania has been reduced 34 per cent. We have every right to be proud of that progress.

Railroads Are Getting Better

By HUGH S. JOHNSON

Peoria, Ill., Feb. 26—Are the railroads being dirven out by air, motor and water competition? It would be a pity in both sentiment and practice.

Maybe a railroad train rippling through the night isn't as romantic to everybody as the "way of a ship on the sea"—but it is to me. That may be a holdover from boyhood. To kids of my generation before the automobile and airplanes, a steam locomotive was the fastest and most powerful thing that moved. If there was any boy of that time who didn't dream of being a railroad man, I didn't meet him.

Hugh Johnson

A good deal of that remains. The most popular boys' toy is an 'electric train. It's principal drawback to the kid frequently is that his father plays with it too much to permit its full enjoyment. Apparently railroads still rate romantically with the younger generation.

An Absolute Necessity

In practice there is nothing in sight to replace the railroad network. It is an absolute necessity to our national defense as well as our economic life. The competition of automobiles, trucks, busses and airplanes and water is an annoyance to the railroads. To the extent that it is oversubsidized by taxpayers' money it is unfair. But it has scarcely disturbed the bulk of railroad traffic and it is not at all certain that the railroads can not recover much of what they have lost.

I have just repeated a trip from Chicago to Peoria, Ill., on the Rock Island. I have often made this trip. It took four hours, one change of trains and a lot of bumping stuffiness. This time it took two hours and forty minutes straight through in comfort and smoothness and convenience equal to those of a well appointed yacht.

Are Money Makers

Of course, I am talking about one of those new light streamlined, rubber-cushioned, air-conditioned, Diesel engined super-trains. Enough has been written in praise of these new comforts, in this and other columns and that isn't the point of this piece.

What I didn't know until Mr. Farrington, chief of Rock Island operations, told me yesterday is that in spite of original cost of all this streamlined stuff, these trains are all goldmines as moneymakers. Direct operating costs are cut in half.

Recapturing Lost Business

That is only the beginning of advantage. With increased speed and far superior comfort at present low fares, they are not only increasing total travel but also recapturing much if not all the traffic lost to busses, trucks and the use of private automobiles. This particular Rock Island "Rocket" makes two round trips a day. On my trip it was comfortably loaded with people, several of whom said that before this train came, it was an almost universal custom to drive their own cars to Chicago and come back next day. Now it is easy to do it all in one day with much less trouble and expense.

It is this kind of development which is rapidly spreading that makes me think the railroads may be coming out of their long illness stronger than ever.

Some Results Recommended

It is a peculiar satisfaction to me, because I helped write the report of the Coolidge National Transportation Committee in 1933. That report recommended exactly this development and prophesied exactly this result. It recommended several other things some of which are in process. Some are not. It urged—elimination of all duplicate and obsolete facilities, of roundabout hauling, and of attempts to compete with other forms of transportation in fields where they are better suited, reorganization of impossible financial structures and above all, equalization of tax burdens, subsidy benefits and labor regulations as between the railroads and their competitors.

If these recommendations could be put into effect, the railroads would be as sound as any industry in America.—Distributed by United Feature Syndicate, Inc.

MANY THANKS

In Which Martha Discovers That Men, Too, May Love For More Reasons Than One.

By JOY J. RAPPORT

Martha was wandering aimlessly through the park when a young boy came up behind her and said, "Hello, going some place?" Martha looked at him silently and continued to walk on.

"Don't you know me?" the boy asked.

"I don't believe I've had the pleasure, and I think I can forgo it. Good-by."

The boy laughed. "I live in your building and go to school with you. You've seen me around."

Martha stopped and stared at him. "Oh, yes," she said, "Clark Sheridan."

"Look, Martha, I've seen you play tennis, and I wonder if you'd play with me sometime?"

"Are you any good?"

"I'm fair, but I think I could give you a tussle. Will you play? I don't have anyone to play with and I'd appreciate it very much." He looked eager and Martha laughed.

"Sure," she said, "any time."

"Will tomorrow be too soon?" Clark asked.

"Tomorrow at 10 will be fine."

They played tennis the next day, and they continued to play every morning after that. Clark took Martha to the movies occasionally and one night took her to a dance at his father's club. Clark was very happy. He would come down in the evening and he and Martha would walk through the park.

One night when they came out together they met a girl whom Clark greeted pleasantly.

"How are you, Laura? I'd like you to meet Martha Tilden. This is Laura Case, Martha." Martha smiled pleasantly. She knew this was the girl Clark had told her about. She felt a little sorry for her, for while Laura tried to be nice Martha should see she felt out.

"We're going for a soda. Won't you come with us?" Martha asked.

"Oh, no," Laura said, "I couldn't. I have to do something for my mother." Martha knew she lied, but she wasn't sorry that she refused the invitation.

"Some other time, then?" Martha said.

"Sure. Goodby. Goodby, Clark."

"I'm afraid Laura is a little jealous of me, Clark."

"Yes? I suppose so, but she'll get over it. She's just a kid."

Martha thought no more about the incident until one night when she met Laura on the street. She was going to the corner drug store for cigarettes, and she asked Laura to come with her and have a coke. Laura accepted. They set down in a booth and ordered their cokes.

"How's school?" Martha asked. She really didn't know what to talk about.

"School's all right. How's Clark?" Martha was surprised. "He's all right, too, I guess."

"You see an awful lot of him don't you?"

"I see him quite a bit. Why?" Martha was slightly embarrassed, but she smiled.

"I never see him any more. I used to see him a lot before you came around."

"I don't stop you from seeing him," said Martha in a motherly tone.

"No, but you stop him from seeing me. What do you want with him?"

Martha laughed. "Look, Laura," she said, "you've got me wrong. I don't want him for anything. He's just a friend of mine, and that's all there is to it."

"Well, he's in love with you. I suppose you don't encourage him?"

"I don't know anything about his feelings toward me, but I assure you I have no designs on him."

As she watched Laura she noticed tears falling on the table. She didn't know quite what to do, but she felt that was all very ridiculous.

"Laura, don't be such a sap," she said. "You can take Clark back. It doesn't mean anything to me. I'm engaged to a fellow at school, anyway."

Laura brightened. She sniffed in her handkerchief and said, "You don't understand. I've been going with Clark for three years and we intended to get married, and then you came along and spoiled it all. Now, he won't want me back."

"Of course he will, but you're too stupid to get married."

"We weren't going to get married while we were through school, but now he won't want to marry me any more."

"Yes, he will. He'll get over it. I'm sure he only thinks of me as a friend."

"Why don't you tell him you're engaged?"

"I don't see any reason to tell him, but you just forget all this and he'll be friends with you again."

Martha took the checks and paid the cashier.

Clark came in the next night and they were going out together. She was dressing for her date when Clark came down. "I thought you might like to go to a movie tonight."

Martha thought this would be the best time to tell him about Mike. She looked at Clark and felt very sorry for him. She hated to tell him that it was all over. She hated to blast his hopes, but she knew it was the only thing to do.

"Look, Clark," she said gently. "I suppose I should have told you before, but I kept putting it off. You see, I'm engaged to be married, so, naturally, I can't see you any more. Please don't be hurt, Clark, for I really did enjoy the summer very much. I'll always think back on it with pleasure."

Clark smiled and gave a sigh of relief. "I'm not hurt," he said. "I'm really glad its over. I've been trying to think of a way out, and this makes it so much simpler. I know you won't mind, so I may as well tell you that I wanted to make Laura jealous." He got up to go. "Well, so long, Martha, and thanks."

When the door slammed behind him Martha felt dazed. She could hardly believe that Clark could put something over on her. She had been the sophisticated one, and then it turned out that she was just a tool in the romance of a couple of kids. She had felt so wonderful about her date tonight and her triumphant little affair with Clark, but all faded now, and she felt horribly let down.

The bell rang, and as she opened the door for Mike she felt a painful sense of defeat.

New Drive on Vice Under Way in Miami

Miami, Fla., Feb. 26 (AP)—An apparent drive against prostitution in the Miami area by agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation is underway.

Eleven men and six women were sent to police headquarters to be held on charges of violating the Mann act.

All were seized on warrants issued by U. S. Commissioner Roger Edward Davis, who declined to comment.

J. Edgar Hoover, FBI director, came to Miami two weeks ago to take personal charge of investigating what he described as "vice, inefficiency and corruption" in the area.

Hoover had previously said public officials here promised to assist in cleaning up crime but "gave only lip service."

Congressmen Working For Early Adjournment

Washington, Feb. 26 (AP) — Congressmen are making a practical contribution toward President Roosevelt's expressed desire for an early adjournment by drastically curtailing their bill writing.

Less than 1,000 bills have been introduced in the House, compared with 7,957 for last year's regular session. Normally, the bulk of new bills are introduced early in the session.

Reports were current in some Congressional quarters that an attempt would be made to wind up the current session by May 15 but House leaders declined to make any predictions as to the specific date.

CHILDREN'S Frequent COLDS

✓ For relieving discomforts of chest colds and night coughs, rub VapoRub on throat, chest, and back at bedtime. VapoRub's poultice-vapor action relieves congestion of upper air passages—eases soreness of chest and back muscles—helps the youngster relax into healing sleep.

✓ For coughing and irritated throat caused by colds, put VapoRub on the child's tongue to relieve the irritation. Then massage VapoRub on throat and chest.

✓ For "sniffles" and misery of head colds, melt VapoRub in a bowl of boiling water. Have the child breathe in the steaming vapors. This loosens phlegm, clears air passages, makes breathing easier. Also massage VapoRub on throat and chest. Millions of families use these three time-tested treatments.

"I'm afraid Laura is a little jealous of me, Clark."

"Yes? I suppose so, but she'll get over it. She's just a kid."

Martha thought no more about the incident until one night when she met Laura on the street. She was going to the corner drug store for cigarettes, and she asked Laura to come with her and have a coke. Laura accepted. They set down in a booth and ordered their cokes.

"How's school?" Martha asked. She really didn't know what to talk about.

"School's all right. How's Clark?" Martha was surprised. "He's all right, too, I guess."

"You see an awful lot of him don't you?"

"I see him quite a bit. Why?" Martha was slightly embarrassed, but she smiled.

"I never see him any more. I used to see him a lot before you came around."

"I don't stop you from seeing him," said Martha in a motherly tone.

"No, but you stop him from seeing me. What do you want with him?"

Martha laughed. "Look, Laura," she said, "you've got me wrong. I don't want him for anything. He's just a friend of mine, and that's as there is to it."

"Well, he's in love with you. I suppose you don't encourage him?"

"I don't know anything about his feelings toward me, but I assure you I have no designs on him."

As she watched Laura she noticed tears falling on the table. She didn't know quite what to do, but she felt it was all very ridiculous.

"Laura, don't be such a sap," she said. "You can take Clark back. It doesn't mean anything to me. I'm engaged to a fellow at school, anyway."

Laura brightened. She sniffed in her handkerchief and said, "You don't understand. I've been going with Clark for three years and we intended to get married, and then you came along and spoiled it all. Now he won't want me back."

"Of course he will, but you're too young to get married."

"We weren't going to get married until we were through school, but now he won't want to marry me any more."

"Yes, he will. He'll get over it. I'm sure he only thinks of me as a friend."

"Why don't you tell him you're engaged?"

"I don't see any reason to tell him, but you just forget all this and he'll be friends with you again."

Martha took the checks and paid the cashier.

Mike came in the next night and they were going out together. She was dressing for her date when Clark came down. "I thought you might like to go to a movie tonight."

Martha thought this would be the best time to tell him about Mike. She looked at Clark and felt very sorry for him. She hated to tell him that it was all over. She hated to blast his hopes, but she knew it was the only thing to do.

"Look, Clark," she said gently, "I suppose I should have told you before, but I kept putting it off. You see, I'm engaged to be married, so, naturally, I can't see you any more. Please don't be hurt, Clark, for I really did enjoy the summer very much. I'll always think back on it with pleasure."

Clark smiled and gave a sigh of relief, "I'm not hurt," he said. "I'm really glad its over. I've been trying to think of a way out, and this makes it so much simpler. I know you won't mind, so I may as well tell you that I wanted to make Laura jealous." He got up to go. "Well, so long, Martha, and thanks."

When the door slammed behind him Martha felt dazed. She could hardly believe that Clark could put something over on her. She had been the sophisticated one, and then it turned out that she was just a tool in the romance of a couple of kids. She had felt so wonderful about her date tonight and her triumphant little affair with Clark, but all faded now, and she felt horribly let down.

The bell rang, and as she opened the door for Mike she felt a painful sense of defeat.

New Drive on Vice Under Way in Miami

Miami, Fla., Feb. 26 (AP)—An apparent drive against prostitution in the Miami area by agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation is underway.

Eleven men and six women were sent to police headquarters to be held on charges of violating the Mann act.

All were seized on warrants issued by U. S. Commissioner Roger Edward Davis, who declined to comment.

J. Edgar Hoover, FBI director, came to Miami two weeks ago to take personal charge of investigating what he described as "vice, inefficiency and corruption" in the area.

Hoover had previously said public officials here promised to assist in cleaning up crime but "gave only lip service."

Congressmen Working For Early Adjournment

Washington, Feb. 26 (AP) — Congressmen are making a practical contribution toward President Roosevelt's expressed desire for an early adjournment by drastically curtailing their bill writing.

Less than 1,000 bills have been introduced in the House, compared with 7,957 for last year's regular session. Normally, the bulk of new bills are introduced early in the session.

Reports were current in some Congressional quarters that an attempt would be made to wind up the current session by May 15 but House leaders declined to make any predictions as to the specific date.

CHILDREN'S Frequent COLDS

✓ For relieving discomforts of chest colds and night coughs, rub VapoRub on throat, chest, and back at bedtime. VapoRub's poultice-vapor action relieves congestion of upper air passages—eases soreness of chest and back muscles—helps the youngster relax into healing sleep.

✓ For coughing and irritated throat caused by colds, put VapoRub on the child's tongue to relieve the irritation. Then massage VapoRub on throat and chest.

✓ For "sniffles" and misery of head colds, melt VapoRub in a bowl of boiling water. Have the child breathe in the steaming vapors. This loosens phlegm, clears air passages, makes breathing easier. Also massage VapoRub on throat and chest. Millions of families use these three time-tested treatments.

Painting an Expression in Lips

By HELEN FOLLETT

YOU HEAR IT said that beauty fads are transients; they come and go like gadding women. What about the lipstick? Mama wielded it when papa went away to World War No. 1, more than 20 years ago. She was surprised at her courage; some of her friends pursed their lips and curled their noses, fancied mama wasn't a very nice girl.

As a means of portrait decorating, the little crimson pencil is a humdinger. Even the great-grandmothers get away with it. Very pretty with white hair and the transparent, delicate skin that develops with the years. Small girls can't wait until they are granted the privilege of touching up their mouth portals.

While the rosebud mouth—the Gish girls have it—is not the pattern strived for by the lassie of 1940, it does become the mousie one who puts on the naive line and stays, oh! so girlish! The exotic lady who wears clothes with splendor and is always six miles ahead of the fashion parade gives her lips a wider outline. No Cupid's bow for her.

This business of marking out a lip pattern is important. All the facial features must be considered. Don't forget that the wide application makes the cheeks look gaunt.

This preacher of pulchritude believes that in all cases the coloring should do a fadeaway at the lip corners. If it doesn't, one may take on a down-in-the-mouth expression.

Neglect your hands and there's no telling what they'll look like. Keep them fair of surface by applying lemon juice. Keep half a lemon in the kitchen, plunge the finger-tip into the pulp after preparing vegetables. Stains are easily removed when treated right away.

Get a tube of toilet lanoline, use on your hands after you have massaged your face with fragrant cream at night. This oily substance will keep the hands from looking old before their time.

Avoid strong cleansing agents; they raise the dickens with feminine mitts. Extremely hot and extremely cold water are bad for them; too much hot water will cause the flesh to swell, then fall into fine lines.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

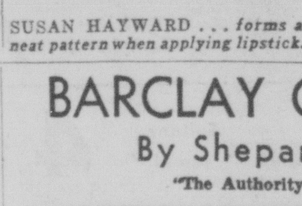
"The Authority on Authorities"

TOPLESS SUITS PAY

SOME of the biggest top scores, including even games that were not dealt into the cards, are made by fine tournament players through bidding four-card suits which contain no top honors. An opponent sitting at the left of such a suit may wind up doubling the contract partly because his honors are located advantageously over the declarer's. His chagrin is deep if he finds those honors in the dummy, sitting over him, where they can kill off his honors.



(Dealer: East. Both sides vulnerable.)

East	South	West	North
Pass	1 ♥	Pass	1 ♠
2 ♦	3 ♣	Dbl	3 ♥
Pass	Pass	Dbl

Most assuredly West had every right to expect his honors to be sitting over the enemy's honors in the heart suit, but he was sadly disappointed when he saw the dummy. He began to fear—and he was right—that he had doubled his opponents into game.

The diamond Q lead to the A was followed by a switch to the club 5, which the A won. Declarer sent the heart 2 to the J, west ducking, returned South with the diamond K and led the heart 8. West ducked again and South let the 8 win, following with the 10 to the A, then a losing club finesse. West fired back another club, then South made West use his last trump on the good diamond 10. This time West returned another club, so the declarer took his last heart, last club and spade A, giving up a spade at the end. He had lost to the opponents only one trick in each suit, making his doubled 3-Hearts for a luscious game.

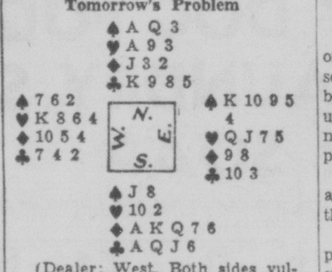
Tomorrow's Problem



(Dealer: West. Both sides vulnerable.)

If North and South get into No Trump after bidding both minor suits, what should East lead if the contract is 6-No Trumps and what if it is only bare game?

Puppet Shows Will Be Presented At New School

The Girl Scout Leaders Association will sponsor two puppet shows to be given March 11, at the new West Side school, Paca and Chase streets.

Owing to the enthusiasm with which, "Huck Finn," and the "Prince and the Pauper" were received last year, the association has arranged to have the Marionette Guild Puppeteers present this year "The Counte of Monte Cristo" and "The Silver Skates".

"The Silver Skates" (Hans Brinker) will be presented at 4 o'clock, March 11 while Alexander Dumas's "Count of Monte Cristo" will be given at 7:30 o'clock the same evening.

The showing of "Monte Cristo" has already been televisioned in New York city. All the resources of the puppet stage are set to work for this drama, including startlingly life-like marionettes, colorful shadow puppets, period costumes and furniture, as well as beautiful marionettes.

An unusually spectacular stunt for puppets is in "Hans Brinker" when seven marionettes come out on real silver ice skates, with the agility and grace of seven Sonja Heines. Two sets of sliding puppets have been designed especially for this performance as special effects in a race sequence. The illusion of reality is sustained throughout because the characters are so life-like.

The Marionette Guild troupes are endeavoring to re-establish the prestige of puppet entertainment, one of the oldest arts still in existance.

The procedure of the Guild in preparing shows is similar to the craft guilds of feudal times. The one craft includes script writing, marionette making, costume and furniture making, painting of backdrops and hairdressing.

High School Boys Have Hair Waved

Tampa, Fla., Feb. 26. (AP)—Parents of half a dozen Tampa high school youths were disturbed—and bewildered—when the boys turned up at home with hair sets, permanent waves, henna rinses and other products of milady's beauty parlor.

Mothers met with little encouragement when they tried to put their collective feet down.

"But mother," one husky football player pleaded, "Sam already has a permanent, and why can't I?"

The surge for glamor was started last week for no apparent reason. Waves, "sets" and at least one bleaching job appeared in school Friday.

C. Phil Peters, principal of Plant high school, where the out-break occurred, commented "what boys do to their hair with the permission of their parents is outside my jurisdiction. It seems sort of silly, but I hope they never do anything worse."

Slovakians Help Labor Shortage in Austria

Vienna (AP)—Citizens of Slovakia are playing a great part in relieving the labor shortage in Austria.

According to a statement made by the Slovakian Consul General at Vienna, 16,000 Slovakians have made Austria their permanent home. Another 45,000 are employed as seasonal workers with 25,000 of them remaining throughout the winter.

Now that all connections with Prague, former capital of Czecho-Slovakia, are severed, Vienna also has become the main educational center for Slovakian youth. The erection of a dormitory for Slovakian students is planned.

Painting an Expression in Lips

By HELEN FOLLETT

YOU HEAR IT said that beauty fads are transients; they come and go like gadding women. What about the lipstick? Mama wielded it when papa went away to World War No. 1, more than 20 years ago. She was surprised at her courage; some of her friends pursed their lips and curled their noses, fancied mama wasn't a very nice girl.

As a means of portrait decorating, the little crimson pencil is a humdinger. Even the great-grandmothers get away with it. Very pretty with white hair and the transparent, delicate skin that develops with the years. Small girls can't wait until they are granted the privilege of touching up their mouth portals.

While the rosebud mouth—the Gish girls have it—is not the pattern strived for by the lassie of 1940, it does become the mousie one who puts on the naive line and stays, oh! so girlish! The exotic lady who wears clothes with splendor and is always six miles ahead of the fashion parade gives her lips a wider outline. No Cupid's bow for her.

This business of marking out a lip pattern is important. All the facial features must be considered. Don't forget that the wide application makes the cheeks look gaunt.

This preacher of pulchritude believes that in all cases the coloring should do a fadeaway at the lip corners. If it doesn't, one may take on a down-in-the-mouth expression.

Neglect your hands and there's no telling what they'll look like. Keep them fair of surface by applying lemon juice. Keep half a lemon in the kitchen, plunge the finger-tip into the pulp after preparing vegetables. Stains are easily removed when treated right away.

Get a tube of toilet lanoline, use on your hands after you have massaged your face with fragrant cream at night. This oily substance will keep the hands from looking old before their time.

Avoid strong cleansing agents; they raise the dickens with feminine mitts. Extremely hot and extremely cold water are bad for them; too much hot water will cause the flesh to swell, then fall into fine lines.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

By Shepard Barclay

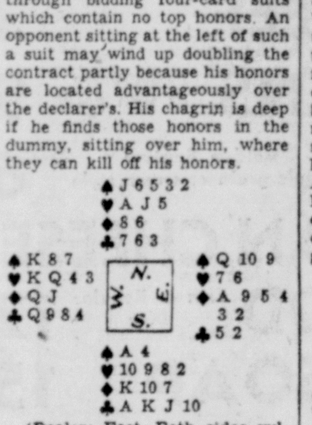
TOPLESS SUITS PAY

SOME of the biggest top scores, including even games that were not dealt into the cards, are made by fine tournament players through bidding four-card suits which contain no top honors. An opponent sitting at the left of such a suit may wind up doubling the contract partly because his honors are located advantageously over the declarer's. His chagrin is deep if he finds those honors in the dummy, sitting over him, where they can kill off his honors.



(Dealer: East. Both sides vulnerable.)

East	South	West	North
Pass	1 ♥	Pass	1 ♠
2 ♦	3 ♣	Dbl	3 ♥
Pass	Pass	Dbl

Most assuredly West had every right to expect his honors to be sitting over the enemy's honors in the heart suit, but he was sadly disappointed when he saw the dummy. He began to fear—and he was right—that he had doubled his opponents into game.

The diamond Q lead to the A was followed by a switch to the club 5, which the A won. Declarer sent the heart 2 to the J, west ducking, returned South with the diamond K and led the heart 8. West ducked again and South let the 8 win, following with the 10 to the A, then a losing club finesse. West fired back another club, then South made West use his last trump on the good diamond 10. This time West returned another club, so the declarer took his last heart, last club and spade A, giving up a spade at the end. He had lost to the opponents only one trick in each suit, making his doubled 3-Hearts for a luscious game.

(Dealer: West. Both sides vulnerable.)

If North and South get into No Trump after bidding both minor suits, what should East lead if the contract is 6-No Trumps and what if it is only bare game?

Puppet Shows Will Be Presented At New School

The Girl Scout Leaders Association will sponsor two puppet shows to be given March 11, at the new West Side school, Paca and Chase streets.

Owing to the enthusiasm with which, "Huck Finn," and the "Prince and the Pauper" were received last year, the association has arranged to have the Marionette Guild Puppeteers present this year "The Counte of Monte Cristo" and "The Silver Skates".

"The Silver Skates" (Hans Brinker) will be presented at 4 o'clock, March 11 while Alexander Dumas's "Count of Monte Cristo" will be given at 7:30 o'clock the same evening.

The showing of "Monte Cristo" has already been televisioned in New York city. All the resources of the puppet stage are set to work for this drama, including startlingly life-like marionettes, colorful shadow puppets, period costumes and furniture, as well as beautiful marionettes.

An unusually spectacular stunt for puppets is in "Hans Brinker" when seven marionettes come out on real silver ice skates, with the agility and grace of seven Sonja Heines. Two sets of sliding puppets have been designed especially for this performance as special effects in a race sequence. The illusion of reality is sustained throughout because the characters are so life-like.

The Marionette Guild troupes are endeavoring to re-establish the prestige of puppet entertainment, one of the oldest arts still in existance.

The procedure of the Guild in preparing shows is similar to the craft guilds of feudal times. The one craft includes script writing, marionette making, costume and furniture making, painting of backdrops and hairdressing.

High School Boys Have Hair Waved

Tampa, Fla., Feb. 26. (AP)—Parents of half a dozen Tampa high school youths were disturbed—and bewildered—when the boys turned up at home with hair sets,. permanent waves, henna rinses and other products of milady's beauty parlor.

Mothers met with little encouragement when they tried to put their collective feet down.

"But mother," one husky football player pleaded, "Sam already has a permanent, and why can't I?"

The surge for glamor was started last week for no apparent reason. Waves, "sets" and at least one bleaching job appeared in school Friday.

C. Phil Peters, principal of Plant high school, where the out-break occurred, commented "what boys do to their hair with the permission of their parents is outside my jurisdiction. It seems sort of silly, but I hope they never do anything worse."

Slovakians Help Labor Shortage in Austria

Vienna (AP)—Citizens of Slovakia are playing a great part in relieving the labor shortage in Austria.

According to a statement made by the Slovakian Consul General at Vienna, 16,000 Slovakians have made Austria their permanent home. Another 45,000 are employed as seasonal workers with 25,000 of them remaining throughout the winter.

Now that all connections with Prague, former capital of Czecho-Slovakia, are severed, Vienna also has become the main educational center for Slovakian youth. The erection of a dormitory for Slovakian students is planned.

American School Children To Aid Refugee Kiddies

Dorothy Canfield Fisher Starts Drive for Many War Needy

New York, Feb. 26 (AP)—A fund-raising drive among America's 30 - 000,000 school children to finance relief for war refugee children in other lands was announced today by Dorothy Canfield Fisher, Vermont writer and educator.

Mrs. Fisher said school administrators in thirty states had promised their support in carrying through the "children's crusade for children," which she said had a two-fold purpose:

"First, to help our American children, through the tragic object lesson of what is going on in Europe and Asia, become more fully aware of the often unrecognized blessings they enjoy in this democratic land, and:

"Second, to give our children . . . a chance to express in the old-fashioned American way their sympathy for the homeless war-stricken children in other lands."

Mrs. Fisher said the contributions would be allotted by a jury of award to representative relief organizations.

Members of the jury, she said, were Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt; the Right Reverend Monsignor John A. Ryan, director of the National Catholic Welfare Conference; William Allen White, Emporia, Kas., editor; Dr. Charles B. Glenn, Birmingham, Ala., school superintendent; Chief Judge Irving Lehman of the New York Court of Appeals, and Miss Caroline S. Woodruff of Castleton, Vt., former president of the National Education Association.

She said the crusade was being supported on a national scale by the Boy Scouts of America, Camp Fire Girls, The Girl Scouts, Girl Reserves, and other youth organizations.

Stefansson Predicts Finns Will "Bog Down" At End of Winter

Philadelphia, Feb. 26. (AP)—A prediction that the staunch Finnish defense against the Russian invasion will "bog down" in the spring because the Finns and other northern peoples live under a "winter economy" comes from Wilhjalmur Stefansson, Arctic explorer.

Stefansson, here for the mid-winter meeting of the American Philosophical Society, declared, "the war probably will continue only as long as winter continues."

"Winter is the time of greatest activity in the north," he said. "The people like the cold. They're more vigorous then. Where winter is longer than summer, the economy is what I call a winter economy."

The exact opposite, he said, prevails in the temperate zones. As many persons as can stick by the fireside in winter and make summer the period of greatest activity.

His theory of "summer economy" as contrasted with "winter economy," Stefansson said, may account in part for the present comparative inactivity in the war between Germany and the Allies.

The veteran explorer said his beliefs were based on a life-time of adventures in sub-zero temperatures in the unknown areas beyond the Arctic Circle.

Cold Spell Puts Monster on Ice

Tulsa, Okla. (AP)—America's recent ice age has liquidated Mohawk park lagoon's "Fire-eating dragon."

That's what some folks called the fleeting thing they glimpsed occasionally while driving near the lagoon. It turned out to be a seven-foot alligator which escaped from the zoo two years ago.

The cold spell froze him to death. Two boys found him with a 10-inch case of ice over his head. The pressure on his head had been so great that it forced blood from his nostrils.

AAA Promoters Use Lime on State Farms

College Park, Feb. 26.—In 1940, Maryland farmers co-operating in the AAA Farm Program will be able to continue and increase the use of lime to improve their soil, as they have under past AAA Programs. Under the 1938 AAA Program, the last year for which state figures are available, Maryland farmers put 165,095 tons of lime on their land about 15.64 per cent more than they used in 1937, and 121.81 per cent more than in 1936. The year 1939 is expected to show an even total.

Lime stimulates growth of soil-building legumes and grasses, and its application is a practice encouraged under the Agricultural Conservation Program of the AAA.

Farmers of Allegany county who participated in the AAA Farm Program used 3,875 tons of lime on their soil; in 1939 they used 4,376 tons, the county AAA committee estimates.

Spurned Lover Goes On Hunger Strike

St. Louis, Feb. 25 (AP)—Melvin L. Miller, who padlocked himself to a tree near the home of a woman who spurned his love, went on a hunger-strike at the St. Louis county jail.

"I'll not eat until she brings me the food in her own hands," he told a jailer as he refused a meal of pork petties, string beans, potatoes and bread.

Booked for investigation after he was found living in a tent with his neck chained to a large tree, the thirty-year old scissors grinder explained he had tried for twelve years without success to win the affection of a pretty stenographer. He got one "date" after six years and since he'd been trying for another.

One of the earliest songs known was composed on the death of Charlemagne in 813. It is still preserved in the national Library at Paris.

American School Children To Aid Refugee Kiddies

Dorothy Canfield Fisher Starts Drive for Many War Needy

New York, Feb. 26 (AP)—A fund-raising drive among America's 30 - 000,000 school children to finance relief for war refugee children in other lands was announced today by Dorothy Canfield Fisher, Vermont writer and educator.

Mrs. Fisher said school administrators in thirty states had promised their support in carrying through the "children's crusade for children," which she said had a two-fold purpose:

"First, to help our American children, through the tragic object lesson of what is going on in Europe and Asia, become more fully aware of the often unrecognized blessings they enjoy in this democratic land, and:

"Second, to give our children . . . a chance to express in the old-fashioned American way their sympathy for the homeless war-stricken children in other lands."

Mrs. Fisher said the contributions would be allotted by a jury of award to representative relief organizations.

Members of the jury, she said, were Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt; the Right Reverend Monsignor John A. Ryan, director of the National Catholic Welfare Conference; William Allen White, Emporia, Kas., editor; Dr. Charles B. Glenn, Birmingham, Ala., school superintendent; Chief Judge Irving Lehman of the New York Court of Appeals, and Miss Caroline S. Woodruff of Castleton, Vt., former president of the National Education Association.

She said the crusade was being supported on a national scale by the Boy Scouts of America, Camp Fire Girls, The Girl Scouts, Girl Reserves, and other youth organizations.

Stefansson Predicts Finns Will "Bog Down" At End of Winter

Philadelphia, Feb. 26. (AP)—A prediction that the staunch Finnish defense against the Russian invasion will "bog down" in the spring because the Finns and other northern peoples live under a "winter economy" comes from Wilhjalmur Stefansson, Arctic explorer.

Stefansson, here for the mid-winter meeting of the American Philosophical Society, declared, "the war probably will continue only as long as winter continues."

"Winter is the time of greatest activity in the north," he said. "The people like the cold. They're more vigorous then. Where winter is longer than summer, the economy is what I call a winter economy."

The exact opposite, he said, prevails in the temperate zones. As many persons as can stick by the fireside in winter and make summer the period of greatest activity.

His theory of "summer economy" as contrasted with "winter economy," Stefansson said, may account in part for the present comparative inactivity in the war between Germany and the Allies.

The veteran explorer said his beliefs were based on a life-time of adventures in sub-zero temperatures in the unknown areas beyond the Arctic Circle.

Cold Spell Puts Monster on Ice

Tulsa, Okla. (AP)—America's recent ice age has liquidated Mohawk park lagoon's "Fire-eating dragon."

That's what some folks called the fleeting thing they glimpsed occasionally while driving near the lagoon. It turned out to be a seven-foot alligator which escaped from the zoo two years ago.

The cold spell froze him to death. Two boys found him with a 10-inch case of ice over his head. The pressure on his head had been so great that it forced blood from his nostrils.

AAA Promoters Use Lime on State Farms

College Park, Feb. 26.—In 1940, Maryland farmers co-operating in the AAA Farm Program will be able to continue and increase the use of lime to improve their soil, as they have under past AAA Programs. Under the 1938 AAA Program, the last year for which state figures are available, Maryland farmers put 165,095 tons of lime on their land about 15.64 per cent more than they used in 1937, and 121.81 per cent more than in 1936. The year 1939 is expected to show an even total.

Lime stimulates growth of soil-building legumes and grasses, and its application is a practice encouraged under the Agricultural Conservation Program of the AAA.

Farmers of Allegany county who participated in the AAA Farm Program used 3,875 tons of lime on their soil; in 1939 they used 4,376 tons, the county AAA committee estimates.

Spurned Lover Goes On Hunger Strike

St. Louis, Feb. 25 (AP)—Melvin L. Miller, who padlocked himself to a tree near the home of a woman who spurned his love, went on a hunger-strike at the St. Louis county jail.

"I'll not eat until she brings me the food in her own hands," he told a jailer as he refused a meal of pork petties, string beans, potatoes and bread.

Booked for investigation after he was found living in a tent with his neck chained to a large tree, the thirty-year old scissors grinder explained he had tried for twelve years without success to win the affection of a pretty stenographer. He got one "date" after six years and since he'd been trying for another.

One of the earliest songs known was composed on the death of Charlemagne in 813. It is still preserved in the national Library at Paris.

United States Serious Factor in War And Eventual Peace, Writer Declares

By HERBERT B. MAYER
Lieutenant, Infantry Reserve
Written for Central Press and The Cumberland News

For once let the Eagle scream.

This country has a navy equal to Great Britain, now forging ahead to first place. If we had to we could raise an army of 10,000,000. We are richer in money, food and natural resources than all the belligerents put together.

Without us as a source of supplies the British and French cause would be hopeless. If we threw our weight into the war, as in the last encounter, it is probable we could crush Germany.

No matter how they may seem to be derided abroad or forgotten here, those factors will give point to any plan for peace that President Franklin D. Roosevelt may make.

Departure of Undersecretary of State Sumner Welles and Myron C. Taylor has been linked up with the peace moves of the Pope and neutral powers. More fuel to the fires of hope was added by the president's "business with fishing vacation."

Before going on board the Tuscaloosa, President Roosevelt refused to deny a report he might meet representatives of the British and French governments at sea. An even more startling speculation came from a New York paper which remembered its Washington correspondent a year ago predicted that if it were possible President Roosevelt might meet Hitler or Mussolini at sea.

Rumors of Peace Move

However, while these and other surmises were interrupted by entry of the Tuscaloosa into the Pacific via the Panama canal, reports that a definite peace move is at hand continued.

We have been so largely and lavishly concerned with happenings abroad that we have had little time to cast an eye upon what peace will mean to our own interests.

Ever since the World war there has been a vast propaganda, unique in our history, to demonstrate we got nothing out of the war, and that the officers and men who took part in it were "dupes for the bankers," etc.

The fact is we entered the World war for one reason—to keep Germany from becoming the dominant world power. Rightly or wrongly, for good or ill, it is our national theory that Great Britain and ourselves and not Germany shall control the seas giving access to our shores.

When Dewey was in Manila bay, a German squadron, baring its guns, took up a threatening position. Almost instantly a British squadron moved in between the Germans and Americans, ready for action, giving Dewey a free hand. The sympathetic tie between the English speaking nations has been amply reinforced since.

How Peace Concerns Us

Consequently, it can be presumed that any peace to which this country may be a part will include full recognition of our Monroe doctrine and our full rights in this hemisphere, as well as a limitation of sea armaments that will maintain the present position of Great Britain and ourselves. Unless these conditions are satisfied it would seem to appear evident the United States could have no part in any peace which settled European problems and left our own up in the air.

To those who maintain we gained nothing from the World war and were foolish to enter it, it might be pointed out that if the Germans and not the Allies had won, our position in South and Central America would have been vastly different. A just peace in Europe in which we have part will assure us the protection our interests require.

Only if some basis has been found to assure the belligerents' interests as well as our own can a full peace move from the American president be expected to mature. This much is certain. All the rest has to remain in the realm of speculation.

Looking abroad one macabre note is the high percentage of losses of personnel involved in the sinking of British battle craft. The destroyer, Daring, is a case in point, 157 officers and men having been lost and only one officer and four men saved of the entire crew.

Why Do Many Die?

Part of a convoy, the Daring obviously had plenty of help near. Yet the huge life loss brings up the question whether the Germans are not using some new high explosive. During the Spanish Civil war a mystery German bomb containing a mixture of wool and liquid air was reported to have inflicted almost incredible damage in Barcelona. Is a liquid air explosive Hitler's "secret weapon"? Only time and the relaxed jaws of the censorships will tell.

The Altmark affair may turn out to be cleverly laid groundwork to excuse a Hitler drive through neutral territory, an event that even the reported peace moves do not discount as an immediate possible contingency.

In the World war the German government tore up its neutrality treaty with Belgium. Since — to say the least—the Reich has shown slight regard for small nations in its way. Consequently, the high and mighty indignation of the Nazis at the flagrant British violation of neutral rights, might be amusing if it did not contain the dire possibility that one of Signor Mussolini's Ethiopians may be concealed in that woodpile.

For months, to use the words of the colored parson, Germany has been "bearing down hard" on neutrality, its rights and privileges, stressing its dearer-than-life quality to the Belgians, Holland, the Scandinavian and other countries on the edge of the war zone.

Air Control of Sea

With control of the North sea having passed largely to the German air force, many German ships have used Norway's waters as a safe road to Germany.

The Bremen—a prize of war if there ever was one—went through the Norwegian coastal zone, guarded by a convoy of planes. Many other ships, including ore-laden cargo carriers and refugee German ships from foreign ports, have found Norway's waters an easy path of entry to Germany.

The one ship which had trouble making the voyage in the past was the City of Flint. This headache to German diplomacy, on direct orders from Berlin, was flaunted in the face of Norwegian authorities until they had to seize it, relieving the Germans of embarrassment.

When the Altmark—with its past connection with the Graf Von Spee and its prisoners, a tempting morsel if ever there was one—came into Norwegian waters it turned in at Bergen. In Bergen, as at every other neutral port in the war zone, there are plenty of spies and secret agents of all belligerents. In no other way other than by direct radio could the Altmark have more efficiently reported her presence to the British admiralty.

The Altmark Adventure

With an escort of two small Norwegian torpedo boats the Altmark steamed inside the three-mile limit, a fat rabbit making faces at the hounds of the British "mosquito fleet." As might have been expected, the Intrepid dashed in and demanded that the Altmark return to Bergen to be searched. Within their rights, the Norwegian escort refused and the Altmark took refuge in a "blind alley" fjord, the British outside.

Whereupon, the commander of the Altmark telephoned Berlin for instructions, paralleling the course of conduct of the commander of the prize crew of the City of Flint. From the point where he was stationed to large German air fields is about half an hour. Within a few hours the Altmark could have been reached by German subs or by battleships and cruisers, larger than the British force.

Not a plane was sent, not an effort made to save the Altmark.

After nightfall, hours later, the inevitable occurred when the Cossack moved upon the Altmark and threw a tough boarding party of 30 aboard. On board the Altmark were the guards detailed from the Graf Von Spee, all of them armed. According to all accounts, not one shot was fired at the British, although seven Germans were killed and four wounded, probably in the first volley.

What Was Behind It?

The prisoners were rescued and taken to England, the Altmark and survivors of her crew left on the beach. But behind it all, in view of the lack of effort made to rescue the Altmark, the question remains:

Did the German government want the British to violate Norwegian neutrality to furnish a precedent for some contemplated activity of its own — perhaps through Luxembourg or elsewhere?

In such a view it might appear that the Altmark was used for bait to bring about a situation which would excuse German violations of neutrality to the "home folks."

Like all the rest of the war this should become clear within the next five or six critical weeks.

Insofar as the situation in Finland is concerned, the result is another triumph of wishful thinking, to be listed along with Spain, Poland and all the rest. From the first week of the war the Russians have held the upper part of Finland with its nickel and gold mines and a section of the Arctic highway. Minor Finnish successes were exploited far beyond their real significance.

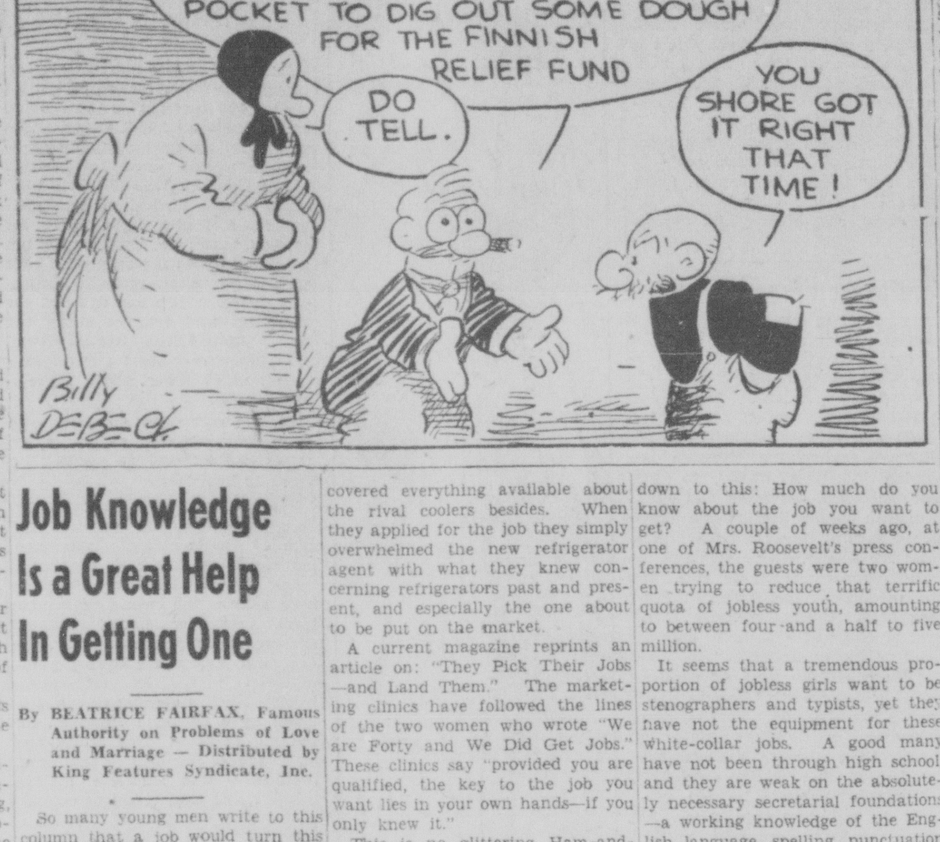
The Fall of Finland

The overcoming of the Mannerheim line, in two weeks, is a direct consequence, since a fully alarmed world, duly informed of the true situation, might have given more aid to the Finns—in time.

The stories of Finnish "ghost troops" armed with light machine guns "mopping up" whole Russian battalions every hour of the night take on a pitiful and contemptible reflex in view of the heartrending and somber actuality.

The Mannerheim line was one of the world's strongest positions. In below zero weather, the Reds overcame this belt of steel and cross fire of all kinds of weapons in 14 days. The attack and its outcome argues ill for the stability of the Maginot line.

From the blood-stained snow of Finland the Red army, an ever brutal and mighty force, emerges as a new terror to Scandinavia and to Europe. Laughter and decision will not halt its progress. Guns and men may. Unless that and other realities are faced and recognized, there will be other Finlands and on a far vaster scale.



Job Knowledge Is a Great Help In Getting One

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX, Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage — Distributed by King Features Syndicate, Inc.

So many young men write to this column that a job would turn this world, in spite of all its horrors, into a Paradise. They've got the girl, their families approve and in a good many cases they've got the ring—but no job.

So, suppose this morning we have a little sales talk on the subject of job-getting. Ever since I had lunch with those two indefatigable optimists who wrote "We are Forty and We Did Get Jobs," I've been under the impression that you can land a job if you go about it the right way.

For instance, these women said that when they went after a job they persuaded the pundit who had the job to give, that they were not looking for work as much as he was looking for someone of their knowledge and ability.

They Studied Hard

I remember one particular instance, in which a job was offered to demonstrate a new type of refrigerator. Not only did they study up everything connected with that refrigerator in advance, but they went around to places where rival refrigerators were sold and discovered everything available about the rival coolers besides. When they applied for the job they simply overwhelmed the new refrigerator agent with what they knew concerning refrigerators past and present, and especially the one about to be put on the market.

A current magazine reprints an article on: "They Pick Their Jobs —and Land Them." The marketing clinics have followed the lines of the two women who wrote "We are Forty and We Did Get Jobs." These clinics say "provided you are qualified, the key to the job you want lies in your own hands—if you only knew it."

This is no glittering Ham-and-Egg racket. It's plain every-day truth. In cold-hearted New York, where job competition is ruthless, thousands of people—all sorts of people—have found the keys that unlock doors, providing them with a living.

The question of job-getting boils down to this: How much do you know about the job you want to get? A couple of weeks ago, at one of Mrs. Roosevelt's press conferences, the guests were two women trying to reduce that terrific quota of jobless youth, amounting to between four and a half to five million.

It seems that a tremendous proportion of jobless girls want to be stenographers and typists, yet they have not the equipment for these white-collar jobs. A good many have not been through high school, and they are weak on the absolutely necessary secretarial foundations —a working knowledge of the English language, spelling, punctuation and sentence structure. To get a secretarial job, it's necessary to have accomplished the ground work, and one must study to acquire these qualifications.

There is a strong feeling among girls of American birth against being domestics. Statistics prove that domestics marry, though the palm for marriage has to go to waitresses. Goodness knows why, except that feeding a man probably suggests domesticity. Domestic servants marry to a greater degree than those who hold down the white-collar job.

Same Rule for Both

We seem to have been discussing jobs for women more than jobs for men. But the same rule holds good for both. If a boy has left school in one of the lower grades, he's got to study up if he wants a white-collar job. The tragedy of these odd-man jobs is that so many boys, who have not completed a grade school education are after them.

"Dig out your hidden assets. Everybody has them," says the Man-Marketing Clinic, founded by Sidney Edlund. The clinic teaches people to see themselves as they would like their employers to see them.

These clinics are cropping all over the United States. The original clinic, started in New York, has resulted in the founding of others, in Chicago, New Orleans, Fordham University, and at the University of Oklahoma. Ten more are in the making elsewhere.

A group of youngsters opened their own clinic for mutual criticism and aid. Now that clinic is closed —because they all found jobs.

Tin Box Saves Life Of New York Policeman

New York, Feb. 26. (AP)—A little tin of stomach tablets saved a policeman from shooting himself today by deflecting a bullet he accidentally fired from his own pistol.

The officer, Martin Callahan, pulled out the gun while arresting a burglary suspect and fired it while putting it back in the holster. The tin was in his overcoat pocket.

Radio Device Shows How Unsound Cow Sounds

Pullman, Wash. (AP)—Dr. Ernest C. McCulloch, assistant professor of bacteriology at Washington State college, has invented a new sort of radio to enable veterinarians to "listen in" on cows and detect the presence of mastitis, a prevalent disease.

A single stream of milk from the "suspected" cow is milked into the machine and a dial turned until the humming noise ceases. The reading on the dial indicates the degree of abnormality of the milk—and the cow—Dr. McCulloch explains.

United States Serious Factor in War And Eventual Peace, Writer Declares

By HERBERT B. MAYER
Lieutenant, Infantry Reserve
Written for Central Press and The Cumberland News

For once let the Eagle scream.

This country has a navy equal to Great Britain, now forging ahead to first place. If we had to we could raise an army of 10,000,000. We are richer in money, food and natural resources than all the belligerents put together.

Without us as a source of supplies the British and French cause would be hopeless. If we threw our weight into the war, as in the last encounter, it is probable we could crush Germany.

No matter how they may seem to be derided abroad or forgotten here, those factors will give point to any plan for peace that President Franklin D. Roosevelt may make.

Departure of Undersecretary of State Sumner Welles and Myron C. Taylor has been linked up with the peace moves of the Pope and neutral powers. More fuel to the fires of hope was added by the president's "business with fishing vacation."

Before going on board the Tuscaloosa, President Roosevelt refused to deny a report he might meet representatives of the British and French governments at sea. An even more startling speculation came from a New York paper which remembered its Washington correspondent a year ago predicted that if it were possible President Roosevelt might meet Hitler or Mussolini at sea.

Rumors of Peace Move

However, while these and other surmises were interrupted by entry of the Tuscaloosa into the Pacific via the Panama canal, reports that a definite peace move is at hand continued.

We have been so largely and lavishly concerned with happenings abroad that we have had little time to cast an eye upon what peace will mean to our own interests.

Ever since the World war there has been a vast propaganda, unique in our history, to demonstrate we got nothing out of the war, and that the officers and men who took part in it were "dupes for the bankers," etc.

The fact is we entered the World war for one reason—to keep Germany from becoming the dominant world power. Rightly or wrongly, for good or ill, it is our national theory that Great Britain and ourselves and not Germany shall control the seas giving access to our shores.

When Dewey was in Manila bay, a German squadron, baring its guns, took up a threatening position. Almost instantly a British squadron moved in between the Germans and Americans, ready for action, giving Dewey a free hand. The sympathetic tie between the English speaking nations has been amply reinforced since.

How Peace Concerns Us

Consequently, it can be presumed that any peace to which this country may be a part will include full recognition of our Monroe doctrine and our full rights in this hemisphere, as well as a limitation of sea armaments that will maintain the present position of Great Britain and ourselves. Unless these conditions are satisfied it would seem to appear evident the United States could have no part in any peace which settled European problems and left our own up in the air.

To those who maintain we gained nothing from the World war and were foolish to enter it, it might be pointed out that if the Germans and not the Allies had won, our position in South and Central America would have been vastly different. A just peace in Europe in which we have part will assure us the protection our interests require.

Only if some basis has been found to assure the belligerents' interests as well as our own can a full peace move from the American president be expected to mature. This much is certain. All the rest has to remain in the realm of speculation.

Looking abroad one macabre note is the high percentage of losses of personnel involved in the sinking of British battle craft. The destroyer, Daring, is a case in point, 157 officers and men having been lost and only one officer and four men saved of the entire crew.

Why Do Many Die?

Part of a convoy, the Daring obviously had plenty of help near. Yet the huge life loss brings up the question whether the Germans are not using some new high explosive. During the Spanish Civil war a mystery German bomb containing a mixture of wool and liquid air was reported to have inflicted almost incredible damage in Barcelona. Is a liquid air explosive Hitler's "secret weapon"? Only time and the relaxed jaws of the censorships will tell.

The Altmark affair may turn out to be cleverly laid groundwork to excuse a Hitler drive through neutral territory, an event that even the reported peace moves do not discount as an immediate possible contingency.

In the World war the German government tore up its neutrality treaty with Belgium. Since — to say the least—the Reich has shown slight regard for small nations in its way. Consequently, the high and mighty indignation of the Nazis at the flagrant British violation of neutral rights, might be amusing if it did not contain the dire possibility that one of Signor Mussolini's Ethiopians may be concealed in that woodpile.

For months, to use the words of the colored parson, Germany has been "bearing down hard" on neutrality, its rights and privileges, stressing its dearer-than-life quality to the Belgians, Holland, the Scandinavian and other countries on the edge of the war zone.

Air Control of Sea

With control of the North sea having passed largely to the German air force, many German ships have used Norway's waters as a safe road to Germany.

The Bremen—a prize of war if there ever was one—went through the Norwegian coastal zone, guarded by a convoy of planes. Many other ships, including ore-laden cargo carriers and refugee German ships from foreign ports, have found Norway's waters an easy path of entry to Germany.

The one ship which had trouble making the voyage in the past was the City of Flint. This headache to German diplomacy, on direct orders from Berlin, was flaunted in the face of Norwegian authorities until they had to seize it, relieving the Germans of embarrassment.

When the Altmark—with its past connection with the Graf Von Spee and its prisoners, a tempting morsel if ever there was one—came into Norwegian waters it turned in at Bergen. In Bergen, as at every other neutral port in the war zone, there are plenty of spies and secret agents of all belligerents. In no other way other than by direct radio could the Altmark have more efficiently reported her presence to the British admiralty.

The Altmark Adventure

With an escort of two small Norwegian torpedo boats the Altmark steamed inside the three-mile limit, a fat rabbit making faces at the hounds of the British "mosquito fleet." As might have been expected, the Intrepid dashed in and demanded that the Altmark return to Bergen to be searched. Within their rights, the Norwegian escort refused and the Altmark took refuge in a "blind alley" fjord, the British outside.

Whereupon, the commander of the Altmark telephoned Berlin for instructions, paralleling the course of conduct of the commander of the prize crew of the City of Flint. From the point where he was stationed to large German air fields is about half an hour. Within a few hours the Altmark could have been reached by German subs or by battleships and cruisers, larger than the British force.

Not a plane was sent, not an effort made to save the Altmark.

After nightfall, hours later, the inevitable occurred when the Cossack moved upon the Altmark and threw a tough boarding party of 30 aboard. On board the Altmark were the guards detailed from the Graf Von Spee, all of them armed. According to all accounts, not one shot was fired at the British, although seven Germans were killed and four wounded, probably in the first volley.

What Was Behind It?

The prisoners were rescued and taken to England, the Altmark and survivors of her crew left on the beach. But behind it all, in view of the lack of effort made to rescue the Altmark, the question remains:

Did the German government want the British to violate Norwegian neutrality to furnish a precedent for some contemplated activity of its own — perhaps through Luxembourg or elsewhere?

In such a view it might appear that the Altmark was used for bait to bring about a situation which would excuse German violations of neutrality to the "home folks."

Like all the rest of the war this should become clear within the next five or six critical weeks.

Insofar as the situation in Finland is concerned, the result is another triumph of wishful thinking, to be listed along with Spain, Poland and all the rest. From the first week of the war the Russians have held the upper part of Finland with its nickel and gold mines and a section of the Arctic highway. Minor Finnish successes were exploited far beyond their real significance.

The Fall of Finland

The overcoming of the Mannerheim line, in two weeks, is a direct consequence, since a fully alarmed world, duly informed of the true situation, might have given more aid to the Finns—in time.

The stories of Finnish "ghost troops" armed with light machine guns "mopping up" whole Russian battalions every hour of the night take on a pitiful and contemptible reflex in view of the heartrending and somber actuality.

The Mannerheim line was one of the world's strongest positions. In below zero weather, the Reds overcame this belt of steel and cross fire of all kinds of weapons in 14 days. The attack and its outcome argues ill for the stability of the Maginot line.

From the blood-stained snow of Finland the Red army, an ever brutal and mighty force, emerges as a new terror to Scandinavia and to Europe. Laughter and decision will not halt its progress. Guns and men may. Unless that and other realities are faced and recognized, there will be other Finlands and on a far vaster scale.

Job Knowledge Is a Great Help In Getting One

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX, Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage — Distributed by King Features Syndicate, Inc.

So many young men write to this column that a job would turn this world, in spite of all its horrors, into a Paradise. They've got the girl, their families approve and in a good many cases they've got the ring—but no job.

So, suppose this morning we have a little sales talk on the subject of job-getting. Ever since I had lunch with those two indefatigable optimists who wrote "We are Forty and We Did Get Jobs," I've been under the impression that you can land a job if you go about it the right way.

For instance, these women said that when they went after a job they persuaded the pundit who had the job to give, that they were not looking for work as much as he was looking for someone of their knowledge and ability.

They Studied Hard

I remember one particular instance, in which a job was offered to demonstrate a new type of refrigerator. Not only did they study up everything connected with that refrigerator in advance, but they went around to places where rival refrigerators were sold and discovered everything available about the rival coolers besides. When they applied for the job they simply overwhelmed the new refrigerator agent with what they knew concerning refrigerators past and present, and especially the one about to be put on the market.

A current magazine reprints an article on: "They Pick Their Jobs —and Land Them." The marketing clinics have followed the lines of the two women who wrote "We are Forty and We Did Get Jobs." These clinics say "provided you are qualified, the key to the job you want lies in your own hands—if you only knew it."

This is no glittering Ham-and-Egg racket. It's plain every-day truth. In cold-hearted New York, where job competition is ruthless, thousands of people—all sorts of people—have found the keys that unlock doors, providing them with a living.

The question of job-getting boils down to this: How much do you know about the job you want to get? A couple of weeks ago, at one of Mrs. Roosevelt's press conferences, the guests were two women trying to reduce that terrific quota of jobless youth, amounting to between four and a half to five million.

It seems that a tremendous proportion of jobless girls want to be stenographers and typists, yet they have not the equipment for these white-collar jobs. A good many have not been through high school, and they are weak on the absolutely necessary secretarial foundations —a working knowledge of the English language, spelling, punctuation and sentence structure. To get a secretarial job, it's necessary to have accomplished the ground work, and one must study to acquire these qualifications.

There is a strong feeling among girls of American birth against being domestics. Statistics prove that domestics marry, though the palm for marriage has to go to waitresses. Goodness knows why, except that feeding a man probably suggests domesticity. Domestic servants marry to a greater degree than those who hold down the white-collar job.

Same Rule for Both

We seem to have been discussing jobs for women more than jobs for men. But the same rule holds good for both. If a boy has left school in one of the lower grades, he's got to study up if he wants a white-collar job. The tragedy of these odd-man jobs is that so many boys, who have not completed a grade school education are after them.

"Dig out your hidden assets. Everybody has them," says the Man-Marketing Clinic, founded by Sidney Edlund. The clinic teaches people to see themselves as they would like their employers to see them.

These clinics are cropping all over the United States. The original clinic, started in New York, has resulted in the founding of others, in Chicago, New Orleans, Fordham University, and at the University of Oklahoma. Ten more are in the making elsewhere.

A group of youngsters opened their own clinic for mutual criticism and aid. Now that clinic is closed —because they all found jobs.

Tin Box Saves Life Of New York Policeman

New York, Feb. 26. (AP)—A little tin of stomach tablets saved a policeman from shooting himself today by deflecting a bullet he accidentally fired from his own pistol.

The officer, Martin Callahan, pulled out the gun while arresting a burglary suspect and fired it while putting it back in the holster. The tin was in his overcoat pocket.

Radio Device Shows How Unsound Cow Sounds

Pullman, Wash. (AP)—Dr. Ernest O. McCulloch, assistant professor of bacteriology at Washington State college, has invented a new sort of radio to enable veterinarians to "listen in" on cows and detect the presence of mastitis, a prevalent disease.

A single stream of milk from the "suspected" cow is milked into the machine and a dial turned until the humming noise ceases. The reading on the dial indicates the degree of abnormality of the milk—and the cow—Dr. McCulloch explains.

Stocks Sell Off when Traders Show Little Interest in Prices

Volume of Business Is the Lowest Since Last July 10

By FREDERICK GARDNER

New York, Feb. 26 (AP)—Stocks dipped again today in a disinterested manner featured mainly by the non-appearance of traders.

The lack of business—only 439,740 shares changed hands—was topped only by another gloomy Monday, that of February 5, which set the record of having been the slowest weekday since last July 10.

The Associated Press average of sixty stocks declined .1 of 1 point to 49.6.

The day started with most quotations a shade lower than Saturday's close and it ended in the same pattern. In between the bells, few shares shifted more than minor fractions.

Losing shares included Bethlehem, Caterpillar, Douglas, United Aircraft, U. S. Gypsum, Eastman, Allied Chemical, Westinghouse, Phelps Dodge and Phillips Petroleum. Closing a bit higher were U. S. Steel, General Motors, Chrysler, Sears Roebuck, Harvester, Anaconda, Kennecott, American Telephone, Loft and International Paper preferred.

Lower in the Curb were Aluminum Co. of America, Draper Corp., National Steel Car and Cities Service. Transactions totaled 124,000 shares.

Frederick Doctor Held On Narcotics Charge

Baltimore, Feb. 26. (AP) — Dr. Henry L. Fahrney of Frederick, secretary of the Frederick County Medical Society, was held here for the federal grand jury on charges of violating the Harrison narcotics act.

Bc i Martin, district supervisor of the federal narcotics division, Baltimore, said Fahrney was arraigned before U. S. Commissioner James K. Cullen and released in $2,500 bail. He waived preliminary hearing, Martin declared.

Martin said he and Deputy Agent Vernon Ekas went to Frederick last Friday night and made a narcotics purchase from Farhney. After the transaction, the physician was arrested on a warrant issued by Cullen, and marked money used in the sale was recovered.

Last January 26, Martin said, federal agents bought 146 grains of narcotics from Fahrney, paying $140. The narcotics supervisor declared several other purchases had been made in the meantime.

"We wanted to make sure of ourselves before making an arrest," Martin said.

Groundkeeper at Polo Grounds Dies

New York, Feb. 26. (AP)—On the sixth anniversary of the death of John McGraw, who brought him to the Giants twenty-eight years ago, Henry Fabian, veteran groundkeeper at the Polo Grounds, died today of heart disease.

The 74-year old expert on baseball diamonds had come to New York from his home at Dallas, Tex., a week ago to supervise preparations of the Giants' ball park for the 1940 season. He suffered a heart attack immediately upon arrival.

Ordered to bed by his physician, Dr. A. M. Paleramo, Fabian insisted on being taken to the Polo Grounds last week and collapsed.

Silos Curb Painting Of Farm Pictures

Pittsburgh, Feb. 25 (AP)—Silos are hurting the business of painting farm pictures, Lila B. Hetzel, veteran Pittsburgh artist complained.

This is the way she has it figured out:

The silos mean farmers have more corn cutting machines. If they operate machines, farmers can't plant pumpkins between the rows of corn.

Nobody, she says, will buy a harvest picture without a pumpkin in it.

Refinery technicians have developed and are further developing processes which utilize every drop of crude oil, even the odor.

Stocks Sell Off when Traders Show Little Interest in Prices

Volume of Business Is the Lowest Since Last July 10

By FREDERICK GARDNER

New York, Feb. 26 (AP)—Stocks dipped again today in a disinterested manner featured mainly by the non-appearance of traders.

The lack of business—only 439,740 shares changed hands—was topped only by another gloomy Monday, that of February 5, which set the record of having been the slowest weekday since last July 10.

The Associated Press average of sixty stocks declined .1 of 1 point to 49.6.

The day started with most quotations a shade lower than Saturday's close and it ended in the same pattern. In between the bells, few shares shifted more than minor fractions.

Losing shares included Bethlehem, Caterpillar, Douglas, United Aircraft, U. S. Gypsum, Eastman, Allied Chemical, Westinghouse, Phelps Dodge and Phillips Petroleum. Closing a bit higher were U. S. Steel, General Motors, Chrysler, Sears Roebuck, Harvester, Anaconda, Kennecott, American Telephone, Loft and International Paper preferred.

Lower in the Curb were Aluminum Co. of America, Draper Corp., National Steel Car and Cities Service. Transactions totaled 124,000 shares.

Baltimore, Feb. 26. (AP) — Dr. Henry L. Fahrney of Frederick, secretary of the Frederick County Medical Society, was held here for the federal grand jury on charges of violating the Harrison narcotics act.

Bc J Martin, district supervisor of the federal narcotics division, Baltimore, said Fahrney was arraigned before U. S. Commissioner James K. Cullen and released in $2,500 bail. He waived preliminary hearing, Martin declared.

Martin said he and Deputy Agent Vernon Ekas went to Frederick last Friday night and made a narcotics purchase from Farhney. After the transaction, the physician was arrested on a warrant issued by Cullen, and marked money used in the sale was recovered.

Last January 26, Martin said, federal agents bought 146 grains of narcotics from Fahrney, paying $140. The narcotics supervisor declared several other purchases had been made in the meantime.

"We wanted to make sure of ourselves before making an arrest," Martin said.

Groundkeeper at Polo Grounds Dies

New York, Feb. 26. (AP)—On the sixth anniversary of the death of John McGraw, who brought him to the Giants twenty-eight years ago, Henry Fabian, veteran groundkeeper at the Polo Grounds, died today of heart disease.

The 74-year old expert on baseball diamonds had come to New York from his home at Dallas, Tex., a week ago to supervise preparations of the Giants' ball park for the 1940 season. He suffered a heart attack immediately upon arrival.

Ordered to bed by his physician, Dr. A. M. Paleramo, Fabian insisted on being taken to the Polo Grounds last week and collapsed.

Silos Curb Painting Of Farm Pictures

Pittsburgh, Feb. 25 (AP)—Silos are hurting the business of painting farm pictures, Lila B. Hetzel, veteran Pittsburgh artist complained.

This is the way she has it figured out:

The silos mean farmers have more corn cutting machines. If they operate machines, farmers can't plant pumpkins between the rows of corn.

Nobody, she says, will buy a harvest picture without a pumpkin in it.

Refinery technicians have developed and are further developing processes which utilize every drop of crude oil, even the odor.

CHAPTER FORTY

AN HOUR later, Cholly held out her hand to Terry on the street by the bus.

"Goodby, Terry," she said, tears filling her throat. "I'll always be wishing you luck."

"I'll drop you a Christmas card." Terry tried to grin. "And if you decide to marry that guy Hayworth, I hope all your children have red hair."

"So you don't wish me luck after all?" Cholly made an attempt to match his gaiety.

"Goodby, Terry! Be seein' you."

He stood bareheaded, his face etched with longing. Then, turning swiftly, he walked down the street to the cafe where he sang.

Romany looked up from her book when Cholly opened the door.

"Well!" Cholly threw her coat onto a chair and sat down. "It's all over. So you see, you had nothing to fear."

"I'm glad," Romany sighed with relief. "I know it wasn't easy for you, darlin'. But we won't talk about it any more. Dove called. I allayed his suspicions by telling him you were doing a little unfinished business. Which was perfectly true."

Before Cholly could answer, there was the unmistakable sound of a key in the lock.

"Who is it?" Romany jumped up, calling in alarm.

"Surprise!"

The door flew open and a vision in sables confronted the two amazed girls.

"Aunt Cissie!" Romany cried happily. "Aunt Cecelia!"

Cissie opened her arms and ran to her eagerly.

"Hello, darlings!" Her aunt laughed. "I thought I'd surprise you for Thanksgiving."

Romany hugged and kissed her rapturously. Then Cholly was embraced by her hostess. Cecelia was followed by her maid, Gretchen, and the chauffeur, Hanover, who came in through the kitchen.

Things didn't begin to settle down to normal for a half hour, as trunks, boxes and bags were put into their proper places. Gretchen began getting some of her mistresses things unpacked so that she would be properly cared for until the next day. Cissie would not permit Cholly and Romany to move their things from the big room overlooking the lake.

"I'm partial to the guest quarters anyway," Cecelia graciously assured them. She had slipped into a negligee of white chiffon and relaxed on the divan in the library before the open fire.

"Oh, lordie!" she sighed luxuriously, "it's grand to be back in these United States!"

Then she moved her pillows so that she could look at the two girls sitting, wide-eyed and worshipful, nearby.

"Well, bless my old buttons!" Cissie shook her head then in wonderment. "If you two kids haven't given me the surprise of my life! Every time I picked up an American radio magazine in Europe, I saw one of your pictures staring at me. Finally, I decided everybody must be sick of my bragging that one was my niece and the other a girl I'd known since she was a day old. So I decided to come home and get in on some of the excitement."

"It's been like a dream," Romany sighed happily. "And everything happened so fast it's made me dizzy."

"And all because you met that announcer at the station, wasn't it?" Cecelia beamed. "From your letters I decided he must be your steady."

The door flew open and a vision in sables confronted the two amazed girls.

Romany nodded.

"I guess you'd call him that. He's pretty devoted."

"And how about the writer who coached you? Does he drop around?"

"Once in a while," Romany shrugged, "when I round him up by force. He's been having a run of bad luck and the masculine pride is itching him. Cholly," Romany grinned, "is practically married to the Hayworth syrup millions."

Cecelia seemed delighted.

"I see by the papers, Cholly, that Dove Hayworth has been devoted to you. What does mama say about his falling in love with an actress?"

Cholly winced, and her cheeks grew pink.

"I haven't had the pleasure of meeting the lady. But I'm told she says plenty. I've sent word to her, though, that her son is perfectly safe in so far as I'm concerned."

"Oh," Cissie scoffed, "don't let a little thing like Carrie Hayworth stand in your way of marrying a millionaire! Carrie does a lot of barking, but her bark is much worse than her bite. I've met her a few times at parties. She's not a bad sort. I'm just dying to meet all the boy friends. You must bring them around."

"Do you mean it?" Romany asked, surprised.

"What do you think I came home for," Cissie smiled, looking very young and beautiful in the light from the fire. "Through the lines I've been smelling blossoms and I've come home to play cupid. I was bored to death in Europe. No one ever talks of anything but war, war, war! We'll have some parties, and lots of fun. Would you like it?"

"I'd love it," Romany sighed happily. "Wouldn't we, Cholly?"

"Of course," Cholly said, a little uncomfortably. "But I'll be finding an apartment now."

Cecelia sat up hurriedly.

"You will not! And don't let me hear you talking about it, my dear. You stay right where you are. How can I keep an eye on your romance with Dover Hayworth if you aren't here where I can meddle in your affairs?"

Cholly was surprised.

"You really want me to stay here?"

"Of course I do!" Cissie assured her heartily. "And I'm going to tell everybody you're my ward. If it's high society Carrie Hayworth wants, we'll give it to her."

"Oh, that's marvelous!" Romany grinned. "You will, won't you, Cholly?"

"Well!" Cholly smiled uncertainly, "I do feel I'm imposing. But if you really want me—"

"I certainly do." Cissie settled back on the divan, "and not another word out of you! I think I'll open the house in the country for the holidays. An apartment is no place to spend Christmas."

"Cholly and I both have a Christmas broadcast," Romany told her aunt. "Brent is working, too, of course. It would be fun to have Christmas at your country place."

"Only a month," Cissie sighed. "I can't believe it! You girls may invite any of your radio friends you'd like for Thanksgiving dinner Thursday. I think we'll just have it here."

"Oh, thanks," Romany said excitedly. "I'll see if Brent can come. And I'll ask Bax."

Cissie twinkled.

"Do you suppose Dover could break away from Carrie, Cholly?"

"Mrs. Hayworth is with her sister in Boston for Thanksgiving," Cholly said. "I'll ask Dover. It's awfully sweet of you."

"And what," asked Cecelia, "became of the singer you were engaged to?"

"Oh, that's all off!" Cholly looked into the fire. "He goes with Myra Noyes, the radio star now. I guess he'll marry her."

"Mercy!" laughed Cecelia. "I've never seen so much romance. It must be in the air."

A little later Cecelia yawned.

"And, by the way, I bought a perfume company that was dying on it's feet in Paris, from a friend of mine. The Lenoir perfume factory. I'm thinking of establishing a Chicago branch. It'll give me something to do. I never could see much romance in farm implements."

Creams Cannot Be Blamed for Hair on Face

No Application to Skin Is Known That Will Cause Growth

BY LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

Does the application of plain petrolatum on the face cause excessive growth of hair?

No application to the skin that is known has the capacity either to increase or to retard the growth of hair. The belief which commonly prevails that creams are conducive to the growth of hair on women's faces is a mistaken impression. The reason it prevails is probably due to the fact that many women become concerned with the creams they use about the time the skin begins to show signs of aging. At this same time most women have an increased growth of facial hair. The conclusion is natural, therefore, that the use of the cream has caused the hair growth.

Earache Treatment

What about drops in the ear for earache?

To depend upon ear drops alone in earache is to open the door to danger.

Earache, especially in children, is usually due to infection of the middle ear with pus behind the drum. The symptoms do not abate until the pressure of the pus is relieved. Sometimes the pus breaks through the drum naturally and the drops help to soften the drum and to aid in this. Nothing, however, takes the place of a competent doctor who is prepared to open the drum when the time is ripe.

Value of Injections

Are medicated injections for painful heels beneficial?

Many substances are used as injections to give relief for painful heel. Painful heels may be due to bony spurs, to infected bursae or simply to fibrositis of the heel. Injections will naturally not make the bony spurs disappear but they may temporarily relieve the pain.

C. L. B.: "What conditions cause arthritis? Can the calcium deposits be removed after they are formed or can they be changed in form? what diet and vitamins are needed by arthritis patients?"

Answer—The fundamental cause of chronic arthritis is probably infection. This infection may be latent and give no trouble at the site of its origin—so-called focal infections in the teeth, tonsils, gall-bladder, etc. Probably age and posture and constitution also have something to do with chronic arthritis. Calcium deposits return if removed and nothing effectual can be done for them by the use of medicine. Vitamins B, C and D are used very considerably in the treatment of arthritis patients. Diet itself has very little influence.

Widow Kills Daughter And Commits Suicide

Monterey, Calif., Feb. 26 (AP)—Mrs. May Harmon, 54, widow of a Spanish-American war veteran, and her twelve-year-old daughter, Edith, were found shot to death in their home.

Deputy Coroner Sal Rancadore said indications were the child had been shot in her sleep and the mother had turned the pistol on herself. Mrs. Harmon had been despondent since her husband's death two months ago.

Two Russian Pilots Admit They Bombed Village in Sweden

Copenhagen, Feb. 26 (AP) — The Danish press printed reports from North Finland that two Soviet Russian airplane pilots, now prisoners of war, had admitted participating in the bombing of the Swedish border village of Pajala last Wednesday.

(Moscow has denied that the bombing, subject of a formal protest by the Swedish government, was done by Russian planes.)

The dispatches quoted the pilots as saying that thirteen planes took off from the Arctic Russian airbase at Murmansk last Wednesday under orders to bomb the Finnish town of Rovaniemi.

Six of the planes were forced to turn back because of engine trouble, while the other seven flew over the north country, dropping their bombs without knowing where they were at the time, the Russians were reported to have said.

Kills Mother in Quarrel over 3 Cents

Cadillac, Mich., Feb. 26. (AP)—Mother and son argued here over the price of a bunch of celery—there was a question of three cents—and the quarrel ended in death for the parent from stab wounds.

After hours of questioning John F. Andreen, 24, Sheriff Charles Osterberg announced that the young man confessed to killing his mother, Mrs. John G. Andreen, 48, with a kitchen knife. The story he told, Osterberg said, was this:

Buying a week-end grocery supply, Andreen paid eight cents for the celery. His mother, claiming he should have paid only five cents, became enraged and attacked him. In defending himself, Andreen seized the knife and stabbed her eight times.

Mrs. Andreen and her husband have been estranged for several years. Her son, Osterberg said, never attended school in his life but learned to read and write and worked on various mechanical devices he hoped to patent.

Seek Slayer of Girl At Her Funeral

New York, Feb. 26. (AP)—A score of detectives passed among a crowd of more than 1,000 mourners and curiosity-seekers here at the funeral of the slain Frances Marks, 23-year-old bookkeeper, in the hope that the killer, although he is unknown, might be detected.

The services in a funeral chapel, were marked by an hysterical outburst of the victim's mother who stood near the casket and shouted, "they took my pet child away."

Hey, Lupe, Turn in Your Police Badge

Kansas City, Feb. 26. Lupe Velez will have to give back her police badge if Chief L. B. Reed ever catches her with it.

Former Police Director Otto P. Higgins gave badges to the Mexican actress and 311 other persons. Chief Reed has called them all back.

The badges aren't any good now anyway. The police department has been taken over by the state and new badges have been issued.

This is the standard price tag used by General Motors dealers to show what makes up the prices of new cars delivered to customers. "PRICE OF CAR" means the price we charge for the car itself, including reimbursement for Federal Tax and conditioning—"TRANSPORTATION CHARGE" means a charge for transportation from factory to you, based on rail rates—"OPTIONAL EQUIPMENT AND ACCESSORIES" means the charge for any extra equipment or accessories you elect to buy.

It is, but once you've studied it over, you have the complete story on the price you pay.

It brings right out into the open the charges that occasion the difference between advertised at-the-factory delivered prices, and the delivered prices you pay here in your home town.

You can see how much you are being charged for transportation of the car from the factory to you, based on rail rates—how much for any extra equipment or accessories that you may elect to buy.

We General Motors dealers are marking every car on our showroom floors with this "plainview" price tag, to enable you more completely to measure the values we offer.

The merit of the cars themselves is plain to see — their good looks and good workmanship are reflected in every detail.

Yet value is always relative — it necessarily involves not only the price you pay but what that price includes—and this is true irrespective of what car you buy.

So keep this tag in mind when you're pricing cars, and if you encounter charges not listed here or that you don't understand, you're forewarned and can do your own policing.

We invite you to look over the stunning new 1940 General Motors cars we're now showing—on every count of size, utility, style and finish they reach a new high.

Examine their features. Check their quality, point by point. Then consider the price tag. Thus you can appraise for yourself their outstanding value and see exactly what your money buys.

"Once in a while," Romany shrugged, "when I round him up by force. He's been having a run of bad luck and the masculine pride is itching him. Cholly," Romany grinned, "is practically married to the Hayworth syrup millions."

Cecelia seemed delighted.

"I see by the papers, Cholly, that Dove Hayworth has been devoted to you. What does mama say about his falling in love with an actress?"

Cholly winced, and her cheeks grew pink.

"I haven't had the pleasure of meeting the lady. But I'm told she says plenty. I've sent word to her, though, that her son is perfectly safe in so far as I'm concerned."

"Oh," Cissie scoffed, "don't let a little thing like Carrie Hayworth stand in your way of marrying a millionaire! Carrie does a lot of barking, but her bark is much worse than her bite. I've met her a few times at parties. She's not a bad sort. I'm just dying to meet all the boy friends. You must bring them around."

"Do you mean it?" Romany asked, surprised.

"What do you think I came home for," Cissie smiled, looking very young and beautiful in the light from the fire. "Through the lines I've been smelling blossoms and I've come home to play cupid. I was bored to death in Europe. No one ever talks of anything but war, war! We'll have some parties, and lots of fun. Would you like it?"

"I'd love it," Romany sighed happily. "Wouldn't we, Cholly?"

"Of course," Cholly said, a little uncomfortably. "But I'll be finding an apartment now."

Cecelia sat up hurriedly.

"You will not! And don't let me hear you talking about it, my dear. You stay right where you are. How can I keep an eye on your romance with Dover Hayworth if you aren't here where I can meddle in your affairs?"

Cholly was surprised.

"You really want me to stay here?"

"Of course I do!" Cissie assured her heartily. "And I'm going to tell everybody you're my ward. If it's high society Carrie Hayworth wants, we'll give it to her."

"Oh, that's marvelous!" Romany grinned. "You will, won't you, Cholly?"

"Well!" Cholly smiled uncertainly, "I do feel I'm imposing. But if you really want me—"

"I certainly do." Cissie settled back on the divan, "and not another word out of you! I think I'll open the house in the country for the holidays. An apartment is no place to spend Christmas."

"Cholly and I both have a Christmas broadcast," Romany told her aunt. "Brent is working, too, of course. It would be fun to have Christmas at your country place."

"Only a month," Cissie sighed. "I can't believe it! You girls may invite any of your radio friends you'd like for Thanksgiving dinner Thursday. I think we'll just have it here."

"Oh, thanks," Romany said excitedly. "I'll see if Brent can come. And I'll ask Bax."

Cissie twinkled.

"Do you suppose Dover could break away from Carrie, Cholly?"

"Mrs. Hayworth is with her sister in Boston for Thanksgiving," Cholly said. "I'll ask Dover. It's awfully sweet of you."

"And what," asked Cecelia, "became of the singer you were engaged to?"

"Oh, that's all off!" Cholly looked into the fire. "He goes with Myra Noyes, the radio star now. I guess he'll marry her."

"Mercy!" laughed Cecelia. "I've never seen so much romance. It must be in the air."

A little later Cecelia yawned.

"And, by the way, I bought a perfume company that was dying on it's feet in Paris, from a friend of mine. The Lenoir perfume factory. I'm thinking of establishing a Chicago branch. It'll give me something to do. I never could see much romance in farm implements."

Creams Cannot Be Blamed for Hair on Face

No Application to Skin Is Known That Will Cause Growth

BY LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

Does the application of plain petrolatum on the face cause excessive growth of hair?

No application to the skin that is known has the capacity either to increase or to retard the growth of hair. The belief which commonly prevails that creams are conducive to the growth of hair on women's faces is a mistaken impression. The reason it prevails is probably due to the fact that many women become concerned with the creams they use about the time the skin begins to show signs of aging. At this same time most women have an increased growth of facial hair. The conclusion is natural, therefore, that the use of the cream has caused the hair growth.

Earache Treatment

What about drops in the ear for earache?

To depend upon ear drops alone in earache is to open the door to danger.

Earache, especially in children, is usually due to infection of the middle ear with pus behind the drum. The symptoms do not abate until the pressure of the pus is relieved. Sometimes the pus breaks through the drum naturally and the drops help to soften the drum and to aid in this. Nothing, however, takes the place of a competent doctor who is prepared to open the drum when the time is ripe.

Value of Injections

Are medicated injections for painful heels beneficial?

Many substances are used as injections to give relief for painful heel. Painful heels may be due to bony spurs, to infected bursae or simply to fibrositis of the heel. Injections will naturally not make the bony spurs disappear but they may temporarily relieve the pain.

C. L. B.: "What conditions cause arthritis? Can the calcium deposits be removed after they are formed or can they be changed in form? what diet and vitamins are needed by arthritis patients?"

Answer—The fundamental cause of chronic arthritis is probably infection. This infection may be latent and give no trouble at the site of its origin—so-called focal infections in the teeth, tonsils, gall-bladder, etc Probably age and posture and constitution also have something to do with chronic arthritis. Calcium deposits return if removed and nothing effectual can be done for them by the use of medicine. Vitamins B, C and D are used very considerably in the treatment of arthritis patients. Diet itself has very little influence.

Widow Kills Daughter And Commits Suicide

Two Russian Pilots Admit They Bombed Village in Sweden

Copenhagen, Feb. 26 (AP) — The Danish press printed reports from North Finland that two Soviet Russian airplane pilots, now prisoners of war, had admitted participating in the bombing of the Swedish border village of Pajala last Wednesday.

(Moscow has denied that the bombing, subject of a formal protest by the Swedish government, was done by Russian planes.)

The dispatches quoted the pilots as saying that thirteen planes took off from the Arctic Russian airbase at Murmansk last Wednesday under orders to bomb the Finnish town of Rovaniemi.

Six of the planes were forced to turn back because of engine trouble, while the other seven flew over the north country, dropping their bombs without knowing where they were at the time, the Russians were reported to have said.

Kills Mother in Quarrel over 3 Cents

Cadillac, Mich., Feb. 26. (AP)—Mother and son argued here over the price of a bunch of celery—there was a question of three cents—and the quarrel ended in death for the parent from stab wounds.

After hours of questioning John F. Andreen, 24, Sheriff Charles Osterberg announced that the young man confessed to killing his mother, Mrs. John G. Andreen, 48, with a kitchen knife. The story he told, Osterberg said, was this:

Buying a week-end grocery supply, Andreen paid eight cents for the celery. His mother, claiming he should have paid only five cents, became enraged and attacked him. In defending himself, Andreen seized the knife and stabbed her eight times.

Mrs. Andreen and her husband have been estranged for several years. Her son, Osterberg said, never attended school in his life but learned to read and write and worked on various mechanical devices he hoped to patent.

Seek Slayer of Girl At Her Funeral

New York, Feb. 26. (AP)—A score of detectives passed among a crowd of more than 1,000 mourners and curiosity-seekers here at the funeral of the slain Frances Marks, 23-year-old bookkeeper, in the hope that the killer, although he is unknown, might be detected.

The services in a funeral chapel, were marked by an hysterical outburst of the victim's mother who stood near the casket and shouted, "they took my pet child away."

Hey, Lupe, Turn in Your Police Badge

Kansas City, Feb. 26. Lupe Velez will have to give back her police badge if Chief L. B. Reed ever catches her with it.

Former Police Director Otto P. Higgins gave badges to the Mexican actress and 311 other persons. Chief Reed has called them all back.

The badges aren't any good now anyway. The police department has been taken over by the state and new badges have been issued.

This is the standard price tag used by General Motors dealers to show what makes up the prices of new cars delivered to customers. "PRICE OF CAR" means the price we charge for the car itself, including reimbursement for Federal Tax and conditioning—"TRANSPORTATION CHARGE" means a charge for transportation from factory to you, based on rail rates—"OPTIONAL EQUIPMENT AND ACCESSORIES" means the charge for any extra equipment or accessories you elect to buy.

It is, but once you've studied it over, you have the complete story on the price you pay.

It brings right out into the open the charges that occasion the difference between advertised at-the-factory delivered prices, and the delivered prices you pay here in your home town.

You can see how much you are being charged for transportation of the car from the factory to you, based on rail rates—how much for any extra equipment or accessories that you may elect to buy.

We General Motors dealers are marking every car on our showroom floors with this "plainview" price tag, to enable you more completely to measure the values we offer.

The merit of the cars themselves is plain to see — their good looks and good workmanship are reflected in every detail.

Yet value is always relative — it necessarily involves not only the price you pay but what that price includes—and this is true irrespective of what car you buy.

So keep this tag in mind when you're pricing cars, and if you encounter charges not listed here or that you don't understand, you're forewarned and can do your own policing.

We invite you to look over the stunning new 1940 General Motors cars we're now showing—on every count of size, utility, style and finish they reach a new high.

Examine their features. Check their quality, point by point. Then consider the price tag. Thus you can appraise for yourself their outstanding value and see exactly what your money buys.

Allegany Will Play Keyser Here Tonight

WMI Champions Will Play Four Games This Week

LaSalle Will Play Two Games and Fort Hill One

Allegany Will Go To Johnstown for Games Friday and Saturday

Allegany high school, WMI league champions, will meet Keyser high here tonight at 8 o'clock, which will be the first of four games the Campers will play this week.

The Bowers team should win easily over Keyser, as the West Virginians have been woefully weak this season and not up to standard of Keyser teams of former years.

Allegany Reserves will play the Cumblers in a preliminary game beginning at 7 o'clock.

Wednesday night Allegany Boys and Girls teams will travel to Barton for WMI contests, with the Cumberland teams favored to turn in victories.

Two Games at Johnstown

Thursday will be a day of rest for Allegany but the team will face the two games Friday and Saturday as the Campers will go to Johnstown, arriving Friday on a two-day trip. They meet Westmont Friday night and Ferndale Saturday night.

Allegany beat Westmont here 47 to 28 and turned back Ferndale when the Pennsylvanians came here earlier in the season 43 to 39. However, the Campers will probably be hard-pressed in both games as Johnstown teams are usually tough to beat on their own floors.

Gaffney, Allegany center, who has been unable to play for the last few days due to an injury is expected to be ready for the Johnstown games.

LaSalle Plays Twice

Fort Hill will play only one game this week, that being a CVAL contest at Hagerstown Friday. The Cadets who defeated Hagerstown earlier a few weeks ago can take second place in the League by winning while a victory for Hagerstown will give Fort Hill and the Washington Countians in a tie for the runner-up position.

LaSalle has two games carded for this week, the first will be played at Frostburg tonight with Bell as their opponents. The second game will also be at Frostburg and will be against the Frostburg Bees Friday night. LaSalle beat both teams here, turning back Beall high 30 and the Jayvees 41 to 26.

Other games tonight will find Greenfield at Romney, Circleville at Petersburg, both Potomac Valley conference games; Bayard at Elk Garden; Mill Bridge at Ridgeley.

Baseball Banter

By JUDSON BAILEY

New York, Feb. 26 (AP)—Pepper game for baseball fans training at home:

Burgess Whitehead, the Giants' scholarly infielder who spent the winter studying at Duke, is staying at a tourist camp in Winter Haven, Fla., where the club is training. . . . Could this be an omen: Billy Rogell, the shortstop the Chicago Cubs acquired from Detroit, hit into a triple play on his first turn at bat in professional baseball. . . . Pepper Martin, the veteran star of the St. Louis Cardinals, will celebrate his ninth birthday this month. . . . You guessed it, February 29. . . . (He'll be 36.)

Did you know dept.—Clark Griffith, Washington's Old Fox who is always jabbing the Yankees and thought up that rule to keep the world champions from trading within the American League, was the first manager the Yanks had and piloted the club from 1903 through part of the 1908 season.

In applauding Frankie Frisch's plan to hold two workouts a day for the Pirates at camp, some reflection has been cast on easy-going Pie Traynor's one-a-day program in years past. . . . So it ought to be pointed out that a fellow named Joe McCarthy has done all right with one practice session a day for his Yankees. . . . Outfielder Tony Criscola, who'll get a tryout with the St. Louis Browns, twice drove in seven runs in a game for San Antonio in the Texas League last season.

The same day the Yankee delegation left New York for training camp another expedition left for Florida on another train. . . . It was Babe Ruth, his wife and daughter. . . . And you know which gang got the bigger sendoff from the crowd at Penn Station. . . . Bill Dickey of the Yankees has finally settled the controversy over his middle name by admitting it's Malcolm. . . . Who said consistency was a jewel? . . . Alex Kampouris hit exactly .249 in the National League for three consecutive seasons and the Giants shipped him to the International League.

One feller Bob Feller will be glad to see in the American League Dick Bartell, now of the Detroit Tigers. . . . When Dick was shortstopping for the Giants Feller fanned him eleven straight times in the 1937 series of exhibitnon games.

Phillies Purchase New First Baseman

Philadelphia, Feb. 26. (AP)—The Phillies hope they have solved their first base problem.

With Gus Suhr a holdout, Rookie Jack Bolling still lacking polish and unable to swing a deal for Zeke Bonura, the local National Leaguers bought Big Ed Levy from Newark of the International League.

"We think we've landed a swell prospect," President Gerry Nugent of the Phils said. "They tell me he can hit, field, run the bases and think for himself."

Nugent sent an undisclosed amount of cash and Infielder Jim Schilling to Newark for Levy, but there's a catch in it. If Levy fails to make good by May 15, Nugent said, the Phils may return him to Newark and receive back their money. Shilling, however, will remain Newark's property.

Last year Levy hit 22 doubles, three triples and 11 home runs for Newark for an average of .261 in 95 games. He is 23 years old and bats and throws right-handed.

Colorado Coach Denies Charges

Boulder, Colo., Feb. 26 (AP)—President Robert L. Stearns of Colorado University disclosed today that Coach Bernard R. (Bunny) Oakes denied "some of the charges" brought against him by thirty-five players from the squad he piloted to the Big Seven Conference football title last fall.

Oakes, he added, "explained" some of the other accusations made in a thirteen-page petition asking dismissal of the coach.

Stearns indicated he would appoint a five-member faculty committee Wednesday to investigate the charges against Oakes, as well as accusations made by the bald-pated mentor against certain members of the athletic department and a general study of the department.

The players' accusations against Oakes ranged from overlong practice sessions to threats against players' jobs.

Baseball Briefs

Anaheim, Cal., Feb. 26 (AP)—The Philadelphia Athletics' camp is still gossiping about a 373-foot home run drive Bob Johnson delivered on his first trip to the plate over the week-end. The Messrs. Mack also are excited about their "kid" infield, starring Benny McCoy at second base.

Orlando, Fla., Feb. 26 (AP)—With four catchers seeking to squeeze into three berths on the Washington Senators' squad, Manager Bucky Harris turned over to Coach Bennie Bengough today the task of developing Jake Early and Al Evans, slated for the "squeeze." Rick Ferrell and Tony Giuliani are the heavy duty receivers again.

Bradenton, Fla., Feb. 26 (AP)—The Boston Bees' camp isn't scheduled to open until Thursday, but no less than six regulars have checked in early to limber up while Manager Casey Stengel schools an assortment of rookies. The official Bees' delegation leaves Boston tomorrow.

WHO'S THAT GENT WITH THE BAT! HE'S THE McCOY!

Spring training already has opened for the Philadelphia Athletics at Anaheim, Cal., and the fellow who's going to be watched the closest is the gent with the bat at right. He's Benny McCoy, the $45,000 free agent who played substitute second base for the Detroit Tigers last year. Other A's in the picture are rookies Ed Collins, Fred Chapman and Bud Hancken.

GRANTLAND RICE

A NARROWING CIRCLE

Chicago, Feb. 26 (N.A.N.A.)—The circle narrows about Joe Louis and the contenders come into clearer view. Young fighters who wouldn't have been even remotely considered as opponents for him are ranging themselves against him. Johnny Paychek already has been matched with him. Lee Savold is being readied for a shot at him. Only a week or so ago Louis faltered through fifteen rounds with the rough and clownish Arturo Godoy.

This doesn't mean that Louis is ready to be taken and that the time is at hand for some strong young fellow to rush in, belt him out from under his crown and rush off to gather a million dollars or so.

The Scene Changes

But the scene in which he moves has been changed. None of those pressing closer about him now is capable of beating him — but they know that he can be beaten. They know that in his last two fights he was hit often enough to have been knocked out but actually didn't come even close to a knockout because neither Bob Pastor nor Godoy can punch.

Naturally, this is stimulating to the young heavyweights around the country. Two years or so ago there was no real inducement to any young heavyweight, beginning to throw his punches in some remote corner, to hit the trail for a title match because there was a bogey man at the end of the trail. Now every young heavyweight is rushing to join the circle that has been formed about the champion.

The boys are coming out of the bushes — out of the shops and off the docks and down off the trucks and out of the jungles. The old lure is there again — the chance not only to grab some money to stay the limit, perhaps — but to beat Louis and win the title.

Rugged and Willing

This should bring about some exciting action. Louis, at twenty-six, rugged and full of health and not yet bored by his title or given to the soft way of living that most champions take up after they have been champions for a little while, will fight anybody that his managers and Mike Jacobs select, being the most obliging of all champions in that respect.

He gives no hint of retiring or even wanting to retire — and why should he, so long as he still has youth on his side and there is all that money to be made? A full summer has been mapped out for him and he will go swinging on his way — but, all about him, his challengers are closing in. He still can hold these young fellows off — he should be able to, since he still is a young fellow himself. But it means that he has entered on a new phase of his career.

He is just the heavyweight champion now — and not a bogey man. The lightning still crackles in his fists and he still ranks as one of the greatest fighters the ring ever has known. But no longer frightens his opponents out of their wits. There are no more Paulinos dying in the training camp or Levinskys dying in the dressing room.

Challengers have been made aware of the fact that Louis, too, has weaknesses. They know, as long as they are in the ring with him, that they are in imminent danger of being knocked out with a punch or of being sent reeling crazily across the ring, wide open for a finishing smash. But they also know he can be bewildered or disturbed or completely bamboozled.

A Terrifying Appearance

Once nobody—save Max Schmeling — thought of getting Louis off that single track on which he travels so fearsomely. That was in the time when to be matched with him meant certain destruction.

Men took matches with him for the money alone — and then almost immediately began to regret their greed. There was something mysterious and inscrutable and terrible about his very appearance. He was, it seemed, greater than any of the fighters who had gone before him. He was invincible and the utter lack of emotion that he showed made him terrifying.

Schmeling, in their first fight, demonstrated that Louis had no defense against a cunningly launched right hand and knocked him out. Louis came back from that knockout a better fighter because it fired him with a new determination and taught him a valuable lesson. He was a magnificent fighter the night he knocked out Jim Braddock to win the title and again the night he took his revenge on Schmeling.

He was — and still is — a better fighter than he was when he first entered New York and knocked out Primo Carnera and followed that triumph by hammering Max Baer into submission. In spite of the fact that he fought a bad fight against Godoy, he still would be a top-heavy favorite against any of his challengers — would be favored, indeed, to knock them out, one after the other, if they were all thrown into a ring with him on the same night.

Keeneland Lists New Stake Race

Lexington, Ky., Feb. 26 (AP) — A new stake race has been added to Keeneland's spring meeting program, it was announced today. It is the $2,500 added Ashland Oaks, a six-furlong dash for three-year-old fillies.

Officials of the non-profit track said nominations for stake events were largest in Keeneland's history. The eleven-day meeting opens Thursday, April 11, and closes Thursday, April 25. No races will be run on Mondays.

William Willetts Not Eligible To Play in Tourney

Former Fort Hill Player Cannot Compete with Piedmont

Piedmont, W. Va., Feb. 26—Piedmont high school will be without the services of William Willetts former Fort Hill high school player when it competes in the sectional basketball tournament at Keyser this weekend.

Willetts was declared ineligible to participate in games with West Virginia teams by the State Athletic Association and the decision was upheld last week by the State Board of Appeals, which reviewed the case at the request of Vernon Staggers, principal of Piedmont high school.

Willetts was declared ineligible under Article I, Section 20, of the by-laws of the State Athletic Association, which requires that a student transferring from one school to another must establish a year's school residence in the community unless his parents or legal guardian is a resident of the community. Willetts came here the first of the year from Cumberland where he attended Fort Hill High School and played on the school's basketball team. He makes his home here with his grandmother but his father is at present a resident of Pennsylvania.

Ruling A Hardship

In its consideration of the case the board admitted that its ruling may seem somewhat of a hardship to a student who is being provided a home by a relative, but pointed out that so many advantages are taken of a more liberal interpretation of what may be a legal change of residence that the board has always adhered to the direct wording of this rule in order to avoid complications and questions of favoritisms or inconsistency.

In a general letter sent out to interested parties the board of appeals listed the facts in the case as follows:

1. Piedmont believed the player under the circumstances to be eligible.

2. Principal Staggers of Piedmont wrote for a ruling in this case and took the boy off the team when he was declared ineligible.

No Formal Protest

3. No formal protest was made against Piedmont.

4. The principal at Keyser wrote questioning the eligibility of this player at Piedmont about the time Piedmont wrote for a ruling.

5. Any penalty against Piedmont will be considered later. Piedmont will not be excluded from the sectional tournament.

6. Piedmont should have inquired about the eligibility of this player before placing him on the eligibility list.

7. It i sunfortunate that some protest or inquiry was not made sooner by some of Piedmont's opponents.

8. Letters of inquiry of what penalty can or should be imposed in such a case have been received from Parsons and Romney.

9. Telegram sent to Piedmont reaffirming previous decision in the Willetts' case. Willetts is ineligible for interscholastic competition.

The letter also listed two other similar cases this year in which a similar interpretation of the rules had been made.

Forty-three Year Old New York Clubman Plays Fine Game

By BILL WHITE

New York, Feb. 26 (AP)—Herbert L. Bowman, who has reduced tennis to a science — but who plays golf cross-handed — almost gave the National Indoor Singles Championship Tennis Tournament a new hero today.

For the thin-thatched forty-three-year old New York clubman had Bobby Riggs hanging on desperately before America's No. 1 star could outlast him, 6-4, 8-6, in a match that heightened the interest of the small gallery more than any of the day's other offerings.

Bowman, content to stay in the back court and score on his precision-like placements, had Riggs worried. At one time he held a 5-2 advantage in the second set, and soon was but one point away from set point — only to flub an easy shot and give Riggs a lift that carried him on to victory.

Oklahoma's Don McNeill, the experts' choice to win this tournament, gave a workman-like display in stopping Morris Adelberg of Brooklyn, a player whose determination to get the ball back was greater than his ability. McNeill won, without too much trouble, 6-2, 6-3.

In the only minor upsets of the day S. E. Davenport of the West Side Club stopped the former Metropolitan Champion, eighth-seeded, Leonard Hartman by 6-4, 6-4 and Ladislav Hecht, first foreign seeded dumped C. D. Steele, Jr., of Westchester, N. Y., seventh-seeded, 1-6, 6-3, 6-4.

In the women's division, Mrs. Sarah Palfrey Fabyan of Brookline, Mass., first seeded, won handily from Mrs. Ann Page of West Point, 6-1, 6-3; Katherine Winthrop of Boston, fourth seeded, advanced in a much more difficult match, beating Mrs. M. L. Bostwick of New York, 6-3, 7-5, and Norma Taubele, fifth seeded among the women, and winner of the tourney in 1934, advanced into the fourth round with a 6-4, 6-4 victory over Anne Freeman of New York City.

Reds Erred in Trade--Grissom

Tampa, Fla., Feb. 26 (AP)—Lee Grissom, the southpaw pitcher the Cincinnati Reds traded to the Yankees, taunted his former teammates as he passed through here to his new headquarters.

He declared:

"What a mistake the Reds made in trading me to the Yankees! I'm going to be bearing down against Cincinnati every time I face them in an exhibition fame. My arm feels great."

Catcher Ernie Lombardi arrived for the opening of the Reds camp and planned to talk over his contract squabble with the club officials today.

Griff Wants Wasdell To Play First

Orlando, Fla., Feb. 26 (AP)—President Clark Griffith is urging Manager Bucky Harris to put Jimmy Wasdell, perennial rookie in the Washington Senators camp, in the first base job. Wasdell played outfield for Minneapolis last year.

The Senators still would like to make a deal with the Detroit Tigers for Hank Greenberg or Rudy York in return for shortstop Cecil Travis.

Exercise Helps Study, Says Boston Professor

During each day of study for examinations a college student should stop work and enjoy some active sport like skiing or skating, says L. Harold DeWolf, psychology professor at Boston University. He believes his idea will not be unpopular.

In outlining methods of preparing for an examination Professor DeWolf adds that neat clothing gives confidence and a disheveled appearance makes the student feel insecure.

Allegany Will Play Keyser Here Tonight

WMI Champions Will Play Four Games This Week

LaSalle Will Play Two Games and Fort Hill One

Allegany Will Go To Johnstown for Games Friday and Saturday

Allegany high school, WMI league champions, will meet Keyser high here tonight at 8 o'clock, which will be the first of four games the Campers will play this week.

The Bowers team should win easily over Keyser, as the West Virginians have been woefully weak this season and not up to standard of Keyser teams of former years.

Allegany Reserves will play the Keyslers in a preliminary game beginning at 7 o'clock.

Wednesday night Allegany Boys and Girls teams will travel to Barton for WMI contests, with the Cumberland teams favored to turn in victories.

Two Games at Johnstown

Thursday will be a day of rest for Allegany but the team will face the games Friday and Saturday as the Campers will go to Johnstown, leaving Friday on a two-day trip. They meet Westmont Friday night and Ferndale Saturday night.

Allegany beat Westmont here 47 to 28 and turned back Ferndale when the Pennsylvanians came here later in the season 43 to 39. However, the Campers will probably be hard-pressed in both games as Johnstown teams are usually tough to beat on their own floors.

Mahaney, Allegany center, who has been unable to play for the last few days due to an injury is expected to be ready for the Johnstown games.

LaSalle Plays Twice

Fort Hill will play only one game this week, that being a CVAL contest at Hagerstown Friday. The Cavaliers who defeated Hagerstown only a few weeks ago can take second place in the League by winning over the Hubs, a victory for Hagerstown will put Fort Hill and the Washington Countians in a tie for the runner-up position.

LaSalle has two games carded for this week, the first will be played at Frostburg tonight with as much as their opponents. The second game will also be at Frostburg and will be against the Frostburg Cubbies Friday night. LaSalle beat both teams here, turning back Beall 39 to 30 and the Jayvees 41 to 26.

Other games tonight will find Greenfield at Romney, Circleville at Petersburg, both Potomac Valley Conference games; Bayard at Elk Garden; Mill Bridge at Ridgeley.

"Pie" Traynor Seeks Fielder for Bucs

Hot Springs, Ark., Feb. 26 (AP)—Manager of the Pittsburgh Pirates open their spring training camp, the Pirates one-time great third baseman, Pie Traynor, will be absent for the first time in 20 years.

Traynor replaced as manager of the Bucs by Frankie Frisch at the end of last season, Traynor is now beating the bushes as a scout for Pittsburgh.

"I'm looking over the kids enrolled in Rogers Hornsby's baseball school," Pie opined that the Pirates would have to uncover a good Class A outfielder by the time the season opens.

"If anything should happen to Second Baseman Floyd Young or Shortstop Lee Hadley," he said, "we'd be sunk."

He added he hoped to locate a player 28 or 29 years old who might "click off on the right foot" after the Bucs open their camps.

Traynor, discussing the collapse of the injury-ridden Bucs last season, referred to his burly chest and said: "Some fellows, beset with injuries, would say 'Oh what the heck.' But with me, something died down here. It was like a kid. It really hurt.

"But the fans were swell to me. They were all sympathetic."

Traynor said his absence from the training camp this season "might be a good thing for me."

"Managing a club is a lot of grief," he said, "but it's pretty good grief at that. I like to manage. I'm not going to put myself on the spot by saying I'm looking for a manager's job, though. I'm just going to hang around and see what the future brings."

Lavagetto Talks Terms with MacPhail

Clearwater, Fla., Feb. 26 (AP)—Larry MacPhail after a conference with Cookie Lavagetto today said a new agreement with the Dodger third baseman was in sight.

Lavagetto watched Manager Leo Durocher send the boys through their paces. Boze Berger, utility infielder purchased from the Boston Red Sox, joined the squad. Joe Vosmik went through his first workout and Durocher announced he would be the Dodgers' regular left fielder.

Baseball Banter

By JUDSON BAILEY

New York, Feb. 26 (AP)—Pepper game for baseball fans training at home:

Burgess Whitehead, the Giants' scholarly infielder who spent the winter studying a. Duke, is staying at a tourist camp in Winter Haven, Fla., where the club is training. . . . Could this be an omen: Billy Rogell, the shortstop the Chicago Cubs acquired from Detroit, hit into a triple play on his first turn at bat in professional baseball. . . . Pepper Martin, the veteran star of the St. Louis Cardinals, will celebrate his ninth birthday this month. . . . You guessed it, February 29. . . . (He'll be 36.)

Did you know dept.—Clark Griffith, Washington's Old Fox who is always jabbing the Yankees and thought up that rule to keep the world champions from trading within the American League, was the first manager the Yanks had and piloted the club from 1903 through part of the 1908 season.

In applauding Frankie Frisch's plan to hold two workouts a day for the Pirates at camp, some reflection has been cast on easy-going Pie Traynor's one-a-day program in years past. . . . So it ought to be pointed out that a fellow named Joe McCarthy has done all right with one practice session a day for his Yankees. . . . Outfielder Tony Criscola, who'll get a tryout with the St. Louis Browns, twice drove in seven runs in a game for San Antonio in the Texas League last season.

The same day the Yankee delegation left New York for training camp another expedition left for Florida on another train. . . . It was Babe Ruth, his wife and daughter. . . . And you know which gang got the bigger sendoff from the crowd at Penn Station. . . . Bill Dickey of the Yankees has finally settled the controversy over his middle name by admitting it's Malcolm. . . . Who said consistency was a jewel? . . . Alex Kampouris hit exactly .249 in the National League for three consecutive seasons and the Giants shipped him to the International League.

One feller Bob Feller will be glad to see in the American League Dick Bartell, now of the Detroit Tigers. . . . When Dick was shortstopping for the Giants Feller fanned him eleven straight times in the 1937 series of exhibitnon games.

Phillies Purchase New First Baseman

Philadelphia, Feb. 26. (AP)—The Phillies hope they have solved their first base problem.

With Gus Suhr a holdout, Rookie Jack Bolling still lacking polish and unable to swing a deal for Zeke Bonura, the local National Leaguers bought Big Ed Levy from Newark of the International League.

"We think we've landed a swell prospect," President Gerry Nugent of the Phils said. "They tell me he can hit, field, run the bases and think for himself."

Nugent sent an undisclosed amount of cash and Infielder Jim Schilling to Newark for Levy, but there's a catch in it. If Levy, fails to make good by May 15, Nugent said, the Phils may return him to Newark and receive back their money. Shilling, however, will remain Newark's property.

Last year Levy hit 22 doubles, three triples and 11 home runs for Newark for an average of .261 in 95 games. He is 23 years old and bats and throws right-handed.

Colorado Coach Denies Charges

Boulder, Colo., Feb. 26 (AP)—President Robert L. Stearns of Colorado University disclosed today that Coach Bernard R. (Bunny) Oakes denied "some of the charges" brought against him by thirty-five players from the squad he piloted to the Big Seven Conference football title last fall.

Oakes, he added, "explained" some of the other accusations made in a thirteen-page petition asking dismissal of the coach.

Stearns indicated he would appoint a five-member faculty committee Wednesday to investigate the charges against Oakes, as well as accusations made by the bald-pated mentor against certain members of the athletic department and a general study of the department.

The players' accusations against Oakes ranged from overlong practice sessions to threats against players' jobs.

Baseball Briefs

Anaheim, Cal., Feb. 26 (AP)—The Philadelphia Athletics' camp is still gossiping about a 373-foot home run drive Bob Johnson delivered on his first trip to the plate over the week-end. The Messrs. Mack also are excited about their "kid" infield, starring Benny McCoy at second base.

Orlando, Fla., Feb. 26 (AP)—With four catchers seeking to squeeze into three berths on the Washington Senators' squad, Manager Bucky Harris turned over to Coach Bennie Bengough today the task of developing Jake Early and Al Evans, slated for the "squeeze." Rick Ferrell and Tony Giuliani are the heavy duty receivers again.

Bradenton, Fla., Feb. 26 (AP)—The Boston Bees' camp isn't scheduled to open until Thursday, but no less than six regulars have checked in early to limber up while Manager Casey Stengel schools an assortment of rookies. The official Bees' delegation leaves Boston tomorrow.

WHO'S THAT GENT WITH THE BAT! HE'S THE McCOY!

Spring training already has opened for the Philadelphia Athletics at Anaheim, Cal., and the fellow who's going to be watched the closest is the gent with the bat at right. He's Benny McCoy, the $45,000 free agent who played substitute second base for the Detroit Tigers last year. Other A's in the picture are rookies Ed Collins, Fred Chapman and Bud Hancken.

GRANTLAND RICE

A NARROWING CIRCLE

Chicago, Feb. 26 (N.A.N.A.)—The circle narrows about Joe Louis and the contenders come into clearer view. Young fighters who wouldn't have been even remotely considered as opponents for him are ranging themselves against him. Johnny Paychek already has been matched with him. Lee Savold is being readied for a shot at him. Only a week or so ago Louis faltered through fifteen rounds with the rough and clownish Arturo Godoy.

This doesn't mean that Louis is ready to be taken and that the time is at hand for some strong young fellow to rush in, belt him out from under his crown and rush off to gather a million dollars or so.

The Scene Changes

But the scene in which he moves has been changed. None of those pressing closer about him now is capable of beating him — but they know that he can be beaten. They know that in his last two fights he was hit often enough to have been knocked out but actually didn't come even close to a knockout because neither Bob Pastor nor Godoy can punch.

Naturally, this is stimulating to the young heavyweights around the country. Two years or so ago there was no real inducement to any young heavyweight, beginning to throw his punches in some remote corner, to hit the trail for a title match because there was a bogey man at the end of the trail. Now every young heavyweight is rushing to join the circle that has been formed about the champion.

The boys are coming out of the bushes — out of the shops and off the docks and down off the trucks and out of the jungles. The old lure is there again — the chance not only to grab some money to stay the limit, perhaps — but to beat Louis and win the title.

Rugged and Willing

This should bring about some exciting action. Louis, at twenty-six, rugged and full of health and not yet bored by his title or given to the soft way of living that most champions take up after they have been champions for a little while, will fight anybody that his managers and Mike Jacobs select, being the most obliging of all champions in that respect.

He gives no hint of retiring or even wanting to retire — and why should he, so long as he still has youth on his side and there is all that money to be made? A full summer has been mapped out for him and he will go swinging on his way — but, all about him, his challengers are closing in. He still can hold these young fellows off — he should be able to, since he still is a young fellow himself. But it means that he has entered on a new phase of his career.

He is just the heavyweight champion now — and not a bogey man. The lightning still crackles in his fists and he still ranks as one of the greatest fighters the ring ever has known. But no longer frightens his opponents out of their wits. There are no more Paulinos dying in the training camp or Levinskys dying in the dressing room.

Challengers have been made aware of the fact that Louis, too, has weaknesses. They know, as long as they are in the ring with him, that they are in imminent danger of being knocked out with a punch or of being sent reeling crazily across the ring, wide open for a finishing smash. But they also know he can be bewildered or disturbed or completely bamboozled.

A Terrifying Appearance

Once nobody—save Max Schmeling — thought of getting Louis off that single track on which he travels so fearsomely. That was in the time when to be matched with him meant certain destruction.

Men took matches with him for the money alone — and then almost immediately began to regret their greed. There was something mysterious and inscrutable and terrible about his very appearance. He was, it seemed, greater than any of the fighters who had gone before him. He was invincible and the utter lack of emotion that he showed made him terrifying.

Schmeling, in their first fight, demonstrated that Louis had no defense against a cunningly launched right hand and knocked him out. Louis came back from that knockout a better fighter because it fired him with a new determination and taught him a valuable lesson. He was a magnificent fighter the night he knocked out Jim Braddock to win the title and again the night he took his revenge on Schmeling.

He was — and still is — a better fighter than he was when he first entered New York and knocked out Primo Carnera and followed that triumph by hammering Max Baer into submission. In spite of the fact that he fought a bad fight against Godoy, he still would be a top-heavy favorite against any of his challengers — would be favored, indeed, to knock them out, one after the other, if they were all thrown into a ring with him on the same night.

William Willetts Not Eligible To Play in Tourney

Former Fort Hill Player Cannot Compete with Piedmont

Piedmont, W. Va., Feb. 26—Piedmont high school will be without the services of William Willetts former Fort Hill high school player when it competes in the sectional basketball tournament at Keyser this weekend.

Willetts was declared ineligible to participate in games with West Virginia teams by the State Athletic Association and the decision was upheld last week by the State Board of Appeals, which reviewed the case at the request of Vernon Staggers, principal of Piedmont high school.

Willetts was declared ineligible under Article I, Section 20, of the by-laws of the State Athletic Association, which requires that a student transferring from one school to another must establish a year's school residence in the community unless his parents or legal guardian is a resident of the community. Willetts came here the first of the year from Cumberland where he attended Fort Hill High School and played on the school's basketball team. He makes his home here with his grandmother but his father is at present a resident of Pennsylvania.

Ruling A Hardship

In its consideration of the case the board admitted that its ruling may seem somewhat of a hardship to a student who is being provided a home by a relative, but pointed out that so many advantages are taken of a more liberal interpretation of what may be a legal change of residence that the board has always adhered to the direct wording of this rule in order to avoid complications and questions of favoritisms or inconsistency.

In a general letter sent out to interested parties the board of appeals listed the facts in the case as follows:

1. Piedmont believed the player under the circumstances to be eligible.

2. Principal Staggers of Piedmont wrote for a ruling in this case and took the boy off the team when he was declared ineligible.

No Formal Protest

3. No formal protest was made against Piedmont.

4. The principal at Keyser wrote questioning the eligibility of this player at Piedmont about the time Piedmont wrote for a ruling.

5. Any penalty against Piedmont will be considered later. Piedmont will not be excluded from the sectional tournament.

6. Piedmont should have inquired about the eligibility of this player before placing him on the eligibility list.

7. It i sunfortunate that some protest or inquiry was not made sooner by some of Piedmont's opponents.

8. Letters of inquiry of what penalty can or should be imposed in such a case have been received from Parsons and Romney.

9. Telegram sent to Piedmont reaffirming previous decision in the Willetts' case. Willetts is ineligible for interscholastic competition.

The letter also listed two other similar cases this year in which a similar interpretation of the rules had been made.

Bowman Extends Bobby Riggs in Tennis Tourney

Forty-three Year Old New York Clubman Plays Fine Game

By BILL WHITE

New York, Feb. 26 (AP)—Herbert L. Bowman, who has reduced tennis to a science — but who plays golf cross-handed — almost gave the National Indoor Singles Championship Tennis Tournament a new hero today.

For the thin-thatched forty-three-year old New York clubman had Bobby Riggs hanging on desperately before America's No. 1 star could outlast him, 6-4, 8-6, in a match that heightened the interest of the small gallery more than any of the day's other offerings.

Bowman, content to stay in the back court and score on his precision-like placements, had Riggs worried. At one time he held a 5-2 advantage in the second set, and soon was but one point away from set point — only to flub an easy shot and give Riggs a lift that carried him on to victory.

Oklahoma's Don McNeill, the experts' choice to win this tournament, gave a workman-like display in stopping Morris Adelberg of Brooklyn, a player whose determination to get the ball back was greater than his ability. McNeill won, without too much trouble, 6-2, 6-3.

In the only minor upsets of the day S. E. Davenport of the West Side Club stopped the former Metropolitan Champion, eighth-seeded, Leonard Hartman by 6-4, 6-4 and Ladislav Hecht, first foreign seeded dumped C. D. Steele, Jr., of Westchester, N. Y., seventh-seeded, 1-6, 6-3, 6-4.

In the women's division, Mrs. Sarah Palfrey Fabyan of Brookline, Mass., first seeded, won handily from Mrs. Ann Page of West Point, 6-1, 6-3; Katherine Winthrop of Boston, fourth seeded, advanced in a much more difficult match, beating Mrs. M. L. Bostwick of New York, 6-3, 7-5, and Norma Taubele, fifth seeded among the women, and winner of the tourney in 1934, advanced into the fourth round with a 6-4, 6-4 victory over Anne Freeman of New York City.

Reds Erred in Trade--Grissom

Tampa, Fla., Feb. 26 (AP)—Lee Grissom, the southpaw pitcher the Cincinnati Reds traded to the Yankees, taunted his former teammates as he passed through here to his new headquarters.

He declared:

"What a mistake the Reds made in trading me to the Yankees! I'm going to be bearing down against Cincinnati every time I face them in an exhibition fame. My arm feels great."

Catcher Ernie Lombardi arrived for the opening of the Reds camp and planned to talk over his contract squabble with the club officials today.

Griff Wants Wasdell To Play First

Orlando, Fla., Feb. 26 (AP)—President Clark Griffith is urging Manager Bucky Harris to put Jimmy Wasdell, perennial rookie in the Washington Senators camp, in the first base job. Wasdell played outfield for Minneapolis last year.

The Senators still would like to make a deal with the Detroit Tigers for Hank Greenberg or Rudy York in return for shortstop Cecil Travis.

Jimmy Demaret Wins New Orleans Open

Final Round of 68 Gives Him Score of 286

Snead, Guldahl and McSpaden Tie for Second Money

38,000 Spectators Saw Four Day Meet for PGA Record

By MORTIMER KREEGER

New Orleans, Feb. 26 (AP)—Jimmy Demaret of Houston, Tex., sneaked under the wire today to win the $2,000 first prize in the $10,000 New Orleans Open Golf Tournament, for his fourth victory in eight tournaments this year.

In an eighth place tie and four strokes behind the leaders after yesterday's round, he forged to the front with the day's best score, a four-under-par 68, bringing his 72-hole total to 286.

Tied for second, a stroke behind, were Ralph Guldahl of Chicago, Harold (Jug) McSpaden from Winchester, Mass., and Slammin' Sam Snead of Shawnee, Pa. Each pocketed $1,066.66.

Record-Breaking Crowd

Demaret finished early and almost alone as the huge "free" galleries followed threesomes which included McSpaden and Ben Hogan of White Plains, N. Y., who had been tied for the lead at 214 at the quarter mark.

Hogan slipped to a 75 to bring his four-day total to 289 and finished in a sixth place tie with Paul Runyan, also of White Plains. Each got $550. Marvin Stahl of Lansing, Mich., got a 71 to finish in fifth place at 288. He won $700.

Fred Corcoran, tournament manager of the P. G. A., estimated the galleries during the four-day competition totaled 38,000 spectators, an all-time record for a P. G. A. event and possibly a world's record for attendance at a golf tournament.

McSpaden, after going through the eighth three under par, was trapped on the ninth and 15th and drove two balls into the lake on the 17th. With a tie for first hinging on an eight-foot putt on the last green, jug took it too easy and the ball stopped short.

Guldahl with a three-quarter mark of 217, shot a brilliant 70. With a birdie needed on the 18th to tie Demaret, he chipped to within 15 feet of the cup and putted to the lip.

Demaret Gets Hot

Snead sank a 15-foot putt on the last hole for a birdie to put him even with par for the day.

Demaret got hotter and hotter as the tournament went on.

Demaret increased his money winning for 1940 to $5,377, a substantial lead over Hogan, in second place with $2,785. Demaret added 45 points in vardon trophy standings to increase his total to 171. Hogan is next with 84.

Chandler Harper of Portsmouth, Va., whose first day 67 was the tournament's best single round and gave him a temporary lead, finished in a tenth place tie at 291 with Dick Metz of Oak Park, Ill. Each got $125. U. S. Open Champion Byron Nelson, who had been far behind through the first three rounds, shot a 70 to creep into the money in a tie for fifteenth and $146.

Fred Haas, Jr., of New Orleans was low amateur at 221-76—297, followed by Wilford Wehrle of Chicago at 229-74—303.

Lloyd Mangrum of Oak Park, Ill., who had been tied for second at 215, needed 75 strokes today and tied at 290 with Craig Wood of Mamaroneck, N. Y., for $425 apiece.

Miami, Fla., Feb. 26 (AP)—The lightweight title fight between Billy Conn and Gus Lesnevich may be held in Detroit late in April, reports indicated today.

The fight, scheduled here Wednesday, was canceled because of a crop of boils under Conn's right arm.

The battle, when it does occur, will be Conn's farewell to light-heavyweight ranks. Signs point to his graduation to the heavyweight class and a clash with Joe Louis this fall. Conn returned to his home in Pittsburgh Saturday.

Glenville Defeats Morris-Harvey

Charleston, W. Va., Feb. 26 (AP)—Rhoades and McMillen set the pace tonight as Glenville's basketball machine swept to its twentieth triumph by defeating Morris Harvey 57-47.

Adams and Starrett kept Morris Harvey's Eagles in the game with 17 and 10 points, respectively.

The score was tied at 33-33 and again at 38-38, before Glenville turned on the last-quarter pressure

Thirty-nine Tigers At Lakeland Camp

Lakeland, Fla., Feb. 26. (AP)—Only seven members of the Detroit Tiger squad of thirty-nine players were missing from training headquarters today despite the fact that the infielders and outfielders were not required to report until Sunday.

Among the missing was Louis (Buck) Newsom, noisy pitching veteran.

"Looks like we've got another Boots Poffenberger," Manager Del Baker commented. Poffenberger was a late arrival here last season and was sold to Brooklyn before the American League campaign opened.

Five Giants Sign

Winter Haven, Fla., Feb. 26 (AP)—Five New York Giants' batterymen put their names on contracts today, leaving only Paul Dean, who says he is retiring, and Ray Joiner, a late arrival, still unsigned. Those who signed up were Harry Gumbert, the club's leading flinger; Walter Brown, Hy Vandenberg and Bob Carpenter, all pitchers, and Ray Hayworth, veteran relief catcher.

Manager Bill Terry pitched for both teams in a six inning game in which Carl Hubbell's team won a 7-3 decision from Gumbert's nine.

Both of the hurlers are unsigned but Chandler has notified Manager Joe McCarthy he will be here tomorrow or Wednesday. Frank Crosetti, not due to report for another week, was a surprise arrival and worked out.

Bill Dickey and Buddy Rosar were the catchers missing.

With outfielders George Selkirk, Jake Powell and Charley Keller and infielder Billy Knickerbocker augmenting the battery staff, the practice session was confined to hitting and shagging flies.

Duck Hunters Please Note

Memphis (AP)—Twenty-five ducks with a single shot! That's the way hunters do things in Belgium, take it from Sam Nickey, Jr., member of Tennessee's Conservation Commission. When Nickey went there to do some hunting, they handed him an oldtime blunderbuss loaded with everything from glass to bolts and carpet tacks.

And despite the fact that one charge from a blunderbuss may bring down as many as 25 ducks, there's still an abundance of waterfowl in Belgium, Nickey says. He uses the story to illustrate how, through reforestation, game restoration and cooperative methods, the little country has been able to perpetuate its game and waterfowl supply.

The SPORT TRAIL

By WHITNEY MARTIN

New York, Feb. 26 (AP) — There is a common belief that very good baseball players don't make very good managers, with the fans who lean toward the theory that the best pilots enjoyed ordinary playing careers pointing to Joe McCarthy as exhibit "A."

The records don't prove the case. As a matter of fact, save for isolated instances, playing ability has no bearing on managerial success.

It is true that the collective managerial records of the first five men named to the hall of fame—Babe Ruth, Hans Wagner, Ty Cobb, Walter Johnson and Christy Mathewson—are a little on the debit side. Ruth and Wagner never got the chance, Cobb was one of the exceptions where his own playing ability was a handicap in that he expected the same perfection from his team, Johnson never was a howling success, and only Mathewson, who did all right with Cincinatti for two and a half years, showed promise.

And as added fodder for the fans who believe that ordinary players are the best bets, the names of Doc Prothro of the Phils, Del Baker of the Tigers, Bill McKechnie of the Reds and Ray Blades of the Cardinals among the present pilots might be cited.

However, there is plenty of debate fodder on the other side of the fence. In fact, three very active and very good athletes are playing managers today, to wit: Gabby Hartnett, Leo Durocher and Joe Cronin.

And among other present-day pilots are Bill Terry of the Giants, Frankie Frisch of the Pirates and Casey Stengel of the Bees, all of whom were very much above the ordinary run of players.

Bucky Harris of the Senators, Jimmy Dykes of the White Sox, Oscar Vitt of the Indians, Fred Haney of the Browns and Connie Mack also rated as very good ball players in their day, although possibly not in the super-star class.

Backtracking a little into the past, there were Rogers Hornsby, Mickey Cochrane and Tris Speaker, all on the super-star order and all successful as managers, although some fans might argue the case of Hornsby. Nevertheless, the Rajah piloted pennant winners, which would seem to be the yardstick of success.

One thing the records seem to prove, and that is that, with few exceptions, the super-stars were given their chances as managers. Wagner and Ruth, of course, are exceptions, but in the case of Ruth his stormy playing career probably was his biggest handicap.

The Babe's case history of squabbles, insubordination and unique training methods does not put him in a position to be in authority over a bunch of spirited young ball players, who probably would greet his edicts with the pertinent expression: "look who's talking."

All in all, it simmers down to a question of what a man has above the shoulders, and not how good he can catch and throw and bat. And it does seem that the better catchers and throwers and batters have a little more above the shoulders than their ordinary brethren, always with exceptions, of course, like McCarthy, and Moe Berg, who can't hit a lick but can give you the word the Greeks had for it.

Teams To Beat

Lombardi and Myers To Play With Cincinnati

Big Catcher Signs and Shortstop Is On Way To Camp

Tampa, Fla., Feb. 26 (AP)—Tampa can play ball now, for the Cincinnati Reds have Ernie Lombardi's signature and Billy Myers is on the way down with a pen load of ink.

These boys round out the list of old familiar faces as the spring boiling gets under way and there is a deal of reason to believe that they're headed for their best year.

Billy came to terms Saturday night after a bit of telephoning between Tampa and his West Fairview, Pa., home, and Ernie talked to Manager McKechnie thrice today and then came out all smiles. It is to be supposed that both got most of what they wanted in the way of 1940 stipends.

This will be Ernie's ninth year with the Reds and Billy's sixth, which practically makes them old men of the mountains around Cincinnati. Only Paul Derringer, who has been with the Reds seven years, and Lombardi himself have seen more service with the Reds than Billy. Lew Riggs and Ival Goodman also are five-year men.

The first day of spring training found the Reds listening to a speech by the mayor of Tampa and wishing a chill northeast wind would quit. Manager Bill McKechnie finally chased everybody outdoors for some tossing and scrub batting and a run around the field.

The Barrels, who last week climaxed a great drive in the German Brewery League by ousting the Cases from first place and taking over the lead in the last half date, retained the pacing berth this week at the Club by winning two games from the Crowns.

However, a change took place in the upper division as the Brewers, fourth last week, copped three from the Labels to grab the runner-up spot. The Cases, who lost two to the Bungs, sank to third while the Cellars climbed from a tie for fifth to a tie for fourth by besting the Bottles 2-1

Snead, Guldahl and McSpaden Tie for Second Money

38,000 Spectators Saw Four Day Meet for PGA Record

By MORTIMER KREEGER

New Orleans, Feb. 26 (AP)—Jimmy Demaret of Houston, Tex., sneaked under the wire today to win the $2,000 first prize in the $10,000 New Orleans Open Golf Tournament, for his fourth victory in eight tournaments this year.

In an eighth place tie and four strokes behind the leaders after yesterday's round, he forged to the front with the day's best score, a four-under-par 68, bringing his 72-hole total to 286.

Tied for second, a stroke behind, were Ralph Guldahl of Chicago, Harold (Jug) McSpaden from Winchester, Mass., and Slammin' Sam Snead of Shawnee, Pa. Each pocketed $1,066.66.

Record-Breaking Crowd

Demaret finished early and almost alone as the huge "free" galleries followed threesomes which included McSpaden and Ben Hogan of White Plains, N. Y., who had been tied for the lead at 214 at the quarter mark.

Hogan slipped to a 75 to bring his four-day total to 289 and finished in a sixth place tie with Paul Runyan, also of White Plains. Each got $550. Marvin Stahl of Lansing, Mich., got a 71 to finish in fifth place at 288. He won $700.

Fred Corcoran, tournament manager of the P. G. A., estimated the galleries during the four-day competition totaled 38,000 spectators, an all-time record for a P. G. A. event and possibly a world's record for attendance at a golf tournament.

McSpaden, after going through the eighth three under par, was trapped on the ninth and 15th and drove two balls into the lake on the 17th. With a tie for first hinging on an eight-foot putt on the last green, jug took it too easy and the ball stopped short.

Guldahl with a three-quarter mark of 217, shot a brilliant 70. With a birdie needed on the 18th to tie Demaret, he chipped to within 15 feet of the cup and putted to the lip.

Demaret Gets Hot

Snead sank a 15-foot putt on the last hole for a birdie to put him even with par for the day.

Demaret got hotter and hotter as the tournament went on.

Fresh from winning the Western Open in his home town, he got off to a shaky start here Thursday with a 74, two over par. He followed consecutively with a 73, a 71 and today's 68.

Demaret increased his money winning for 1940 to $5,377, a substantial lead over Hogan, in second place with $2,785. Demaret added 45 points in vardon trophy standings to increase his total to 171. Hogan is next with 84.

Chandler Harper of Portsmouth, Va., whose first day 67 was the tournament's best single round and gave him a temporary lead, finished in a tenth place tie at 291 with Dick Metz of Oak Park, Ill. Each got $125. U. S. Open Champion Byron Nelson, who had been far behind through the first three rounds, shot a 70 to creep into the money in a tie for fifteenth and $146.

Fred Haas, Jr., of New Orleans was low amateur at 221-76—297, followed by Wilford Wehrle of Chicago at 229-74—303.

Lloyd Mangrum of Oak Park, Ill., who had been tied for second at 215, needed 75 strokes today and tied at 290 with Craig Wood of Mamaroneck, N. Y., for $425 apiece.

Detroit May Get Conn-Lesnevich Bout in April

Miami, Fla., Feb. 26 (AP)—The lightweight title fight between Billy Conn and Gus Lesnevich may be held in Detroit late in April, reports indicated today.

The fight, scheduled here Wednesday, was canceled because of a crop of boils under Conn's right arm.

The battle, when it does occur, will be Conn's farewell to light-heavyweight ranks. Signs point to his graduation to the heavyweight class and a clash with Joe Louis this fall. Conn returned to his home in Pittsburgh Saturday.

Glenville Defeats Morris-Harvey

Charleston, W. Va., Feb. 26 (AP)—Rhoades and McMillen set the pace tonight as Glenville's basketball machine swept to its twentieth triumph by defeating Morris Harvey 57-47.

Rhoades and McMillen each accounted for fifteen points.

Adams and Starrett kept Morris Harvey's Eagles in the game with 17 and 10 points, respectively.

The score was tied at 33-33 and again at 38-38, before Glenville turned on the last-quarter pressure

Wearing a ten-gallon hat and bronzed by the Arizona sun, Delancey visited the Cardinal offices and Sportsman's Park enroute to spring training with the club at St. Petersburg, Fla. The first workout is scheduled for Saturday.

The St. Louis Browns open training in San Antonio, Tex., Thursday.

Hagerstown, Md., Feb. 26—The Crane Clothiers of Cumberland barely won from the local Victor Hosiery cagers here Sunday in and overtime game by a 42-41 score. Becker and Smith of the invaders made twelve points each. Smith made the winning shot with one minute to go in the overtime session.

Leiter of the Hub City lads sank seven fielders for fourteen markers. The locals played a very clean game having only four foul called against them.

Thirty-nine Tigers At Lakeland Camp

Lakeland, Fla., Feb. 26. (AP)—Only seven members of the Detroit Tiger squad of thirty-nine players were missing from training headquarters today despite the fact that the infielders and outfielders were not required to report until Sunday.

Among the missing was Louis (Buck) Newsom, noisy pitching veteran.

"Looks like we've got another Boots Poffenberger," Manager Del Baker commented. Poffenberger was a late arrival here last season and was sold to Brooklyn before the American League campaign opened.

Five Giants Sign

Winter Haven, Fla., Feb. 26 (AP)—Five New York Giants' batterymen put their names on contracts today, leaving only Paul Dean, who says he is retiring, and Ray Joiner, a late arrival, still unsigned. Those who signed up were Harry Gumbert, the club's leading flinger; Walter Brown, Hy Vandenberg and Bob Carpenter, all pitchers, and Ray Hayworth, veteran relief catcher.

Manager Bill Terry pitched for both teams in a six inning game in which Carl Hubbell's team won a 7-3 decision from Gumbert's nine.

SPORTS SPUTTERINGS

By WALTER L. JOHNS
Central Press Sports Editor

New York, Feb. 26—According to Earl Sande, the race jockey-owner, a "horse needs speed and stamina" to win races, not "just size" . . . Sande says that the horse also must "have an eagerness to run" . . . Most promising Negro fighter now pegging away is Jimmy Reeves, former national amateur middle champ who works in Cleveland.

World's ski jumping record is over 325 feet . . . Ray Phelps, Dodger catcher, weighs 10 pounds more than last year. . . Tickets for the Ceferino Garcia-Henry Armstrong title bout in Los Angeles run from $2 to $11 . . . Chairman of the California boxing commission Lawyer Jerry Giesler, is currently engaged in defending a client in a murder case.

The English derby at Epsom Downs, at first canceled because of the was, was begun in 1780 . . . Americans have won the event several times . . . Walter Hagen, the golf great whose name isn't found in tourney lists so frequently any more, still is said to be the busiest autograph-signer of all the link stars.

Southern rumors have it that Ace Parker, former Duke star, is being sought as Wake Forest grid coach . . . Buddy Baer fights Valentin Campolo March 15 in New York . . . Coach Eddie Anderson of Iowa and his All-American back, Nile Kinnick, still are banqueting and making talks. . . . The two must have pretty sore tonsils (and stomachs) by now.

Want to become dough heavy? Just stay the distance with Champion Joe Louis . . . Ask Arturo Godoy, the Chilean . . . He's going to make more dough from personal appearances, stage roles and what have you than he can make in the ring . . . New York tracks will get new starting gates soon . . . Like the one at Hialeah in Miami.

Cancelation of the Louisiana Derby this year marks the first time it hasn't been run since 1923 . . . Panzer college is setting eastern basketball competition a fast pace . . . The team is undefeated in 34 straight encounters . . . Ralph Kaplowitz, New York U. star, is a brother of Danny Kaplowitz, a former Long Island U. star.

All but Two Yank Pitchers in Camp

St. Petersburg, Fla., Feb. 26. (AP)—All the pitchers except Charley Ruffing and Spud Chandler were on hand today when the World Champion New York Yankees swung into spring training with a two-hour workout.

Both of the hurlers are unsigned but Chandler has notified Manager Joe McCarthy he will be here tomorrow or Wednesday. Frank Crosetti, not due to report for another week, was a surprise arrival and worked out.

Bill Dickey and Buddy Rosar were the catchers missing.

With outfielders George Selkirk, Jake Powell and Charley Keller and infielder Billy Knickerbocker augmenting the battery staff, the practice session was confined to hitting and shagging flies.

Duck Hunters Please Note

Memphis (AP)—Twenty-five ducks with a single shot! That's the way hunters do things in Belgium, take it from Sam Nickey, Jr., member of Tennessee's Conservation Commission. When Nickey went there to do some hunting, they handed him an oldtime blunderbuss loaded with everything from glass to bolts and carpet tacks.

And despite the fact that one charge from a blunderbuss may bring down as many as 25 ducks, there's still an abundance of waterfowl in Belgium, Nickey says. He uses the story to illustrate how, through reforestation, game restoration and cooperative methods, the little country has been able to perpetuate its game and waterfowl supply.

The SPORT TRAIL

By WHITNEY MARTIN

New York, Feb. 26 (AP) — There is a common belief that very good baseball players don't make very good managers, with the fans who lean toward the theory that the best pilots enjoyed ordinary playing careers pointing to Joe McCarthy as exhibit "A."

The records don't prove the case. As a matter of fact, save for isolated instances, playing ability has no bearing on managerial success.

It is true that the collective managerial records of the first five men named to the hall of fame—Babe Ruth, Hans Wagner, Ty Cobb, Walter Johnson and Christy Mathewson—are a little on the debit side. Ruth and Wagner never got the chance, Cobb was one of the exceptions where his own playing ability was a handicap in that he expected the same perfection from his team, Johnson never was a howling success, and only Mathewson, who did all right with Cincinatti for two and a half years, showed promise.

And as added fodder for the fans who believe that ordinary players are the best bets, the names of Doc Prothro of the Phils, Del Baker of the Tigers, Bill McKechnie of the Reds and Ray Blades of the Cardinals among the present pilots might be cited.

However, there is plenty of debate fodder on the other side of the fence. In fact, three very active and very good athletes are playing managers today, to wit: Gabby Hartnett, Leo Durocher and Joe Cronin.

And among other present-day pilots are Bill Terry of the Giants, Frankie Frisch of the Pirates and Casey Stengel of the Bees, all of whom were very much above the ordinary run of players.

Bucky Harris of the Senators, Jimmy Dykes of the White Sox, Oscar Vitt of the Indians, Fred Haney of the Browns and Connie Mack also rated as very good ball players in their day, although possibly not in the super-star class.

Backtracking a little into the past, there were Rogers Hornsby, Mickey Cochrane and Tris Speaker, all on the super-star order and all successful as managers, although some fans might argue the case of Hornsby. Nevertheless, the Rajah piloted pennant winners, which would seem to be the yardstick of success.

One thing the records seem to prove, and that is that, with few exceptions, the super-stars were given their chances as managers, Wagner and Ruth, of course, are exceptions, but in the case of Ruth his stormy playing career probably was his biggest handicap.

The Babe's case history of squabbles, insubordination and unique training methods does not put him in a position to be in authority over a bunch of spirited young ball players, who probably would greet his edicts with the pertinent expression: "look who's talking."

All in all, it simmers down to a question of what a man has above the shoulders, and not how good he can catch and throw and bat. And it does seem that the better catchers and throwers and batters have a little more above the shoulders than their ordinary brethren, always with exceptions, of course, like McCarthy, and Moe Berg, who can't hit a lick but can give you the word the Greeks had for it.

Teams To Beat

Knoxville, Tenn., Feb. 26 (AP)—The luck of the draw cast Alabamba's Crimson Tide and Kentucky's Wildcats today as the teams to beat in the seventh annual Southeastern Conference basketball tournament.

The Wardens were led to victory by Emmett Fahey who spilled 442 pins for the high set in the match. H. Shuck led the losers with 371.

Although two of the Grand Knights toppled more than 400 per set the Chancellors won two by getting most of their pins in the two games they won.

The Guards and Deputies were short handed due to the dinner which was being held at the same time in honor of the visit of the Supreme Chaplain of the K. of C., and which the players attended.

Frank Murphy spilled 452 to W. Burns' 404 of the opposition.

Big Catcher Signs and Shortstop Is On Way To Camp

Tampa, Fla., Feb. 26 (AP)—The can play ball now, for the Cincinnati Reds have Ernie Lombardi signature and Billy Myers is on the way down with a pen load of ink.

These boys round out the nucleus of old familiar faces as the spring boiling gets under way and there is a deal of reason to believe that they're headed for their best year.

Billy came to terms Saturday night after a bit of telephoning between Tampa and his West Palm view, Pa., home, and Ernie talked to Manager McKechnie thrice today and then came out all smiles. It is to be supposed that both got most of what they wanted in the way of 1940 stipends.

This will be Ernie's ninth year with the Reds and Billy's sixth, which practically makes them old men of the mountains around Cincinnati. Only Paul Derringer, who has been with the Reds seven years, and Lombardi himself have seen more service with the Reds than Billy. Lew Riggs and Ival Goodman also are five-year men.

The first day of spring training found the Reds listening to a speech by the mayor of Tampa and wishing a chill northeast wind would quit. Manager Bill McKechnie finally chased everybody outdoors for some tossing and scrub batting and a run around the field.

However, a change took place in the upper division as the Brewers, fourth last week, copped three from the Labels to grab the runner-up spot. The Cases, who lost two to the Bungs, sank to third while the Cellars climbed from a tie for fifth to a tie for fourth by besting the Bottles 2-1.

"Wake Up and Cheer" Coming to Strand

Laughs every day keep the doctor away.

If you haven't had any real laughs lately join the gang of "Wake Up and Cheer," the Broadway road "Hellzapoppin" stage show coming tomorrow to the Strand theater for two days. There are thirty-seven artists in person in this "scream convention of 1940."

This stage show is constructed from a new formula made popular by the smashing Broadway musical success, Olsen and Johnson's "Hellzapoppin," nothing classical to be sure, but a show produced strictly for laughs and clean and wholesome entertainment.

The Glamour girls, one of the outstanding features of the show, boast some of the winners of many state contests in connection with the Atlantic City Miss America contest of last summer.

The screen show is J. Edgar Hoover's melodrama, "The Parole Fixer," starring Anthony Quinn, Virginia Dale, Lyle Talbot and Robert Paige.

Jane Withers and Gene Autry appear for the last times today in the Western hit, "Shooting High." Gene has some really grand numbers in "Shooting High," and he sings them as only he can. In this picture Gene has two solo numbers. Jane Withers sings "On the Rancho With My Pancho," wth rare zest. Together Jane and Gene sing "Shanty of Dreams" and "Wanderers."

Starting Friday, one of the year's greatest pictures comes to the Strand entitled "The Grapes of Wrath," adapted from John Steinbeck's famous book of the same name.

AT THE STRAND

Idaho State Militia In "Northwest Passage"

Two hundred and twenty-four members of the Idaho State militia were obtained by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer to appear in location sequences of "Northwest Passage," now playing at the Maryland theater.

The military group enacted the British garrison of Crown Point, gateway to North America in the 1750's, under the command of Gen. Amherst (Lumsden Hare). Two hundred other extras from McCall, Idaho, formed the principals headed by Spencer Tracy, Robert Young and Walter Brennan, as members of Rogers' Rangers. In addition, a group of Indians brought from the Nez Perce reservation at Lewiston swelled the entire personnel at Crown Point to nearly 600.

Built on a peninsula in Payette Lake, the Crown Point set is the largest exterior built for the picture. It covered six acres of State forest land, the fort itself being 200 feet wide, 300 feet long and 40 feet high.

Technicolor Feature Is In Garden Double Bill

For a Babylonian revel sequence in Darryl F. Zanuck's production of "Hollywood Cavalcade," the Technicolor film starring Alice Faye and Don Ameche, and now showing at the Garden, Director Irving Cummings built a camera platform 110 feet above the set. Prior to this the highest was Cecil B. De Mille's parallel for "The Ten Commandments"—ninety feet.

More than 1,500 costumed extras were used in this Twentieth Century-Fox's spectacle, which boasted a 200-foot banquet table loaded with typical feast dishes. "Hollywood Cavalcade" photographs anew the romance of moviedom from bathing beauties to world premieres.

One of the most famous of all the old-time comedians, Ben Turner, recently was given his best chance to date to stage a big comeback. It was supplied by Warner Brothers in "Kid Nightingale," the comedy now at the Garden which stars John Payne as a singing prize fighter. In the picture, which is a large-budget comedy romance, Turpin appears as the leader of an orchestra which, at the end of each of the hero's fights, plays the accompaniment for Payne's song of victory.

"The Real Glory" Closes Today

Closing today at the Embassy theater will be the double feature attraction with Gary Cooper in Samuel Goldwyn's "The Real Glory" with David Niven, Andrea Leeds and Reginald Owen in the supporting roles. The second hit is the thrilling underseas drama, "U-Boat 29," starring Conrad Veidt and Valerie Hobson.

Opening tomorrow at the Embassy will be Beverly Roberts and Robert Wilsox in "Buried Alive." The second feature will be Tom Tyler in the western, "Lost Ranch." Also on the same program is another chapter of the serial, "Flash Gordon's Trip to Mars."

30 Motor Vehicles And Garage Burned

Pittsburgh, Feb .26. (AP) — A two-alarm fire swept a downtown brick and steel garage here and destroyed thirty automotive vehicles, including seven trucks of the Pittsburgh Association for Improvement of the Poor.

Firemen who estimated damage at $40,000, battled the flames for nearly four hours. Cause of the blaze was not immediately determined.

Thirty persons were driven from their homes yesterday by a spectacular fire which swept seven stores and offices in nearby Turtle Creek. Hampered by smoke, firemen were unable to find the source of the blaze for several hours.

SCENE FROM "NORTHWEST PASSAGE"

Fireman Confesses He Killed Man Who Married His Common Law Wife

Tacoma, Wash., Feb. 26. (AP) — John Ord, 42, tall city fireman, was held without charge here after officers said he confessed ending the few hours' marriage of Hale Nosler, 56, and Nyra Nosler, 39, by slaying the bridegroom and critically wounding the bride.

Undersheriff Clyde Knowles said Ord, in a signed statement, detailed his visit to the honeymoon cottage where an argument was climaxed by the shooting of Nosler, who married Ord's common law wife, the wounding of Mrs. Nosler and the beating of a friend, King Pomeroy, 50.

Though Ord's purported confession admitted shooting Nosler, it denied Mrs. Nosler's and Pomeroy's accusations that he poured oil over the body and set it afire. Nosler's body was consumed in a fire which destroyed the house where the slaying occurred.

Physicians reported as apparently successful an operation performed last night on Mrs. Nosler, who was shot through the abdomen and severely beaten. Pomeroy was recovering from scalp lacerations.

Nosler formerly was president of the Washington State Elks Association.

The compact made on board the Mayflower in 1620 was signed by forty-one persons.

Value of Livestock Decreases in State

College Park, Md., Feb. 26. (AP) — Despite increases in the number of cattle, hogs and chickens on Maryland farms Jan. 1 as compared with a year earlier, the total value of all livestock declined approximately three per cent below Jan. 1, 1939, a report of the U. S. department of agriculture and the Maryland extension service said today.

The annual inventory estimated, issued by C. E. Burkhead, agricultural marketing service statistician, gave a total farm value for all livestock, including chickens of $33,820,000. A year ago the valuation was estimated at $34,849,000.

The total number of cattle increased five per cent to an estimated $38,000 head, the largest on record. In January ,1939, the number was 322,000 and the 10-year average, 1929-38, was 300,000 head. This included approximately 202,000 milk cows, or 4,000 more than for a year earlier.

Milk production on Maryland farms in 1939 was 875,000,000 pounds, five per cent above the 1938 production of 832,000,000 pounds.

The greatest increase—ten per cent—was for hogs, with 231,000 head or the largest number since 1923, compared with 210,000 a year ago and 180,000 for the ten-year average.

The capstone of the Washington monument at Washington weighs 3,300 pounds.

Board Promoters To Be Given Reward

Westminster, Feb. 26. (AP)—Two sergeants of the Western Maryland College military department, whose untiring efforts for the last ten years have increased the school band from twelve members to its full quota of 35, will receive their reward in music tomorrow.

They are Sergeants George J. Junior and Thomas J. Lavin, who virtually scoured the state to collect used government instruments for the poorly-equipped band members on the "hill."

Philip Royer, director of the R. O. T. C. College band, composed a new march, "the J. and L. march," which will be dedicated to Junior and Lavin as the feature number on the annual band concert propram in alumni hall tomorrow.

In the fall of 1930 Sergeant Junior arrived to find twelve members at Western Maryland, and when Sergeant Lavin was detailed to the "hill" a year later the combined band instrument collection consisted of one baritone horn and three drums.

So the sergeant decided to do something about the situation.

Lavin went to the University of Maryland in 1932 and obtained 10 used instruments from the government. These helped considerably, but the band needed a lot more instruments, for in 1934 it had grown to twenty-three members.

Then a friend of Junior told about $600 worth of instruments at headquarters of the third corps in Baltimore. Junior requisitioned these from the government.

Tomorrow, sandwiched in between Grahmas' "Theme from Finale of First Symphony" and "Solo Pomposa" for the Tuba, the band will give its all in "The J. and L. March," dedicated to Sergeants Junior and Lavin.

Fred Stone, the actor, started in "show business" at the age of 10, when he did a tight-rope act with his brother for three dollars.

"Wake Up and Cheer" Coming to Strand

Laughs every day keep the doctor away.

If you haven't had any real laughs lately join the gang of "Wake Up and Cheer," the Broadway road "Hellzapoppin" stage show coming tomorrow to the Strand theater for two days. There are thirty-seven artists in person in this "scream convention of 1940."

This stage show is constructed from a new formula made popular by the smashing Broadway musical success, Olsen and Johnson's "Hellzapoppin," nothing classical to be sure, but a show produced strictly for laughs and clean and wholesome entertainment.

The Glamour girls, one of the outstanding features of the show, boast some of the winners of many state contests in connection with the Atlantic City Miss America contest of last summer.

The screen show is J. Edgar Hoover's melodrama, "The Parole Fixer," starring Anthony Quinn, Virginia Dale, Lyle Talbot and Robert Paige.

Jane Withers and Gene Autry appear for the last times today in the Western hit, "Shooting High." Gene has some really grand numbers in "Shooting High," and he sings them as only he can. In this picture Gene has two solo numbers, Jane Withers sings "On the Rancho With My Pancho," wth rare zest. Together Jane and Gene sing "Shanty of Dreams" and "Wanderers."

Starting Friday, one of the year's greatest pictures comes to the Strand entitled "The Grapes of Wrath," adapted from John Steinbeck's famous book of the same name.

AT THE STRAND

Idaho State Militia In "Northwest Passage"

Two hundred and twenty-four members of the Idaho State militia were obtained by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer to appear in location sequences of "Northwest Passage," now playing at the Maryland theater.

The military group enacted the British garrison of Crown Point, gateway to North America in the 1750's, under the command of Gen. Amherst (Lumsden Hare). Two hundred other extras from McCall, Idaho, formed the principals headed by Spencer Tracy, Robert Young and Walter Brennan, as members of Rogers' Rangers. In addition, a group of Indians brought from the Nez Perce reservation at Lewiston swelled the entire personnel at Crown Point to nearly 600.

Built on a peninsula in Payette Lake, the Crown Point set is the largest exterior built for the picture. It covered six acres of State forest land, the fort itself being 200 feet wide, 300 feet long and 40 feet high.

Technicolor Feature Is In Garden Double Bill

For a Babylonian revel sequence in Darryl F. Zanuck's production of "Hollywood Cavalcade," the Technicolor film starring Alice Faye and Don Ameche, and now showing at the Garden, Director Irving Cummings built a camera platform 110 feet above the set. Prior to this the highest was Cecil B. De Mille's parallel for "The Ten Commandments"—ninety feet.

More than 1,500 costumed extras were used in this Twentieth Century-Fox's spectacle, which boasted a 200-foot banquet table loaded with typical feast dishes. "Hollywood Cavalcade" photographs anew the romance of moviedom from bathing beauties to world premieres.

One of the most famous of all the old-time comedians, Ben Turner, recently was given his best chance to date to stage a big comeback. It was supplied by Warner Brothers in "Kid Nightingale," the comedy now at the Garden which stars John Payne as a singing prize fighter. In the picture, which is a large-budget comedy romance, Turpin appears as the leader of an orchestra which, at the end of each of the hero's fights, plays the accompaniment for Payne's song of victory.

"The Real Glory" Closes Today

Closing today at the Embassy theater will be the double feature attraction with Gary Cooper in Samuel Goldwyn's "The Real Glory" with David Niven, Andrea Leeds and Reginald Owen in the supporting roles. The second hit is the thrilling underseas drama, "U-Boat 29," starring Conrad Veidt and Valerie Hobson.

Opening tomorrow at the Embassy will be Beverly Roberts and Robert Wilsox in "Buried Alive." The second feature will be Tom Tyler in the western, "Lost Ranch." Also on the same program is another chapter of the serial, "Flash Gordon's Trip to Mars."

30 Motor Vehicles And Garage Burned

Pittsburgh, Feb 26. (AP) — A two-alarm fire swept a downtown brick and steel garage here and destroyed thirty automotive vehicles, including seven trucks of the Pittsburgh Association for Improvement of the Poor.

Firemen who estimated damage at $40,000, battled the flames for nearly four hours. Cause of the blaze was not immediately determined.

Thirty persons were driven from their homes yesterday by a spectacular fire which swept seven stores and offices in nearby Turtle Creek. Hampered by smoke, firemen were unable to find the source of the blaze for several hours.

Fireman Confesses He Killed Man Who Married His Common Law Wife

Tacoma, Wash., Feb. 26. (AP) — John Ord, 42, tall city fireman, was held without charge here after officers said he confessed ending the few hours' marriage of Hale Nosler, 56, and Nyra Nosler, 39, by slaying the bridegroom and critically wounding the bride.

Undersheriff Clyde Knowles said Ord, in a signed statement, detailed his visit to the honeymoon cottage where an argument was climaxed by the shooting of Nosler, who married Ord's common law wife, the wounding of Mrs. Nosler and the beating of a friend, King Pomeroy, 50.

Though Ord's purported confession admitted shooting Nosler, it denied Mrs. Nosler's and Pomeroy's accusations that he poured oil over the body and set it afire. Nosler's body was consumed in a fire which destroyed the house where the slaying occurred.

Physicians reported as apparently successful an operation performed last night on Mrs. Nosler, who was shot through the abdomen and severely beaten. Pomeroy was recovering from scalp lacerations.

Nosler formerly was president of the Washington State Elks Association.

The compact made on board the Mayflower in 1620 was signed by forty-one persons.

Two Brothers, Fleeing from Juvenile Officer, Jump into River and Drown

Double Tragedy Occurs in Kanawha River Near Dunbar

Charleston, W. Va., Feb. 26 (AP) — Motivated by some strange impulse, two schoolboy brothers jumped into the Kanawha river and drowned today to end their brief flight from a juvenile officer.

It was pure coincidence, said county juvenile officer Thomas D. Robertson, that either William Boardman, 16, or his brother, Charles, 13, died because of the leap into the cold water.

They fled to the concrete pier of old Lock No. 6 near suburban Dunbar after Robertson had stopped his car to question them.

William had shed his jacket and leaped from the pier but apparently thought better of it and was swimming back to shore, the juvenile officer said.

Charles, however, also doffed his coat and jumped. He fell across his brother's shoulder and both sank in about six feet of water.

Bodies Are Recovered

Rescuers recovered William's body in about twenty minutes but he could not be revived. Firemen dragged for more than an hour before finding the body of the young brother.

Robertson said the boys, who lived with their parents on a small farm near South Charleston, were walking down the highway near Dunbar in mid-morning as the officer was enroute to Charleston from the county children's home.

They told a story of missing a school bus, Robertson said, and he offered to take them back home or to school.

Instead, they turned to flee and William shouted, "By God, I'm not going anywhere with you," said Robertson.

The boys vaulted a fence and ran about 150 yards to the pier.

"I was never so startled in all my life," said the officer.

"The oldest boy, whom I did not recognize at the time," he added, "ran out on the pier. He took off his coat and a sweater and jumped. He was a good swimmer and he obviously was starting back toward shore a few feet away when the other boy jumped and fell on top of him."

Identified from Records

Robertson identified the brothers from records in his office.

From the parents he learned the boys left home as usual this morning but instead of going to school, obtained a boat and rowed across the river to Dunbar.

At the time of the flight Robertson had thought the lads were making for a boat but there was none about the pier.

Robertson said the parents told him that William had often said that he would undergo anything rather than "let him (Robertson) get his hands on me again."

Both boys had been before juvenile officers previously, Robertson said.

The tool was found beside the body, the rifle held in a machine vise. An acetylene torch, with the gas exhausted, was hanging from the vise.

Fire Company May Purchase Municipal Park

Committee Named To Confer with Other Groups at Moorefield

Moorefield, W. Va., Feb. 26.—The Moorefield Volunteer Fire company appointed Ralph J. Bean, John W. Fisher and W. C. Calhoun to confer with the Moorefield Lions Club, the Moorefield Womans' Club, the Moorefield Baseball Club, the Parent-Teacher Association and the Board of Education to see if a plan could be worked out to save Moorefield Municipal Park for the use of local civic organizations.

In the discussion relative to the fire company buying the park it was pointed out that the fire company was going out of its field of service in attempting to purchase the Municipal Park but that with the help of other organizations they could do it.

H. Gus Muntzing, present owner of the Park, offered to sell it on liberal terms to the fire company and since the park is the only available spot to hold celebrations, baseball and football games, the fire company is vitally interested in making the purchase but hesitates to do so without the support of the townspeople.

Due to the fact that the town council sold the park twice during the past year a resolution was passed to the effect that if the company did buy the park it should never be sold but should remain the property of the citizens.

Auto Tag Sales In West Virginia Are $5,429,290.70

Charleston, W. Va., Feb. 26 (AP)—The Road Commission, well into the job of setting up 1940-41 automobile license plates, announced today that source, plus other fees brought in $5,429,290.70 during the last calendar year.

The sale of 236,621 Class "A" private passenger car licenses during 1939 accounted for $3,565,377.85 of that amount.

The remainder came from various other classifications of vehicles and from title fees, certificates, operators and chauffeurs licenses, and other matters handled by the automobile registration bureau.

In all, said Road Commissioner Burr H. Simpson, about 315,000 vehicular licenses were issued as of December 31, 1939. These expire June 30.

C. J. Powell, registrar of motor vehicles, reported titles and new car sales probably would show about an eight to ten per cent increase over the previous twelve months. This naturally would reflect in a similar increase in the number of licenses issued.

The 1940-41 tags will be yellow with black numerals, the reverse of this year.

In addition to the 236,000 Class "A" licenses which were paid for, the commission records showed that 1,896 Class "A" tags were distributed free for state cars, including those driven by the state police and county boards of education.

Two Brothers, Fleeing from Juvenile Officer, Jump into River and Drown

Double Tragedy Occurs in Kanawha River Near Dunbar

Charleston, W. Va., Feb. 26 (AP)—Motivated by some strange impulse, two schoolboy brothers jumped into the Kanawha river and drowned today to end their brief flight from a juvenile officer.

It was pure coincidence, said county juvenile officer Thomas D. Robertson, that either William Boardman, 16, or his brother, Charles, 13, died because of the leap into the cold water.

They fled to the concrete pier of old Lock No. 6 near suburban Dunbar after Robertson had stopped his car to question them.

William had shed his jacket and leaped from the pier but apparently thought better of it and was swimming back to shore, the juvenile officer said.

Charles, however, also doffed his coat and jumped. He fell across his brother's shoulder and both sank in about six feet of water.

Bodies Are Recovered

Rescuers recovered William's body in about twenty minutes but he could not be revived. Firemen dragged for more than an hour before finding the body of the young brother.

Robertson said the boys, who lived with their parents on a small farm near South Charleston, were walking down the highway near Dunbar in mid-morning as the officer was enroute to Charleston from the county children's home.

They told a story of missing a school bus, Robertson said, and he offered to take them back home or to school.

Instead, they turned to flee and William shouted, "By God, I'm not going anywhere with you," said Robertson.

The boys vaulted a fence and ran about 150 yards to the pier.

"I was never so startled in all my life," said the officer.

"The oldest boy, whom I did not recognize at the time," he added, "ran out on the pier. He took off his coat and a sweater and jumped. He was a good swimmer and he obviously was starting back toward shore a few feet away when the other boy jumped and fell on top of him."

Identified from Records

Robertson identified the brothers from records in his office.

From the parents he learned the boys left home as usual this morning but instead of going to school, obtained a boat and rowed across the river to Dunbar.

At the time of the flight Robertson had thought the lads were making for a boat but there was none about the pier.

Robertson said the parents told him that William had often said that he would undergo anything rather than "let him (Robertson) get his hands on me again."

Both boys had been before juvenile officers previously, Robertson said.

The tool was found beside the body, the rifle held in a machine vise. An acetylene torch, with the gas exhausted, was hanging from the vise.

Romisch, a former Morgantown high school athlete, had operated the Romisch Foundry and Machine Shop since the death of his father several years ago.

Fire Company May Purchase Municipal Park

Committee Named To Confer with Other Groups at Moorefield

Moorefield, W. Va., Feb. 26—The Moorefield Volunteer Fire company appointed Ralph J. Bean, John W. Fisher and W. C. Calhoun to confer with the Moorefield Lions Club, the Moorefield Womans' Club, the Moorefield Baseball Club, the Parent-Teacher Association and the Board of Education to see if a plan could be worked out to save Moorefield Municipal Park for the use of local civic organizations.

In the discussion relative to the fire company buying the park it was pointed out that the fire company was going out of its field of service in attempting to purchase the Municipal Park but that with the help of other organizations they could do it.

H. Gus Muntzing, present owner of the Park, offered to sell it on liberal terms to the fire company and since the park is the only available spot to hold celebrations, baseball and football games, the fire company is vitally interested in making the purchase but hesitates to do so without the support of the town people.

Due to the fact that the town council sold the park twice during the past year a resolution was passed to the effect that if the company did buy the park it should never be sold but should remain the property of the citizens.

Auto Tag Sales In West Virginia Are $5,429,290.70

Charleston, W. Va., Feb. 26 (AP)—The Road Commission, well into the job of setting up 1940-41 automobile license plates, announced today that source, plus other fees brought in $5,429,290.70 during the last calendar year.

The sale of 236,621 Class "A" private passenger car licenses during 1939 accounted for $3,565,377.60 of that amount.

The remainder came from various other classifications of vehicles and from title fees, certificates, operators and chauffeurs licenses, and other matters handled by the automobile registration bureau.

In all, said Road Commissioner Burr H. Simpson, about 315,000 vehicular licenses were issued as of December 31, 1939. These expire June 30.

C. J. Powell, registrar of motor vehicles, reported titles and new car sales probably would show about an eight to ten per cent increase over the previous twelve months. This naturally would reflect in a similar increase in the number of licenses issued.

The 1940-41 tags will be yellow with black numerals, the reverse of this year.

In addition to the 236,000 Class "A" licenses which were paid for, the commission records showed that 1,896 Class "A" tags were distributed free for state cars, including those driven by the state police and the county boards of education.

The Oakland office has appointed a committee to cooperate with Mr. Mann's office in assisting veterans to find employment.

Spring Road Damage

State Road officials are watching the highways in this section with much trepidation these days, lest the frost come out of the ground so quickly and cause upheavals in the road. Damage here so far from this cause is said to be slight, but if the frost this year has entered the ground to a considerable depth, the too quick thaw would have disastrous results. A few days this month the warm sun melted the snow rapidly. In 1936 damage to the roads was estimated at thousands of dollars.

Chief Dismisses 'Rebel' Patrolman

Mayor Says Superiors Will Run Police "From This Time"

Huntington, W. Va., Feb. 26 (AP)—Patrolman Cecil Kessick, stormy petrel of the municipal police department and leader of eight "rebel" officers who took law enforcement into their own hands last fall, was dismissed from the department today for "disrespect and disobedience."

The dismissal order, signed by Police Chief Lon H. Whitman and Mayor George R. Seamonds, followed by two days a charge by Kessick that the city "was becoming wide open again and we (the independent raiders) are so scattered we can't do anything about it."

Mayor Seamonds in reply issued a statement striking at "all this wrangling, dissension and publicity seeking in the police department," and said he did not intend to tolerate "publicity founded on falsity."

He added that "from this time on the chief of police and other superior officers are going to run the department and not the police themselves."

Kessick was specifically charged in the dismissal order with "making public statements indicating the chief of police and the lieutenant of the third shift are averse to enforcing the laws and fail to do their duty as members of the police department."

Other violators of department regulations listed in the order included "disobedience of orders for failing to make arrests when justified, disrespectful language to superior officers, neglect of duty, making a false report (that the city was wide open) which tends to bring members of the department into ill repute, and with making such reports to the press."

"We have to tell our customers that the government is a liar, that it's charge is actually five percent," he said.

"Mystery Maid" Burns To Death in Cabin

Cassville, Mo., Feb. 26. (AP)—The "Mystery Maid of Roaring River" burned to death today.

Searchers found the body of the 88-year-old woman, Miss Jeanne Wallace, in the smouldering ruins of the cabin where she had lived alone for fifty years.

Her willingness to discuss the troubles of others brought many persons to her door.

Throughout the Ozark hill country tales of Miss Wallace spread until many believed she was gifted with a "second sight." They said she had guided them to lost livestock and shown other "powers" beyond normal.

But Miss Wallace once told an interviewer:

"You know I am not a fortune teller. I cannot peek into the future and never pretend to. My principal business is mending broken hearts and giving advice to folks who are so overwhelmed with trouble and sorrow that their own minds cannot see a way out. Always I point them to God and prayer. Those are the cures for just about all our troubles."

Miss Wallace, once a trained nurse in New York, came here for her health. She said she was born at sea, the daughter of a sea captain.

Md. University Will Be Developed by Citizens, Byrd Says

College Park, Md., Feb. 26 (AP)—Maryland's citizens will "develop the University of Maryland to meet their needs," the institution's president said tonight, and, so long as they do, "it seems to me than there is nothing much that anybody could or should do about it."

Dr. H. C. Byrd, addressing a Prince Georges county chamber of commerce meeting here, told the group he could not say "just what the university will become, past what the future holds for it."

"Neither am I at liberty at this time to divulge definite plans that we have in mind for the continuing of the building up of the university," President Byrd continued.

"However, the extent to which the University will grow is in the hands of the people of the state. We see in the newspapers and elsewhere at times statements to the effect that the University of Maryland is growing too rapidly and is growing to be too large.

"Such statements, in effect, indicate that the writers of such statements wish to deny to the people of the state the services which their own institutions offer. Neither personally nor officially do such statements worry me because the people of the state will develop the university to meet their needs."

Employer Must Put Labor Decisions in Writing, Court Rules

New York, Feb. 26 (AP)—By a two to one decision, the United States Circuit Court of Appeals ruled today that the refusal of an employer to put into writing the terms of an agreement resulting from collective bargaining implied a refusal to bargain collectively within the meaning of the Wagner Act.

The court's decision resulted from an appeal by the Art Metals Construction Company, of Jamestown, N. Y., against a Labor Board order directing the company to bargain collectively with members of the International Association of Machinists and to desist from certain alleged unfair labor practices.

The majority opinion was written by Judge Learned Hand, with Judge Charles E. Clark concurring.

In a dissenting opinion, Judge Harris B. Chase held that the Wagner Act did not provide for the mandatory signing of an agreement reached by collective bargaining. Judge Chase declared the court had "no right to read into the statute a mandatory provision which is not there."

The Jamestown concern, in its appeal, argued that if it were required to put an oral report into writing it would lose "that absolute freedom in negotiation which it had in common law and which Congress meant to preserve to it."

Tommies and Nazis Drink Their Beer Together

Fort Lauderdale, Fla., Feb. 25 (AP) — Seamen from a German freighter and an armed British merchant ship forgot the war long enough to drink beer and exchange good-natured quips in the same bar at neutral Port Everglades.

The English ship, the 4,585-ton Harburton, arrived last night with two guns bristling from her stern and docked a few hundred feet from the German Arauca, which was chased into port last December by a British cruiser.

The Arauca since then has been tied up by libel litigation.

Wheat Parity Payment Rates Are Announced

College Park, Feb. 25 (AP)—A parity payment of ten cents a bushel on wheat will be made to producers who plant within their 1940 acreage allotments, according to an announcement received from the Agricultural Adjustment Administration by Dr. T. B. Symons, director of the University of Maryland extension service. This payment will be made on the normal yield of each producer's acreage allotment.

The price adjustment or parity payments, which supplement the regular agricultural conservation payments are provided from a fund appropriated for such payments to producers of five major crops. In addition to wheat, they include cotton, corn, rice and tobacco. Since the estimated 1939 season average price for tobacco was above seventy-five percent of parity, no price adjustment payments on that crop will be made in 1940.

Besides the parity payments, farmers who cooperate in the 1940 AAA farm program, and plant within their acreage allotments, will receive agricultural conservation payments at rates previously announced. The total conservation and parity payments which will be made to cooperators on the normal yield of their acreage allotments for wheat in 1940 amount to nineteen cents a bushel.

Indian Tribes Stop Use of the Swastika

Tucson, Ariz., Feb. 26. (AP)—In a solemn ceremony, representatives of four Arizona Indian tribes, resentful at Nazi "acts of oppression" today foreswore use of the swastika design in native basket weaving and blanket weaving.

The Indians placed a blanket, a basket, and some hand decorated clothing, all bearing swastikas, in a pile, sprinkled them with colored sand and set them afire.

A proclamation, roughly handlettered on parchment, carried the signatures of four chiefs of the Papaco, Navajo, Hopi and Apache tribes.

The text read:

"Because the ornament which has been a symbol of friendship among our forefathers for many centuries has been desecrated recently by another nation of peoples:

"Therefore, it is resolved that henceforth from this date and forever more, our tribes renounce the use of the emblem commonly known as swastika, or fylfot on our blankets, baskets, art objects, sand paintings, and clothing."

$100,000 Paid in State Income Taxes

Annapolis, Feb. 26 (AP)—The suit challenging legality of the new state income tax law has not caused the steady flow of advance payments to diminish, State Comptroller Millard Tawes said today.

At the last tabulation February 21, Marylanders had paid in $419,128 almost a month before the March 15 deadline.

Tawes said the number of advance payments was increasing daily, and had not been affected by the suit filed in the Baltimore courts.

He estimated that well over $100,000 was collected last week despite loss of a business day on Washington's birthday.

Rumania Boosts Rates On Rail Shipments

Bucharest, Feb. 26 (AP)—Rumania tonight announced an increase of twelve to forty per cent on railway freight rates on most exports, including oil consigned to Germany.

The action raised at once the probability of a German protest when Dr. Karl Clodius, German economic negotiator, arrives this week for negotiations on tre acute controversy over Rumanian oil.

The raise had the effect of increasing the charges which foreign buyers must pay for Rumanian products shipped by rail. Germany is almost wholly dependent upon rail transport for her Rumanian oil supplies as long as the Danube river remains frozen.

Only grains were excluded from the list of exports on which freight rates were raised.

Garrett County Office Placed 477 Jobholders

Maryland Employment Service Reveals Record for 1939

Grantsville, Feb. 26 — Approximately 477 persons were given public or private employment through the County office during the past year, according to Mr. Milburn W. Mann, Garrett County Manager of the Maryland State Employment Service. Mr. Mann disclosed these facts in a recent address before a meeting of a group of members of the American Legion. This was an average of about thirty-nine persons per month Mr. Mann said. Of this number 195 women and twenty-one veterans were placed. The Oakland office has appointed a committee to cooperate with Mr. Mann's office in assisting veterans to find employment.

According to Mr. Mann's report, 321 persons filed claims for unemployment compensation during 1939 at one or another of the six branches maintained, and 6,758 were listed as having visited the offices for other reasons.

Woodmen Will Celebrate

The Grantsville Camp No. 41 Woodmen of the World is joining eight thousand similar units in formulating plans for the celebration of the fiftieth anniversary of the founding of the Society. On June 1, the anniversary date, thousands of celebrations will be held simultaneously from coast to coast, with a gala affair in Omaha, Neb., the national headquarters city, setting the pace.

Dr. T. Olin Broadwater, Clerk and Financial Secretary of the Grantsville Camp will make an announcement later as to what part his unit will take in the celebrations other than the membership drive, which has been under way for some time.

Census Taking

To assist the work for farm people as well as the census taker, blanks, containing some two hundred questions, have been prepared and placed in the office of the County Agent, where they may be obtained upon request. Farmers are advised to obtain one of these forms as soon as possible, study the questions, and have the special blank filled out by the time the census taker arrives, thus saving a great deal of time and extra work. It is said the form is not easy to fill out.

Frost Road Damage

State Road officials are watching the highways in this section with much trepidation these days, lest the frost come out of the ground too quickly and cause upheavals in the road. Damage here so far from this cause is said to be slight, but if the frost this year has entered the ground to a considerable depth, too quick thaw would have disastrous results. A few days this month the warm sun melted the frost rapidly. In 1936 damage to the roads was estimated at thousands of dollars.

Chief Dismisses 'Rebel' Patrolman

Mayor Says Superiors Will Run Police "From This Time"

Huntington, W. Va., Feb. 26 (AP)—Patrolman Cecil Kessick, stormy petrel of the municipal police department and leader of eight "rebel" officers who took law enforcement into their own hands last fall, was dismissed from the department today for "disrespect and disobedience."

The dismissal order, signed by Police Chief Lon H. Whitman and Mayor George R. Seamonds, followed by two days a charge by Kessick that the city "was becoming wide open again and we (the independent raiders) are so scattered we can't do anything about it."

Mayor Seamonds in reply issued a statement striking at "all this wrangling, dissension and publicity seeking in the police department," and said he did not intend to tolerate "publicity founded on falsity."

He added that "from this time on the chief of police and other superior officers are going to run the department and not the police themselves."

Kessick was specifically charged in the dismissal order with "making public statements indicating the chief of police and the lieutenant of the third shift are averse to enforcing the laws and fail to do their duty as members of the police department."

Other violators of department regulations listed in the order included "disobedience of orders for failing to make arrests when justified, disrespectful language to superior officers, neglect of duty, making a false report (that the city was wide open) which tends to bring members of the department into ill repute, and with making such reports to the press."

Housing Agency Called "Liar" by Theobald

Pittsburgh, Feb. 25 (AP)—A. D. Theobald of Chicago, secretary-treasurer of the American Savings and Loan Institute, asserted here the Federal Housing Administration was misrepresenting the amount of its interest rate.

He declared at the institute's seventeenth mid-winter conference that the FHA advertised its loans at 4½ percent interest but the borrower actually had to pay an additional one-half percent as an insurance premium.

"We have to tell our customers that the government is a liar, that it's charge is actually five percent," he said.

Publishers Ask for Campaign Advertising

Athens, Ga., Feb. 25 (AP)—The Georgia Press Association moved to call the hand of political office-seekers who spend large sums campaigning by radio and mail and then ask free publicity from newspapers.

A resolution adopted by the board of managers served notice to prospective candidates for office that association members would consider it an "unfriendly act" to use another media to the exclusion of newspaper advertising and then "mail requests for free publicity to the newspapers."

"Mystery Maid" Burns To Death in Cabin

Cassville, Mo., Feb. 26. (AP)—The "Mystery Maid of Roaring River" burned to death today.

Searchers found the body of the 88-year-old woman, Miss Jeanne Wallace, in the smouldering ruins of the cabin where she had lived alone for fifty years.

Her willingness to discuss the troubles of others brought many persons to her door.

Throughout the Ozark hill country tales of Miss Wallace spread until many believed she was gifted with a "second sight." They said she had guided them to lost livestock and shown other "powers" beyond normal.

But Miss Wallace once told an interviewer:

"You know I am not a fortune teller. I cannot peek into the future and never pretend to. My principal business is mending broken hearts and giving advice to folks who are so overwhelmed with trouble and sorrow that their own minds cannot see a way out. Always I point them to God and prayer. Those are the cures for just about all our troubles."

Miss Wallace, once a trained nurse in New York, came here for her health. She said she was born at sea, the daughter of a sea captain.

Md. University Will Be Developed by Citizens, Byrd Says

College Park, Md., Feb. 26 (AP)—Maryland's citizens will "develop the University of Maryland to meet their needs," the institution's president said tonight, and, so long as they do, "it seems to me than there is nothing much that anybody could or should do about it."

Dr. H. C. Byrd, addressing a Prince Georges county chamber of commerce meeting here, told the group he could not say "just what the university will become, just what the future holds for it."

"Neither am I at liberty at this time to divulge definite plans that we have in mind for the continuing of the building up of the university," President Byrd continued.

"However, the extent to which the University will grow is in the hands of the people of the state. We see in the newspapers and elsewhere at times statements to the effect that the University of Maryland is growing too rapidly and is growing to be too large.

"Such statements, in effect, indicate that the writers of such statements wish to deny to the people of the state the services which their own institutions offer. Neither personally nor officially do such statements worry me because the people of the state will develop the university to meet their needs."

Employer Must Put Labor Decisions in Writing, Court Rules

New York, Feb. 26 (AP)—By a two to one decision, the United States Circuit Court of Appeals ruled today that the refusal of an employer to put into writing the terms of an agreement resulting from collective bargaining implied a refusal to bargain collectively within the meaning of the Wagner Act.

The court's decision resulted from an appeal by the Art Metals Construction Company, of Jamestown, N. Y., against a Labor Board order directing the company to bargain collectively with members of the International Association of Machinists and to desist from certain alleged unfair labor practices.

The majority opinion was written by Judge Learned Hand, with Judge Charles E. Clark concurring.

In a dissenting opinion, Judge Harris B. Chase held that the Wagner Act did not provide for the mandatory signing of an agreement reached by collective bargaining. Judge Chase declared the court had "no right to read into the statute a mandatory provision which is not there."

The Jamestown concern, in its appeal, argued that if it were required to put an oral report into writing it would lose "that absolute freedom in negotiation which it had in common law and which Congress meant to preserve to it."

Tommies and Nazis Drink Their Beer Together

Fort Lauderdale, Fla., Feb. 25 (AP) — Seamen from a German freighter and an armed British merchant ship forgot the war long enough to drink beer and exchange good-natured quips in the same bar at neutral Port Everglades.

The English ship, the 4,585-ton Harburton, arrived last night with two guns bristling from her stern and docked a few hundred feet from the German Arauca, which was chased into port last December by a British cruiser.

The Arauca since then has been tied up by libel litigation.

Wheat Parity Payment Rates Are Announced

College Park, Feb. 25 (AP)—A parity payment of ten cents a bushel on wheat will be made to producers who plant within their 1940 acreage allotments, according to an announcement received from the Agricultural Adjustment Administration by Dr. T. B. Symons, director of the University of Maryland extension service. This payment will be made on the normal yield of each producer's acreage allotment.

The price adjustment or parity payments, which supplement the regular agricultural conservation payments are provided from a fund appropriated for such payments to producers of five major crops. In addition to wheat, they include cotton, corn, rice and tobacco. Since the estimated 1939 season average price for tobacco was above seventy-five percent of parity, no price adjustment payments on that crop will be made in 1940.

Besides the parity payments, farmers who cooperate in the 1940 AAA farm program, and plant within their acreage allotments, will receive agricultural conservation payments at rates previously announced. The total conservation and parity payments which will be made to cooperators on the normal yield of their acreage allotments for wheat in 1940 amount to nineteen cents a bushel.

Indian Tribes Stop Use of the Swastika

Tucson, Ariz., Feb. 26. (AP)—In a solemn ceremony, representatives of four Arizona Indian tribes, resentful at Nazi "acts of oppression" today foreswore use of the swastika design in native basket weaving and blanket weaving.

The Indians placed a blanket, a basket, and some hand decorated clothing, all bearing swastikas, in a pile, sprinkled them with colored sand and set them afire.

The text read:

"Because the ornament which has been a symbol of friendship among our forefathers for many centuries has been desecrated recently by another nation of peoples:

Taxpayers Again Demand Report On City Finances

Say Information Promised by Council Is Long Overdue

The Allegany County Taxpayers Research Association last night moved to request a complete financial statement on the City of Cumberland as of Jan. 1.

Meeting at the Central YMCA the association members recalled that the mayor and city council had promised the group such a statement early in the year. Such a statement has not as yet been received.

George Henderson then moved that the group go on record as requesting such a statement from the Mayor and City Council and that the city have the statement drawn up as soon as possible. The motion was seconded by James Alfred Avirett and was unanimously carried.

Frank Smith, chairman, presided at last night's meeting, which was attended by a large representative group. Comments on the increase in taxation and the prospect of further increases were made by Henderson, William H. Jenkins, I. H. Bone, Thomas L. Pope, Jonathan Sleeman, and James Alfred Avirett.

The group also heard a report on the success of similar tax research organizations in New York, Ohio, Indiana, and Nebraska.

Convict Uplinger Denied Freedom

His Prosecutor Sits as Judge

Associate Judge William A. Huster yesterday denied the plea for freedom of 33-year-old Ralph Uplinger, who was convicted of robbery in April, 1936, while Huster was serving as state's attorney.

Judge Huster listened patiently while Uplinger, acting as his own attorney, outlined the reasons why he thought he should be released from the Maryland Penal Farm, where he is serving a 10-year sentence.

Chief point made by Uplinger was that his commitment was improperly drawn in that the name of the sentencing judge, the late David A. Robb, was not affixed to the papers.

His contention was that his application for a parole did not get consideration because of the omission.

Omission Not Important

Judge Huster explained that the judge's name did not render the commitment void, nor would it have any effect in parole proceedings. Omission of the name was in line with court practice at the time, but the name will be supplied to the Parole Commission on request, he said.

Uplinger also attacked the validity of the indictment, which he said charged him with "armed robbery" although no firearms were involved in the burglary of the American store on Greene street, for which he was convicted.

The term, "with force and arms," in an indictment does not necessarily mean firearms, Judge Huster pointed out.

Threats Also at Issue

The convict advanced still another argument, claiming that Judge Robb said in passing sentence that he was imposing the stiff term not only for the robbery, but also for threats made against State's Attorney Huster.

Judge Huster noted, however, that these comments were not in the record and added that he saw no reason to overturn Judge Robb's sentence.

Uplinger's petition for a writ of habeas corpus failed to present any "valid or legal reason" for his release, Judge Huster concluded as he remanded him to the custody of the two penal farm guards who brought his here.

Arriving after the hearing was over, Uplinger's mother sobbed as her son embraced her and told her that his plea for freedom had been denied.

Building Permit Granted On Louisiana Avenue

A permit to construct a $5,000 home on Lot 24, Louisiana avenue, yesterday was granted to Joseph F. Tippen, 33 North Mechanic street, a Celanese foreman.

According to the permit granted by Ralph L. Rizer, city engineer, A. L. Will will construct the building.

NYA Project Planned At County Home

Plans are under way for an NYA project to provide four unemployed youths with jobs as orderlies at the county home, it was learned yesterday.

The board of county commissioners has agreed to sponsor the project.

Births

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Hott, of Arthur, W. Va., announce the birth of a daughter Sunday night at Memorial hospital.

New Voting Precincts Demanded in County

Council Votes $50 To Help Finns

Mayor Harry Irvine and the members of city council yesterday voted to donate $50 to help the fighting Finns in their grim war against Communist Russia.

The mayor and council moved to make the donation following receipt of a request for help for the Finns from the committee operating under former President Herbert Hoover.

The money will be taken from the movie tax fund and paid to the Times-News newspapers, which are receiving contributions for the Finn cause.

County officials, confronted on one hand by proposals to install voting machines and thereby cut down on the number of election workers, are now being faced by other demands for an increased number of precincts and thus more election workers and election expense than ever before.

The board of election supervisors is expected to act this week on the new demands, which call for splitting up several precincts.

One Demand from Ellerslie

One of the proposed changes would set up a new precinct at Ellerslie, whose residents have been voting at Corriganville. Corriganville would still comprise a precinct under the contemplated change.

Ellerslie residents backing the establishment of the new precinct claim it is inconvenient to go to Corriganville to cast their ballots.

Setting up of this new precinct, if approved, will probably be done in time for the primary, it was indicated. The other two or three changes, the location of which could not be immediately learned, will probably not be made until the general election. Reason for these other changes is said to be overcrowding of present precincts.

More Money Needed

Although the election board has authority to make the changes, it must obtain additional funds from the county commissioners, since no provision is made for additional expenses the changes will entail.

Six election officials serve at each precinct—two judges and four clerks, comprising three Republicans and three Democrats.

Meanwhile, no action has been taken, so far as could be learned, on the proposal to install voting machines—at least on a trial basis.

Representatives of a voting machine concern have a machine on display at the courthouse and have furnished the county commissioners with an itemized statement showing savings that they say could be effected by installation of the machines.

Good-Will Dinner Attended by 120

Understanding Called Necessary for Peace

The necessity of putting the movement for peace and democracy on a religious basis was stressed in a discussion last night at the second annual good-will dinner sponsored by the Brotherhood of B'er Chayim Temple.

Principal speaker at the dinner meeting, held at the Fort Cumberland hotel was the Rev. Theodore E. Miller, Baptist minister and secretary of the Baltimore Round Table of the National Conference of Christians and Jews.

Mr. Miller stressed the importance of such organizations as the National Conference of Christians and Jews, where Catholics, Jews and Protestants sit down together to discuss their common problems.

To have peace, the world must have understanding, he said. Understanding, eliminating intolerance and prejudice, will bring about cooperation instead of conflict, he added.

Another speaker was Finley Hendrickson, Cumberland, attorney, who discussed democracy in the United States.

Also on the program were sound motion picture talks by world leaders on the topic, "Peace and Democracy."

Among the points brought out was that democracy was an adjustment between individual rights and social responsibilities.

There is a constant tension between these two principles, with the pendulum now swinging too far in the direction of social responsibilities, one speaker said, with individual rights being placed in the background.

Ideal democracy will bring about a society, he declared, where the individual will voluntarily accept his obligation to society, and society, on the other hand, will recognize and respect individual rights and differences.

Rabbi Aaron H. Lefkowitz was toastmaster and introduced Michael Beerman, president of the Brotherhood, and President Oster of the Duke Memorial Bible Class, members of which were guests at the affair.

About 129 were present.

Sears Employes Honor Assistant Manager, King for a Week

Employes of the Sears Roebuck store gathered last night at the Golden Gate tea room to honor Assistant Manager Ralph Isiminger, their "king for a week" during the absence of Manager John B. Murdock.

C. P. Jolley served as toastmaster at the dinner-meeting and introduced heads of the various departments, who spoke briefly.

Four Men Hunted for Attacks upon Women

Baltimore, Feb. 26 (AP) — Police pressed a search today for four men who assertedly were involved in two separate week-end assault case in the Baltimore vicinity.

An 18-year-old girl told officers she had been criminally assaulted by three bandits who robbed her and an escort, Elmer J. Brown, Jr., 25, as they sat in their car on a sideroad near the city early yesterday.

A Round Bay woman, 55, reported last night a negro forced her to stop her car on Laurel road by standing in the middle of the highway. Then, she related, the man opened the car door and attempted to cover her face with a chloroform-saturated rag.

After struggling for a few minutes another car approached and the negro fled.

Brown told police the three men attacked his companion after forcing her to disrobe under threats of death. The men, all masked, bound and gagged Brown and shoved him into a rear seat of his automobile.

The girl told police she and Brown were to be married March 20. The men took about $2.50 from the couple and drove off in their own car.

Labor Lectures Get Underway

Professor Addresses First Class Here

Cumberland's industrial workers are going to go to college if Dr. Robert T. Kerlin has anything to do with it.

Dr. Kerlin's program to start a labor college in Cumberland officially got underway Sunday when he delivered his first lecture to a large group of workers at Rubber Workers Hall.

"It is idle and it is senseless to talk of 'equal opportunities' where monstrously unequal economic conditions prevail," Dr. Kerlin told his first class Sunday afternoon.

The students, composed of workers from the city's industrial plants, differed somewhat from the ordinary collegians inasmuch as all have been through the toughening-up process of earning a living.

The movement to start a labor college here is being sponsored by the Kelly-Springfield local. But Sunday's class consisted of workers from other plants, including the Celanese. All were union workers with the majority from the CIO affiliated unions and a few from the AFofL.

In his initial lecture, which was a preface to his course scheduled for Saturdays and Sundays on the "Industrial Revolution," Dr. Kerlin touched lightly on the history of his course and outlined his plan for establishing a labor school in Cumberland for workers.

"It is a most complex world," Dr. Kerlin said. "It is a world of fierce competition; it is a world in which tremendous forces are at work and at strife. It is perilous to attempt to live in this world without all the knowledge we can obtain of these forces and conflicts."

In outlining his plan for Cumberland workers, Dr. Kerlin said, "In time we will be chartered as a labor college. Those who take a certain series of courses will receive certificates of which they will be proud. These certificates will be honored throughout the labor movement."

Gets 7 Years for Robbing of Club

Hagerstown, Feb. 26 (AP)—Convicted by a jury of robbing the Moose club here last June 2 of $75, Joseph Mikucki, alias Joe Sharp, was sentenced today to seven years in the Maryland penitentiary by Judge Frank Wagaman.

Mikucki, a native of Erie, Pa., admited a long list of convictions dating back to 1929.

13 Killed in Wreck Of Trains in Mexico

Mexico City, Feb. 26. (AP)—Thirteen persons were killed and thirty-two injured in the collision last night of a freight train and the Mexico City-Juarez express at Las Adjuntas, near Queretaro.

Several United States tourists and three United States consuls were passengers but none was injured.

Preliminary investigations indicated a dispatcher had given both trains the right of way.

County To Remodel Union Street School For Office Use

The board of county commissioners is seeking estimates on the cost of remodeling the abandoned Union Street school to make it suitable for use by various county agencies, President Simeon W. Green said yesterday.

Which agencies will be moved to the building has not yet been decided, Green said.

The remodeling project is expected to cost several thousand dollars. However, the moving of agencies from rented quarters to the county-owned property will effect a considerable saving annually, it was pointed out.

Liberty Theater To Be Rebuilt

Cause of Blaze Still Unknown

The Liberty theater, gutted by fire Sunday afternoon, will be reconstructed as soon as possible, it was announced yesterday by Daniel Burke, assistant manager.

Meanwhile, Fire Chief Reid C. Hoenicka continued an investigation of the fire that routed some 700 persons Sunday and caused damage estimated by Owner Thomas H. Burke at $100,000.

Hoenicka said yesterday he had been unable to discover the cause of the fire which broke out backstage during Sunday afternoon's performance.

Burke announced he carried $70,000 worth of insurance on the building.

Some Officers Taxed, Others Are Not

Annapolis, Feb. 26 (AP)—Maryland may be the Free State, but the Naval Academy grounds are freer—officers living inside the yard are exempt from payment of the new state income tax.

It sounds complicated, but the state comptrollers' office ruled that those living inside are outside the law's reach, and those domiciled outside the grounds are very definitely "in."

Some freak results of the new ruling are: (A) that one officer living outside is "stuck" for the tax, while another of identical rank and duties living inside the walls is exempt; (B) that higher ranking officers, generally quartered in the yard, won't feel the state's hand in their pockets come March 15, but lower-salaried junior officers generally quartered outside must pay.

And officers who moved from outside to inside within the current tax year must pay a part-year tax for the months they lived outside.

Boy, 13, Delayed by Double Movie, So He Swipes Car To Hurry Home

"Sorta hated to do it, but I had to get home, a half-pint, 13-year-old youngster apologetically told officers last night when called upon to explain why he stole an automobile the night of Feb. 10.

The youngster, who weighs ninety-five pounds in his workshoes, hails from the hills near Picardy, Md. Saturday night, Feb. 10, he got spruced up and came to Cumberland. He wanted to go to a double-feature he had been hankering to see.

After sitting through the double-feature, "Flight at Midnight" and "Wyoming Outlaw," the Picardy boy emerged from the theater around midnight and started wondering how he would get home.

He didn't wonder long. He decided he would need a car and started looking for one.

Didn't Need New Car

"I didn't want to take a brand-new one," he explained. "I thought a second-hand car would do just as well."

After examining a number of parked cars, the boy found one on Maryland avenue which he thought would do. He climbed in, started the motor, and whipped out of town.

En route to his home, a jaunt of around twenty-five miles, he got stuck in a ditch and enlisted the aid of a trucker to haul him out. After thanking the driver, he sped on his way once again.

Arriving home, he parked the car about 200 yards up the road from where he lived so his grandfather wouldn't see the automobile and start asking questions.

Abandons Car Near Paw Paw

Meanwhile, the owner of the car, Robert Kasecamp, a Celanese spinner, said goodnight to his girl on Maryland avenue and started to get into his car when he suddenly noticed it wasn't there. He informed police and then went on home to 313 Fifth street.

The next day, the Picardy youth drove the car to Paw Paw, where he abandoned it along the road just this side of the village.

The boy was arrested Sunday night at his home by Lieut. James E. Van, Detective Robert E. Flynn and Officer T. T. Griffin.

The car was recovered by authorities last Sunday, the next day after the robbery.

The youngster readily confessed, the officers said, and is now being held pending a hearing in Juvenile Court.

Frederick Street Pupils Wait for 'Odd Job' Calls

An odd jobs department, to bring together people with miscellaneous work to do and pupils ready to handle any sort of assignment, has been established at Frederick Street high school.

A few of the daily tasks the department will handle are to read to elderly people, care for children, clean yards, tend furnaces, sew, keep house, or assist in entertaining, according to Earle L. Bracey, principal of the school, who invites anyone with an odd job to do to contact him.

Woman Attacked, Purse Stolen

Young Men Escape With $10 Loot

Police reported no developments last night in their search for two purse-snatchers who attacked a young woman returning home from church Sunday night and took her purse, which contained $10.

Miss Henrietta McLaughlin, 23, a saleswoman at a Baltimore street store, told authorities she was attacked about 9:30 p. m. on the Kelly boulevard. Miss McLaughlin lives with her brother-in-law and sister at the Boulevard hotel.

The men, whom she described as tall, first started following her on Green street, Miss McLaughlin said. She quickened her pace, but the men overtook her in a dark spot.

One of them suddenly came up behind her, threw his arm around her neck and held her while his companion jerked the pocketbook from her.

LeCompte Tells How To Scare Away Deer

Baltimore, Feb. 26 (AP)—The tying of bells on apple tree boughs was recommended by the state game warden today to a perplexed orchard owner who declared an invasion of hungry deer had damaged his trees.

"The wind will blow the boughs, ring the bells and frighten the deer away," explained Warden L. Lee LeCompte. "They're shy, those deer. Probably some white streamers tied to the limbs would do the job."

The deer weren't so shy when they got hungry and his tender apple trees appeared palatable, C. L. Robinson wrote LeCompte. He said the deer probably came from the state game refuge adjoining his orchard in Washington county, and he wanted damages.

LeCompte investigated and said "at least a hundred deer had turned the orchard into a temporary dining room.

"But the state isn't liable," he asserted. "Why, if we paid claims like that every garden owner in the state would have us paying for damage rabbits do to their cabbage."

Ten Convicts Will Plead for Freedom

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 26 (AP)—Ten convicts, including Edward Reed, 30, convicted as the leader in a 1934 Montgomery county robbery that almost ended fatally for the victim, will plead for freedom before the state parole director on Wednesday.

In a case described by the prosecution as "one of the most brutal" in the county's history, Reed was charged with robbing John F. Kolar after cutting his throat.

Milburn Reed, another brother, is now serving a ten-year term for armed robbery.

New C.M.T.C. Post Elects Officers

Harold D. Crawford Named President

A Cumberland C.M.T.C. post was organized last night when officers were elected and a committee appointed to find a suitable place for drill sessions between the thirty-day summer camps.

Harold D. Crawford, 250 Columbia street, who was active in starting the organization, was elected president by the twenty boys who attended the meeting at the Central Y.M.C.A. Other officers elected were Harold R. Morgan, 39 Pennsylvania avenue, vice-president; William E. Winters, 305 Paca street, secretary-treasurer; and Richard A. Barley, 630 Elm street, sergeant-at-arms.

The committee, which will report at the next meeting March 11 at the Y at 8 p. m., is composed of Orville J. Miller, 124½ North Centre street, chairman; Lynwood Mortzfeldt, 1503 Bedford street, and Robert Litzenberg, 145 Polk street.

Two Small Children Burn to Death

Frederick, Md., Feb. 26 (AP)—Mrs. Thomas Hanes, an expectant mother, returned from a brief visit to a neighbor's house today and discovered her own home in flames and her two small children burned to death.

Intense heat and leaping flames kept firemen and the parents of the children, Roland, 3, and Barbara, 2, from entering the blazing one-story frame building.

The mother said she had gone to borrow a bucket of water, while her husband was at a nearby store when the fire was discovered.

Both ran to their home and Mrs. Hanes was later taken to the hospital for treatment for shock.

Firemen said the bodies of the children, burned almost beyond recognition, were huddled on the floor.

Taught Public School 59 Years, Dies at 85

Waynesboro, Va., Feb. 26. (AP)—Augustus C. Kimler, 85, a public school teacher for fifty-nine years, died today after a brief illness. He was principal of Waynesboro's schools from 1909 to 1928, and was formerly civil and police justice here.

Funeral services will be held at 3 p. m. tomorrow with burial in River View cemetery.

A son, Richard Kimler of Richmond, survives.

"Professor" Kimler, as he was known to hundreds who sat in his classes during his lengthy teaching career, was born in Smithsburg, Md., May 21, 1854.

He was president for nine years of the Shepherdstown Normal school at Shepherdstown, W. Va. He taught in public schools at Ceredo, Kenova and Charleston, W .Va.

Binds Wife, Turns on Gas, Hangs Himself

Police found the body of Harry Thomas Bates, 50, aviation plant engineer, dangling by a rope from a lighting fixture.

Mrs. Bates said her husband had been despondent for weeks.

She was treated for shock and for effects of gas fumes.

A University of Minnesoto anthropologist asserts that blondes are slowly disappearing in the United States.

on High Roads Low Roads and By-Ways

Among the flowers blooming early this spring, tra la, is Mayor Harry Irvine, who blossomed out yesterday in a smart new topcoat and a becoming gray hat.

—o—

Also blossoming forth, no doubt, is Officer Jim Condon, who sends us a flaming picture postcard describing the dawn in Florida. Officer Jim doesn't mention seeing any sunrises down there yet, however.

—o—

Bill Levings, Romney restaurateur and wit, gets off some pretty good ones in the latest issue of his Green Palm News, which customers are supposed to read while waiting for their orders. "The jawbone of an ass," writes Bill, "is just as dangerous today as it was in Sampson's time."

—o—

Cumberland, unfortunately enough, is not one of those places where you can bask in the summer sun and gaze up at snow-capped mountain peaks. Yesterday, however, there was good skiing at New Germany, which is only thirty miles away, and a big grass fire, of all things on Shriver's hill, overlooking Cumberland.

—o—

We may have a one-track mind on the subject of skiing these days, but our friend "Buck" Dreyer is even worse. All he wants to talk about is the bathing beauty contest he is going to put on July 21 at Deep Creek lake.

Our monomania is seasonal, at least, whereas Buck is talking about his bathing beauties before the moths have even started in on last summer's swim suits—if good healthy moths are still interested in anything so scanty as a modern bathing suit.

Buck's latest is his new stationery, which just came from the printer's yesterday. Across the top of each sheet are blue headlines announcing the "Third Great Annual Bathing Beauty Contest, Boat Regatta and Water Carnival."

At the left is Buck's picture, printed in blue. Running the full length of the sheet and right down the middle is a luscious picture of one of last year's contestants, printed in red. We imagine that anyone writing a letter on this stationery would feel like something of a tatoo artist, at least at first.

Buck's chief worry, it seems, is where to find parking room for all the visitors. He says he has arranged the date so that nearby farmers will have had their hay cut to make room for the gas buggies. That, we say, is really thinking things out ahead of time.

Meanwhile, the United States weather bureau in Baltimore seems to have gone fatalistic on us. The summary of what may or may not be expected from the skies ends up with: "The USUAL light snow is indicated for extreme Western Maryland Tuesday."

If Cumberland had to have a theater fire at this time, it would have been much better if it had broken out while they were burning Atlanta in "Gone with the Wind."

Even a Hollywood press agent couldn't have cooked up a better story than that.

Jackson Refuses To Advise Labor Board

Washington, Feb. 26 (AP)—Citing precedent, Attorney General Jackson refused today to advise a House Committee whether the National Labor Relations board had violated a law designed to prevent legislative lobbying by federal agencies.

The House committee investigating the board asked Jackson for the opinion after it received evidence purporting to show that for several years board officials sought to organize opposition to a series of amendments to the Wagner Act which they administer.

Jackson wrote a letter to Chairman Smith (D-Va) in which he said that he 'could not with propriety" grant the committee's request.

"Almost from the beginning of the government, my predecessors have, with great unanimity, taken the position that the statutes prescribing the duties of the attorney general do not authorize him to render opinions to the congress or to its committees or members," Jackson wrote.

Campaign Opens For Housing Project Here

Labor Unions Take Lead in Seeking Federal Aid

John T. Jones, president of District 16, United Mine Workers of America, is actively engaged in a program to stimulate interest in federal housing program for Allegany county.

Mayor Harry Irvine and the members of city council yesterday expressed their willingness to participate in a discussion of the matter after receiving a letter from Jones.

"For many months past the local unions in Allegany county have been making efforts to have the U. S. Housing Authority initiate a local housing program such as in Baltimore, Annapolis, Frederick and other cities," Jones wrote.

"The benefits of such a program to the working people and their families is of such importance that we wish every effort to be put forth in order to have action started," the letter continued.

"I have been informed by Senator George L. Radcliffe that there is every possibility of getting action on this matter if there are sufficiently large numbers of people interested in calling for it in the county. The senator suggests that a meeting of prominent and interested individuals be called here for making such an effort.

Mayor Irvine was given consent by the council to take part in the meeting to discuss the plan. Jones urged that plans be made to hold the discussion in the immediate future.

Taxpayers Again Demand Report On City Finances

Say Information Promised by Council Is Long Overdue

The Allegany County Taxpayers Research Association last night moved to request a complete financial statement on the City of Cumberland as of Jan. 1.

Meeting at the Central YMCA the association members recalled that the mayor and city council had promised the group such a statement early in the year. Such a statement has not as yet been received.

George Henderson then moved that the group go on record as requesting such a statement from the Mayor and City Council and that the city have the statement drawn up as soon as possible. The motion was seconded by James Alfred Avirett and was unanimously carried.

Frank Smith, chairman, presided at last night's meeting, which was attended by a large representative group. Comments on the increase in taxation and the prospect of further increases were made by Henderson, William H. Jenkins, I. H. Bone, Thomas L. Pope, Jonathan Sleeman, and James Alfred Avirett.

The group also heard a report on the success of similar tax research organizations in New York, Ohio, Indiana, and Nebraska.

Convict Uplinger Denied Freedom

His Prosecutor Sits as Judge

Associate Judge William A. Huster yesterday denied the plea for freedom of 33-year-old Ralph Uplinger, who was convicted of robbery in April, 1936, while Huster was serving as state's attorney.

Judge Huster listened patiently while Uplinger, acting as his own attorney, outlined the reasons why he thought he should be released from the Maryland Penal Farm, where he is serving a 10-year sentence.

Chief point made by Uplinger was that his commitment was improperly drawn in that the name of the sentencing judge, the late David A. Robb, was not affixed to the papers.

His contention was that his application for a parole did not get consideration because of the omission.

Omission Not Important

Judge Huster explained that the judge's name did not render the commitment void, nor would it have any effect in parole proceedings. Omission of the name was in line with court practice at the time, but the name will be supplied to the Parole Commission on request, he said.

Uplinger also attacked the validity of the indictment, which he said charged him with "armed robbery" although no firearms were involved in the burglary of the American store on Greene street, for which he was convicted.

The term, "with force and arms," in an indictment does not necessarily mean firearms, Judge Huster pointed out.

Threats Also at Issue

The convict advanced still another argument, claiming that Judge Robb said in passing sentence that he was imposing the stiff term not only for the robbery, but also for threats made against State's Attorney Huster.

Judge Huster noted, however, that these comments were not in the record and added that he saw no reason to overturn Judge Robb's sentence.

Uplinger's petition for a writ of habeas corpus failed to present any "valid or legal reason" for his release, Judge Huster concluded as he remanded him to the custody of the two penal farm guards who brought his here.

Arriving after the hearing was over, Uplinger's mother sobbed as her son embraced her and told her that his plea for freedom had been denied.

NYA Project Planned At County Home

Plans are under way for an NYA project to provide four unemployed youths with jobs as orderlies at the county home, it was learned yesterday.

The board of county commissioners has agreed to sponsor the project.

Births

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Hott, of Arthur, W. Va., announce the birth of a daughter Sunday night at Memorial hospital.

New Voting Precincts Demanded in County

Council Votes $50 To Help Finns

Mayor Harry Irvine and the members of city council yesterday voted to donate $50 to help the fighting Finns in their grim war against Communist Russia.

The mayor and council moved to make the donation following receipt of a request for help for the Finns from the committee operating under former President Herbert Hoover.

The money will be taken from the movie tax fund and paid to the Times-News newspapers, which are receiving contributions for the Finn cause.

County officials, confronted on one hand by proposals to install voting machines and thereby cut down on the number of election workers, are now being faced by other demands for an increased number of precincts and thus more election workers and election expense than ever before.

The board of election supervisors is expected to act this week on the new demands, which call for splitting up several precincts.

One Demand from Ellerslie

One of the proposed changes would set up a new precinct at Ellerslie, whose residents have been voting at Corriganville. Corriganville would still comprise a precinct under the contemplated change.

Ellerslie residents backing the establishment of the new precinct claim it is inconvenient to go to Corriganville to cast their ballots.

Setting up of this new precinct, if approved, will probably be done in time for the primary, it was indicated. The other two or three changes, the location of which could not be immediately learned, will probably not be made until the general election. Reason for these other changes is said to be overcrowding of present precincts.

More Money Needed

Although the election board has authority to make the changes, it must obtain additional funds from the county commissioners, since no provision is made for additional expenses the changes will entail.

Six election officials serve at each precinct—two judges and four clerks, comprising three Republicans and three Democrats.

Meanwhile, no action has been taken, so far as could be learned, on the proposal to install voting machines—at least on a trial basis.

Representatives of a voting machine concern have a machine on display at the courthouse and have furnished the county commissioners with an itemized statement showing savings that they say could be effected by installation of the machines.

Good-Will Dinner Attended by 120

Understanding Called Necessary for Peace

The necessity of putting the movement for peace and democracy on a religious basis was stressed in a discussion last night at the second annual good-will dinner sponsored by the Brotherhood of B'er Chayim Temple.

Principal speaker at the dinner meeting, held at the Fort Cumberland hotel was the Rev. Theodore E. Miller, Baptist minister and secretary of the Baltimore Round Table of the National Conference of Christians and Jews.

Mr. Miller stressed the importance of such organizations as the National Conference of Christians and Jews, where Catholics, Jews and Protestants sit down together to discuss their common problems.

To have peace, the world must have understanding, he said. Understanding, eliminating intolerance and prejudice, will bring about cooperation instead of conflict, he added.

Another speaker was Finley Hendrickson, Cumberland, attorney, who discussed democracy in the United States.

Also on the program were sound motion picture talks by world leaders on the topic, "Peace and Democracy."

Among the points brought out was that democracy was an adjustment between individual rights and social responsibilities.

There is a constant tension between these two principles, with the pendulum now swinging too far in the direction of social responsibilities, one speaker said, with individual rights being placed in the background.

Ideal democracy will bring about a society, he declared, where the individual will voluntarily accept his obligation to society, and society, on the other hand, will recognize and respect individual rights and differences.

Rabbi Aaron H. Lefkowitz was toastmaster and introduced Michael Beerman, president of the Brotherhood, and President Oster of the Duke Memorial Bible Class, members of which were guests at the affair.

About 129 were present.

Sears Employes Honor Assistant Manager, King for a Week

Members of the staff present signed a message of condolence to be sent to John M. Cornall, of 775 McDonald Terrace, a salesman in the radio department, who is seriously ill.

Four Men Hunted for Attacks upon Women

Baltimore, Feb. 26 (AP) — Police pressed a search today for four men who assertedly were involved in two separate week-end assault case in the Baltimore vicinity.

An 18-year-old girl told officers she had been criminally assaulted by three bandits who robbed her and an escort, Elmer J. Brown, Jr., 25, as they sat in their car on a sideroad near the city early yesterday.

A Round Bay woman, 55, reported last night a negro forced her to stop her car on Laurel road by standing in the middle of the highway. Then, she related, the man opened the car door and attempted to cover her face with a chloroform-saturated rag.

After struggling for a few minutes another car approached and the negro fled.

Brown told police the three men attacked his companion after forcing her to disrobe under threats of death. The men, all masked, bound and gagged Brown and shoved him into a rear seat of his automobile.

The girl told police she and Brown were to be married March 20. The men took about $2.50 from the couple and drove off in their own car.

Labor Lectures Get Underway

Professor Addresses First Class Here

Cumberland's industrial workers are going to go to college if Dr. Robert T. Kerlin has anything to do with it.

Dr. Kerlin's program to start a labor college in Cumberland officially got underway Sunday when he delivered his first lecture to a large group of workers at Rubber Workers Hall.

"It is idle and it is senseless to talk of 'equal opportunities' where monstrously unequal economic conditions prevail," Dr. Kerlin told his first class Sunday afternoon.

The students, composed of workers from the city's industrial plants, differed somewhat from the ordinary collegians inasmuch as all have been through the toughening-up process of earning a living.

The movement to start a labor college here is being sponsored by the Kelly-Springfield local. But Sunday's class consisted of workers from other plants, including the Celanese. All were union workers with the majority from the CIO affiliated unions and a few from the AFofL.

In his initial lecture, which was a preface to his course scheduled for Saturdays and Sundays on the "Industrial Revolution," Dr. Kerlin touched lightly on the history of his course and outlined his plan for establishing a labor school in Cumberland for workers.

"It is a most complex world," Dr. Kerlin said. "It is a world of fierce competition; it is a world in which tremendous forces are at work and at strife. It is perilous to attempt to live in this world without all the knowledge we can obtain of these forces and conflicts."

In outlining his plan for Cumberland workers, Dr. Kerlin said, "In time we will be chartered as a labor college. Those who take a certain series of courses will receive certificates of which they will be proud. These certificates will be honored throughout the labor movement."

Mikucki was alleged to have slugged Lloyd Eichelberger, night watchman at the club, ransacked the cash register and broke into a safe.

Preliminary investigations indicated a dispatcher had given both trains the right of way.

County To Remodel Union Street School For Office Use

The board of county commissioners is seeking estimates on the cost of remodeling the abandoned Union Street school to make it suitable for use by various county agencies, President Simeon W. Green said yesterday.

Which agencies will be moved to the building has not yet been decided, Green said.

The remodeling project is expected to cost several thousand dollars. However, the moving of agencies from rented quarters to the county-owned property will effect a considerable saving annually, it was pointed out.

Liberty Theater To Be Rebuilt

Cause of Blaze Still Unknown

The Liberty theater, gutted by fire Sunday afternoon, will be reconstructed as soon as possible, it was announced yesterday by Daniel Burke, assistant manager.

Meanwhile, Fire Chief Reid C. Hoenicka continued an investigation of the fire that routed some 700 persons Sunday and caused damage estimated by Owner Thomas H. Burke at $100,000.

Hoenicka said yesterday he had been unable to discover the cause of the fire which broke out backstage during Sunday afternoon's performance.

Burke announced he carried $70,000 worth of insurance on the building.

Some Officers Taxed, Others Are Not

Annapolis, Feb. 26 (AP)—Maryland may be the Free State, but the Naval Academy grounds are freer—officers living inside the yard are exempt from payment of the new state income tax.

It sounds complicated, but the state comptrollers' office ruled that those living inside are outside the law's reach, and those domiciled outside the grounds are very definitely "in."

Some freak results of the new ruling are: (A) that one officer living outside is "stuck" for the tax, while another of identical rank and duties living inside the walls is exempt; (B) that higher ranking officers, generally quartered in the yard, won't feel the state's hand in their pockets come March 15, but lower-salaried junior officers generally quartered outside must pay.

And officers who moved from outside to inside within the current tax year must pay a part-year tax for the months they lived outside.

Boy, 13, Delayed by Double Movie, So He Swipes Car To Hurry Home

"Sorta hated to do it, but I had to get home, a half-pint, 13-year-old youngster apologetically told officers last night when called upon to explain why he stole an automobile the night of Feb. 10.

The youngster, who weighs ninety-five pounds in his workshoes, hails from the hills near Picardy, Md. Saturday night, Feb. 10, he got spruced up and came to Cumberland. He wanted to go to a double-feature he had been hankering to see.

After sitting through the double-feature, "Flight at Midnight" and "Wyoming Outlaw," the Picardy boy emerged from the theater around midnight and started wondering how he would get home.

He didn't wonder long. He decided he would need a car and started looking for one.

Didn't Need New Car

"I didn't want to take a brand-new one," he explained. "I thought a second-hand car would do just as well."

After examining a number of parked cars, the boy found one on Maryland avenue which he thought would do. He climbed in, started the motor, and whipped out of town.

En route to his home, a jaunt of around twenty-five miles, he got stuck in a ditch and enlisted the aid of a trucker to haul him out. After thanking the driver, he sped on his way once again.

Arriving home, he parked the car about 200 yards up the road from where he lived so his grandfather wouldn't see the automobile and start asking questions.

Abandons Car Near Paw Paw

Meanwhile, the owner of the car, Robert Kasecamp, a Celanese spinner, said goodnight to his girl on Maryland avenue and started to get into his car when he suddenly noticed it wasn't there. He informed police and then went on home to 313 Fifth street.

The next day, the Picardy youth drove the car to Paw Paw, where he abandoned it along the road just this side of the village.

The boy was arrested Sunday night at his home by Lieut. James E. Van, Detective Robert E. Flynn and Officer T. T. Griffin.

The car was recovered by authorities last Sunday, the next day after the robbery.

The youngster readily confessed, the officers said, and is now being held pending a hearing in Juvenile Court.

Frederick Street Pupils Wait for 'Odd Job' Calls

An odd jobs department, to bring together people with miscellaneous work to do and pupils ready to handle any sort of assignment, has been established at Frederick Street high school.

A few of the daily tasks the department will handle are to read to elderly people, care for children, clean yards, tend furnaces, sew, keep house, or assist in entertaining, according to Earle L. Bracey, principal of the school, who invites anyone with an odd job to do to contact him.

Woman Attacked, Purse Stolen

Young Men Escape With $10 Loot

Police reported no developments last night in their search for two purse-snatchers who attacked a young woman returning home from church Sunday night and took her purse, which contained $10.

Miss Henrietta McLaughlin, 23, a saleswoman at a Baltimore street store, told authorities she was attacked about 9:30 p. m. on the Kelly boulevard. Miss McLaughlin lives with her brother-in-law and sister at the Boulevard hotel.

The men, whom she described as tall, first started following her on Green street, Miss McLaughlin said. She quickened her pace, but the men overtook her in a dark spot.

LeCompte Tells How To Scare Away Deer

Baltimore, Feb. 26 (AP)—The tying of bells on apple tree boughs was recommended by the state game warden today to a perplexed orchard owner who declared an invasion of hungry deer had damaged his trees.

"The wind will blow the boughs, ring the bells and frighten the deer away," explained Warden L. Lee LeCompte. "They're shy, those deer. Probably some white streamers tied to the limbs would do the job."

The deer weren't so shy when they got hungry and his tender apple trees appeared palatable, C. L. Robinson wrote LeCompte. He said the deer probably came from the state game refuge adjoining his orchard in Washington county, and he wanted damages.

LeCompte investigated and said "at least a hundred deer had turned the orchard into a temporary dining room.

"But the state isn't liable," he asserted. "Why, if we paid claims like that every garden owner in the state would have us paying for damage rabbits do to their cabbage."

Ten Convicts Will Plead for Freedom

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 26 (AP)—Ten convicts, including Edward Reed, 30, convicted as the leader in a 1934 Montgomery county robbery that almost ended fatally for the victim, will plead for freedom before the state parole director on Wednesday.

In a case described by the prosecution as "one of the most brutal" in the county's history, Reed was charged with robbing John F. Kolar after cutting his throat.

William Reed, Edward's brother, sought for the killing of Elwood Matthews, a witness in the Kolar case, was later hanged in West Virginia for another slaying.

Milburn Reed, another brother, is now serving a ten-year term for armed robbery.

They will work with Major John W. Fisher, Lieut. Martin B. Sharp, and Lieut. James C. Duff from the Western Maryland Chapter of the Reserve Officers' Association, sponsors of the post, to find a suitable place for the members to keep up their military knowledge during the winter.

Two Small Children Burn to Death

Frederick, Md., Feb. 26 (AP)—Mrs. Thomas Hanes, an expectant mother, returned from a brief visit to a neighbor's house today and discovered her own home in flames and her two small children burned to death.

Intense heat and leaping flames kept firemen and the parents of the children, Roland, 3, and Barbara, 2, from entering the blazing one-story frame building.

The mother said she had gone to borrow a bucket of water, while her husband was at a nearby store when the fire was discovered.

Both ran to their home and Mrs. Hanes was later taken to the hospital for treatment for shock.

Firemen said the bodies of the children, burned almost beyond recognition, were huddled on the floor.

Taught Public School 59 Years, Dies at 85

Waynesboro, Va., Feb. 26. (AP)—Augustus C. Kimler, 85, a public school teacher for fifty-nine years, died today after a brief illness. He was principal of Waynesboro's schools from 1909 to 1928, and was formerly civil and police justice here.

Funeral services will be held at 3 p. m. tomorrow with burial in River View cemetery.

A son, Richard Kimler of Richmond, survives.

"Professor" Kimler, as he was known to hundreds who sat in his classes during his lengthy teaching career, was born in Smithsburg, Md., May 21, 1854.

He was president for nine years of the Shepherdstown Normal school at Shepherdstown, W. Va. He taught in public schools at Ceredo, Kenova and Charleston, W. Va.

Binds Wife, Turns on Gas, Hangs Himself

Hermosa Beach, Calif., Feb. 26 (AP)—Mrs. Alice Bates rushed screaming from her home today, crying that her husband had bound her to a chair in a gas-filled room and then hanged himself before her.

Police found the body of Harry Thomas Bates, 50, aviation plant engineer, dangling by a rope from a lighting fixture.

Mrs. Bates said her husband had been despondent for weeks.

She was treated for shock and for effects of gas fumes.

A University of Minnesoto anthropologist asserts that blondes are slowly disappearing in the United States.

on High Roads Low Roads and By-Ways

Among the flowers blooming early this spring, tra la, is Mayor Harry Irvine, who blossomed out yesterday in a smart new topcoat and a becoming gray hat.

—o—

Also blossoming forth, no doubt, is Officer Jim Condon, who sends us a flaming picture postcard describing the dawn in Florida. Officer Jim doesn't mention seeing any sunrises down there yet, however.

—o—

Bill Levings, Romney restaurateur and wit, gets off some pretty good ones in the latest issue of his Green Palm News, which customers are supposed to read while waiting for their orders. "The jawbone of an ass," writes Bill, "is just as dangerous today as it was in Sampson's time."

—o—

Cumberland, unfortunately enough, is not one of those places where you can bask in the summer sun and gaze up at snow-capped mountain peaks. Yesterday, however, there was good skiing at New Germany, which is only thirty miles away, and a big grass fire, of all things on Shriver's hill, overlooking Cumberland.

—o—

We may have a one-track mind on the subject of skiing these days, but our friend "Buck" Dreyer is even worse. All he wants to talk about is the bathing beauty contest he is going to put on July 21 at Deep Creek lake.

Our monomania is seasonal, at least, whereas Buck is talking about his bathing beauties before the moths have even started in on last summer's swim suits—if good healthy moths are still interested in anything so scanty as a modern bathing suit.

Buck's latest is his new stationery, which just came from the printer's yesterday. Across the top of each sheet are blue headlines announcing the "Third Great Annual Bathing Beauty Contest, Boat Regatta and Water Carnival."

At the left is Buck's picture, printed in blue. Running the full length of the sheet and right down the middle is a luscious picture of one of last year's contestants, printed in red. We imagine that anyone writing a letter on this stationery would feel like something of a tatoo artist, at least at first.

Buck's chief worry, it seems, is where to find parking room for all the visitors. He says he has arranged the date so that nearby farmers will have had their hay cut to make room for the gas buggies. That, we say, is really thinking things out ahead of time.

Meanwhile, the United States weather bureau in Baltimore seems to have gone fatalistic on us. The summary of what may or may not be expected from the skies ends up with: "The USUAL light snow is indicated for extreme Western Maryland Tuesday."

If Cumberland had to have a theater fire at this time, it would have been much better if it had broken out while they were burning Atlanta in "Gone with the Wind."

Even a Hollywood press agent couldn't have cooked up a better story than that.

Jackson Refuses To Advise Labor Board

Washington, Feb. 26 (AP)—Citing precedent, Attorney General Jackson refused today to advise a House Committee whether the National Labor Relations board had violated a law designed to prevent legislative lobbying by federal agencies.

The House committee investigating the board asked Jackson for the opinion after it received evidence purporting to show that for several years board officials sought to organize opposition to a series of amendments to the Wagner Act which they administer.

Jackson wrote a letter to Chairman Smith (D-Va) in which he said that he 'could not with propriety" grant the committee's request.

"Almost from the beginning of the government, my predecessors have, with great unanimity, taken the position that the statutes prescribing the duties of the attorney general do not authorize him to render opinions to the congress or to its committees or members," Jackson wrote.

Campaign Opens For Housing Project Here

Labor Unions Take Lead in Seeking Federal Aid

John T. Jones, president of District 16, United Mine Workers of America, is actively engaged in a program to stimulate interest in federal housing program for Allegany county.

Mayor Harry Irvine and the members of city council yesterday expressed their willingness to participate in a discussion of the matter after receiving a letter from Jones.

"For many months past the local unions in Allegany county have been making efforts to have the U. S. Housing Authority initiate a local housing program such as in Baltimore, Annapolis, Frederick and other cities," Jones wrote.

"The benefits of such a program to the working people and their families is of such importance that we wish every effort to be put forth in order to have action started," the letter continued.

"I have been informed by Senator George L. Radcliffe that there is every possibility of getting action on this matter if there are sufficiently large numbers of people interested in calling for it in the county. The senator suggests that a meeting of prominent and interested individuals be called here for making such an effort.

Mayor Irvine was given consent by the council to take part in the meeting to discuss the plan. Jones urged that plans be made to hold the discussion in the immediate future.
